Long As You’re Living

Collected Poems

Robert Ronnow
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Titles</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Janie Huzzie Bows</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mirrors</td>
<td>13</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>This looks like jump to me</td>
<td>14</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Janie Huzzie Bows</td>
<td>15</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Listener</td>
<td>16</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Something</td>
<td>17</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Zach Sklar’s Dream</td>
<td>18</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Peter has gotten a new job</td>
<td>19</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Earth</td>
<td>20</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A Yellow Rose</td>
<td>21</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Night</td>
<td>22</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Absolutely Smooth Mustard</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I prefer to sleep and dream</td>
<td>24</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Not enough heat</td>
<td>25</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Almost Spring</td>
<td>26</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Chinese Sonnets</td>
<td>27</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>South Bronx</td>
<td>30</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>For Spring No Hesitation Is Great</td>
<td>31</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>How cool!</td>
<td>32</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Change</td>
<td>33</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Material Life</td>
<td>36</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>This World of Dew</td>
<td>38</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Peaches</td>
<td>38</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>To Eat a Continent Is Not So Strange</td>
<td>40</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Searching for Symbols in a Town Without a River</td>
<td>41</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Penetrating the Unknown</td>
<td>42</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Morning Chores</td>
<td>43</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Rain</td>
<td>44</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>White Waits</td>
<td>45</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>In a Day</td>
<td>46</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Absolutely Smooth Mustard</td>
<td>46</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Dark Green Conifers</td>
<td>47</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Snake Creek</td>
<td>48</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Titles</td>
<td>Page</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>--------------------------------------------------------------</td>
<td>------</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Brother Death</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Take the Ripe Plum</td>
<td>50</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Monk's shaved pate</td>
<td>53</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bone Music</td>
<td>54</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sunset</td>
<td>56</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Polar Bear Mugs Wino</td>
<td>57</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Alive</td>
<td>59</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>No cows to look at</td>
<td>60</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Crows, bluejays and pigeons</td>
<td>61</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>East Harlem to the Grand Tetons</td>
<td>62</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Jet, cracked paint, tea</td>
<td>62</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Working to Abandon Immortality</td>
<td>63</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Is It Stress?</td>
<td>65</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Shootist</td>
<td>66</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Brother Death</td>
<td>67</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>To Have Loved Mary</td>
<td>68</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Chambermaid with Ravens</td>
<td>68</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Plate Tectonics Versus Gamma Ray Bursters</td>
<td>69</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Under-sky sleeping, bone keeping</td>
<td>70</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Under Mummy Mountain</td>
<td>71</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Terminator</td>
<td>72</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cities in Flight</td>
<td>74</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Upside Down the Ancient Bole</td>
<td>76</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Silence of Winter</td>
<td>77</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Late Summer</td>
<td>78</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Pokeweed Waits</td>
<td>79</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cosmo's Moon</td>
<td>80</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Blackbrush</td>
<td>81</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Grand Canyon</td>
<td>83</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Rwandan dead</td>
<td>84</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>What Have I Seen?</td>
<td>85</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Night Drive Home</td>
<td>89</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bad Movie</td>
<td>90</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>New Mind</td>
<td>91</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sub-atomic particles</td>
<td>92</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Titles</td>
<td>Page</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>--------------------------------------</td>
<td>------</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Jones’ Nose</td>
<td>94</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>October Sky</td>
<td>95</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Engineers</td>
<td>96</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Let’s Work the Problem</td>
<td>97</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>To Go On</td>
<td>98</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Black-capped Chickadees</td>
<td>99</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>To Fail Well</td>
<td>100</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Certain Days</td>
<td>100</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Belonging to the Loved Ones</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>To the Gods</td>
<td>102</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Family of Weasels</td>
<td>103</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ulzana’s Raid</td>
<td>104</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The snail will get to Easter just as soon</td>
<td>106</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Occupied</td>
<td>108</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Avoiding Beautiful September</td>
<td>109</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Recent and Long Dead</td>
<td>110</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Much Like Living</td>
<td>111</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A Designer of Systems</td>
<td>112</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Birding by Ear</td>
<td>114</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Stay together. Learn the flowers. Go light.</td>
<td>115</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Eastern tent caterpillars</td>
<td>117</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>America the seeing-eye dog</td>
<td>118</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Courage</td>
<td>120</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Providence</td>
<td>121</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>At Basketball</td>
<td>122</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Home Schooling</td>
<td>123</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The End of Faith</td>
<td>124</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Of Judith and Inanna</td>
<td>125</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Caterpillar fur</td>
<td>126</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Infestation</td>
<td>127</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Two Hawks Aloft</td>
<td>128</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>All Soft Feathers and Flight Muscles</td>
<td>129</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The seasons inure us to loss</td>
<td>130</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Perfect Year</td>
<td>131</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Titles</td>
<td>Page</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>------------------------------------------------------------</td>
<td>------</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>God is correction, feedback and bifurcation</td>
<td>132</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Organization man</td>
<td>133</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Toy story</td>
<td>134</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Until the fight is done</td>
<td>135</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Operational Culture for the Warfighter</td>
<td>137</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Rereading</td>
<td>138</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fear and Awe</td>
<td>139</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Belonging to the Loved Ones</td>
<td>140</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Summer Noosphere</td>
<td>141</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Two White Wines</td>
<td>142</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Miniature Juniper</td>
<td>143</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Okay Love</td>
<td>144</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Election Day</td>
<td>145</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Troy and Trinity</td>
<td>147</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dendrology</td>
<td>149</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Life is not a curse</td>
<td>150</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Canopy and Economy</td>
<td>151</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Love and Death and Governance</td>
<td>155</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Just Us</td>
<td>160</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Born Again</td>
<td>160</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Can poetry matter</td>
<td>162</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Wetland Song</td>
<td>163</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Communicating the Bird</th>
<th></th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>While Sleeping</td>
<td>165</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Self</td>
<td>165</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Who should I thank?</td>
<td>166</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ectopic Heart</td>
<td>167</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Eye of the tropical January sun</td>
<td>168</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>We like trees</td>
<td>170</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Man’s Mood</td>
<td>171</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Marines Call to Say Hello</td>
<td>172</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Snow. . .</td>
<td>174</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Rhodora in Winter</td>
<td>174</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Words for Birds</td>
<td>175</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Enduring Spinning: Agriculture, Culture and War 176
The Ordinary Care of Providence 178
The Burning of the Jews 181
Lawn Party 182
Communicating the Bird 183
The Writer Working Hard 185
Negotiation 186
The Art of Appreciating Snow 187
Prose 187
Dad’s Bark 193
Lazy, Happy 194
When Peg Laughs Like Liz 195
Geese in Winter 196
Year Million 197
Enemies 198
Cameron Diaz 199
A Gun In Every Home 202
Perfect Rest 204
Meditation 205
Reverse Gestation 206
Man’s Machines 207
Peace Out 208
Injury 209
Immigration 211
Oh Pilot Me 212
Anyone who wants to fight me all the time 213
Ricardo’s Lunch 215
Yogurt and Honey 216
The Invention of Zero 217
Nature’s Intelligent Partner 219
Number and Verse 220
Outside the Circle 230
Not like a figwort 230
Shape of the Institution 232
Adnate to the Funicle 233
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Titles</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>The Happy Tectonics</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Scariest Stanza in All of Poetry</td>
<td>235</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Defiance</td>
<td>236</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Uncertainty</td>
<td>237</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Happy Tectonics</td>
<td>239</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mom’s Eulogy</td>
<td>241</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Wings of Desire</td>
<td>242</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>This Summer, As Ever</td>
<td>243</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cleaning Out Their House</td>
<td>244</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Watching Homer Struggle</td>
<td>245</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>f(x)</td>
<td>247</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Real Turtle Soup</td>
<td>248</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nineteen Minutes to Bedtime</td>
<td>249</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Popper v. Niebuhr</td>
<td>250</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The World Without the Self</td>
<td>253</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Shade</td>
<td>254</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The force that placed us here cannot be trusted</td>
<td>256</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Supermarket Celebration</td>
<td>257</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Morsel of Biomass</td>
<td>258</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Electron Herders</td>
<td>258</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Aaron’s Coconut</td>
<td>260</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Either Way</td>
<td>260</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Derivatives With Limits</td>
<td>262</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A Job in the Garden of Eden</td>
<td>264</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mortal Poets</td>
<td>265</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Words/Day</td>
<td>266</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>By the Seat of the Soul’s Pants</td>
<td>267</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Urination, don’t take it for granted</td>
<td>268</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fundamental Physics</td>
<td>269</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>blueberries</td>
<td>272</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Jack’s Commitments</td>
<td>273</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Problems</td>
<td>274</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Get the Most Out of Life of Pi</td>
<td>275</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Anomie</td>
<td>276</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Title</td>
<td>Page</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>------------------------------------------------------------</td>
<td>------</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Max Joy Marries Minnie Pain</td>
<td>278</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>World Order</td>
<td>279</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Wound That Never Heals</td>
<td>280</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Good at Marketing</td>
<td>283</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>All the Worlds There Are</td>
<td>285</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Purposes Incomprehensible and Wonderful as These Purposes</td>
<td>288</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Brodmann Area 4</td>
<td>289</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Erythrocyte Sedimentation Rate</td>
<td>290</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Robot-Assisted Surgery</td>
<td>290</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cast a cold eye and wait</td>
<td>292</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Scientific Way To Do Mathematics</td>
<td>293</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Long As You’re Living</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Long As You’re Living</td>
<td>295</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Exponential Decay Function</td>
<td>296</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Aging as a Spiritual Practice</td>
<td>297</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Antifragility</td>
<td>299</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Out of Emptiness</td>
<td>301</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Master Algorithm</td>
<td>303</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>In the Singularity</td>
<td>305</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Netflix, Hulu</td>
<td>306</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Blue Grama Grass</td>
<td>308</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Homework</td>
<td>309</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I can clean. I can drive.</td>
<td>310</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Jack’s Time Out</td>
<td>313</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Insignificance</td>
<td>314</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Motel Room</td>
<td>315</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Numerous Blue Notes</td>
<td>316</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Lonely Bagel</td>
<td>316</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>City of Hope</td>
<td>317</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Chainsaw Certified</td>
<td>319</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Shape of Jazz to Come</td>
<td>320</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Rules for Old Men Waiting</td>
<td>321</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Titles</td>
<td>Page</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>----------------------------------------------------------</td>
<td>------</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>On Suffering</td>
<td>322</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>TED Talk</td>
<td>324</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Upper Manhattan Medical Group</td>
<td>325</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>It’s A Bear!</td>
<td>326</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Atman. Atman.</td>
<td>327</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Passion Is Its Own Predicament</td>
<td>328</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Soot</td>
<td>330</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>My Giant</td>
<td>331</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Asexual</td>
<td>332</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Valetudinarian</td>
<td>333</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Contingency</td>
<td>334</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Stop &amp; Shop Strike</td>
<td>335</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Got Sleep?</td>
<td>337</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Who’s Got Trouble?</td>
<td>338</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2 Jobs, 2 Kids, 2 Houses, 2 Hobbies</td>
<td>340</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Start Knowing Joy</td>
<td>342</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Covid Cashier</td>
<td>343</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>On the Avenue</td>
<td>344</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Compensatory Force of Nemesis</td>
<td>345</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Long Story Short</td>
<td>346</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Middle School Math Teacher</td>
<td>347</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Commonly Seen Bumper Stickers</td>
<td>348</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Million Dollar Movie</td>
<td>349</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Life Out of Balance</td>
<td>350</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Building Fence</td>
<td>351</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Come What May</td>
<td>351</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>At a Party</td>
<td>352</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A Good Day to Die</td>
<td>353</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>New Haven Terminal</td>
<td>354</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Eronel</td>
<td>355</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>That Was Random</td>
<td>356</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tweets</td>
<td>361</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ohthere</td>
<td>362</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Titles</td>
<td>Page</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>-----------------------------------------------------------------------</td>
<td>------</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Imaginary i</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Pity of Things</td>
<td>369</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Desafinado</td>
<td>369</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Seaweed</td>
<td>370</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Data Delivered to Your Inbox</td>
<td>371</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nicky’s Road Kill</td>
<td>373</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Types of Joy</td>
<td>374</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Gotta Go</td>
<td>374</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Colonoscopy</td>
<td>376</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Quiet</td>
<td>377</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Samsara</td>
<td>378</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Return from Desert</td>
<td>378</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Extraterrestrial Dust Community</td>
<td>379</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>If Not One Way, Then Another</td>
<td>380</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>More Birds! More Bees!</td>
<td>380</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Subs v. Dubs</td>
<td>382</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Make War, With Love</td>
<td>382</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Poets Just Wanna Have Fun</td>
<td>383</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Roar of Tinnitus</td>
<td>384</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Jack in His Boxers</td>
<td>385</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Why Write?</td>
<td>386</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Jump the Life to Come</td>
<td>387</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Helterskelter Huggermugger Heebiejeebies</td>
<td>388</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Imaginary i</td>
<td>390</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Pirouettes at the Periapsis of Perseverance</td>
<td>392</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mission STS-51-L</td>
<td>393</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mariupol</td>
<td>393</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Earplugs</td>
<td>394</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Eidolan. Penumbra.</td>
<td>396</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Juniper. Quince.</td>
<td>397</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Entropy. Quiddity.</td>
<td>398</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Flying. Beeing.</td>
<td>398</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Resistance. Momentum.</td>
<td>399</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fenderbender. Bumpersticker.</td>
<td>399</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Living. Obsessing.</td>
<td>400</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Titles</td>
<td>Page</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>------------------------------------</td>
<td>------</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ukrainians Are Not Russians</td>
<td>407</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sump Pump</td>
<td>409</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sapiens</td>
<td>410</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sacrifice or Blame</td>
<td>411</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Face Facts</td>
<td>414</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Help</td>
<td>415</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Doors. Dreams.</td>
<td>416</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Killing Time</td>
<td>419</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Acknowledgements

422
Janie Huzziie Bows
Mirrors

i like to dress for an imaginary girl (we will meet each other soon) by putting on a silk tie with subtle Chinese birds sewn in.
she may be picturing me in her mirror
as she applies exactly the necessary line of mascara to lengthen her lashes and darken her eyes.
whatever begins as a mystery ends as a blind,
the nuances so well known that birds chirp violently at their mirror images but the pools
as they are revealed in the sunlight of every accidental nod of the eyes remain calm as a mirror in which there is no image ever seen.
This looks like jump to me

You are a cockroach

you are a big cockroach crawling up a pegboard
the kitchen light suddenly shines and you must get through to the other side but testing every evenly spaced hole you find your shoulders will never fit and to get away you’ve got to fall.

fall
or refuse to crawl and wait motionless until inspiration with an overview filters through or you die of hunger, lack of love, fear of death or the outlandish hands of another angry animal with a wisdom wiser but infinitely useless as your own.

so you die. but now the big hands are gentle and you receive a respite of thoughtlessness and the garbage grave has warm chicken bones and you don’t care what happens to you or the oldest species of proud recalcitrant insects or procreating it or foraging a grubby kitchen sink

for food. the joy of making life is new. let go,
and through the night be carried carelessly along.
Janie Huzzie Bows

thesis: strength endures voids and emptiness. strength constructs no homes (antithesis:

if your house leaks then on swollen days in sullen seasons there is no home for you)

there is endless repetitious strength enduring endlessly there is this paradox:
strength is the void endured and consequently synthesis: enter everybody’s anti-hero cross-eyed, sees crossed eyes cross-eyed but looking in his eyes sees straight, sees sick, sees something monstrous something insect, sees this philosophic frippery:

that is sees man

endures in his mirror that is self-doubt, his left arm being his right arm his left eye sees his right eye and no eye sees his nose right.

synthesis: enter naked the hero’s fists blazing won’t put up with that mirror is laughing smashing his left hand smashing his right hand breaks his wrath—

enter the dumb smile of blissful blindness or dumb sadness belting down a drink enter an angel’s colorful rags and bells enter a man in colorful sights and smells enter blonde beauty dragging a bulging jock.

there is the entrance where they enter through the black hole with crescent thin edges
the animal den the fish smell the ocean motion there is women’s strength endures the stretch forty-eight hours of warm pain two hours of sharp pain around midnight last sight the tippy-topy veins of its head bled and blood and body and push push Push– and the tide goes out, enter sleep.

The Listener

New York City is where people who are disappearing go. It is very quiet here, silent. A man and woman made love below me. I could hear the bedsprings ringing and the woman singing in sensual pain. My thoughts sped up as they humped faster. Everything is dead in my room except me and my plants. If I keep on identifying my feelings with the feelings of things, I too will be dead. They are talking and laughing now. His deep voice vibrates the air. Her laugh is like water.
Something

Something created. Does the creator think ahead or spill a storm. Rain happens. We supply the reasons. Evaporation of water collecting over huge expanses, condensed and pushed as clouds over the land. We say it makes us sad or depressed. We want to cry.

You describe the America you know and if you are ashamed of yourself for what you see, you lie. Or don’t look. Loud noises of automobiles and fumes. Today in Riverside Park, leaning on a rail, the dead leaves and snow reminded me how far from nature and life I am. The snow blew in from the west. People passed in a smooth slow line in front of me. Dogs trailing one another. People hiding until crises bring them out. Their dog smells another dog between the legs. The master runs over to stop him. Maybe he thinks they’re going to fight. Doesn’t want his big German shepherd to hurt her dachshund.

Guy runs past in gray sweats on his tip-toes. Glances at me. Another passes in blue sweats. Looks longer. They think I’m a mugger. They are not sexually attracted. I’m an opponent. I want something they have. I look surly. Why aren’t I out running, disciplining myself, making myself healthy, doing something. What brings you out here. You’re not doing anything but watching us and staring at the ground.

Walking down Broadway I realized I’ve never lived here and still don’t. Two women window shopping is strange to me. They talk about the clothes. They are friends. I slow down, I don’t feel so cold. Stroll, looking at people is like a sunny day and it’s a carnival. Streets different in different weather. Rainy nights are good. Cold rainy nights. Bars filled and warm. Streets empty and cold. People pass and look as members of a fraternity. They need someone and don’t hide it. They will try anyone out for one night. They have tea together. They go for a drink in some neutral place. They go straight to bed in the dark. They can’t see the face.
Zach Sklar’s Dream

A man and a woman are living in a jungle. The man has lived there all his life but the woman is new so she’s scared. The jungle is full of snapping turtles and they are hunting some. The man knows how to hunt them and he kills a huge one. They drag it home and leave it on a wooden table in a clearing overnight. He says to the woman Tomorrow you will clean it and cook it in a soup. This will accustom her to turtles and make her less afraid.

The next morning they wake up. But when they go into the clearing the turtle is gone and there’s a trail of blood leading into the jungle. The woman panics with terror but the man is no longer concerned with that: he grabs his weapons and follows the blood into the forest.
Peter has gotten a new job

Peter has gotten a new job
as a bookstore clerk from one to ten down by the river
in a sunny little house.
I’ve come to visit and I’m thumbing through a book of poems
by Robinson Jeffers’ brother.
Incoherent but more interesting than this.

Out of the river rises a bum of a blob
dripping with water and begging a yen.
While he shivers
I call him a louse
and say This isn’t Nippon, you!
So off he roams
probably back to his mother.
He was a nut
because he wasn’t a fish.
Earth

Two people cannot see the same way but they can teach
One another their ways. One gives up body and soul To follow the flow of the historical woman until
He can close his eyes and glide through mountains effortlessly.
He gives up earth and he gives up air, he gives up being touched
But he forgets to give up desiring to be touched. Then
One day the sun is hot or the moon is full, he desires Uncontrollably to be touched and he flies smack
Into the mountain and never comes out the other side.

You live to prepare yourself to die. You leave behind
A wreck of strewn projects or a few icy pearls.
Incredibly you leave your voice behind saying
Over and over again the same words. You leave Memories of yourself behind as pictures in the heads
Of people who wish you weren’t dead or hadn’t been alive.
They wash the pictorial body, shave it, comb your hair
The way they liked it best, cut a little here, add a little there,
Then easily, easily and kindly forget you.

Two hundred years later the wall crumbled and burned.
The ashes were spread logically across the plain,
A mathematical formula could describe the distribution.
The ashes were like seeds and from them
A thousand higher walls were made. It was lovely
To see those walls breathing imperceptibly
Shifting their glances so slowly as to go unnoticed
Behaving as if they were dead.

If I breathe, they breathe. If they are ash, so am I.
Having tried to separate myself and failed
I donate my body to science. The wall needs me
To breathe and hear. It gets my ears and lungs.
Trees need me to cast their night spells.
Are they asleep or are they dancing
A primitive fertility dance in the forest?
I choose trees because they can watch everything
From the distance of longevity.
To them I donate my soul.
Everything should be made of earth.
Earthen walls, earthen homes, earthen bodies, earthen sex.
Nothing should be made of air. Earth should inhale
And exhale air. Air should whip and caress earth.
Air should dry it out and crumble it. Earth.
Water should wet it and dissolve it. Earth.
What is the function of fire? Fire makes earth permanent
And then fire makes earth into air. Water Makes earth into mud. Mud makes earth into homes.
Homes make earth into walls. Walls make the earth breathe.
Breathing makes the earth crumble. Crumbling Makes the earth seed.

A Yellow Rose

I am thinking of the day
   I came to you with a yellow rose

a passing businessman said hello to you you put it in your hair

today is like that day the sun is hot on a crowded city

we are discovering each other anew in the crowd
Night

Whereas last night the full moon made the night resemble a cold day
Today clouds give the night its old shrouded, crowding demeanor.
Ghosts stalk the forest gleaming (at me) from just beyond the circle of light thrown by the fire.
You, old night, I wish to make my peace with.
Eventually I know even I (I think, I’m told) must enter naked, a cold north wind in winter or a gentle September breeze instructing my sole spirit . . . .

There exist powers overwhelming for the human body and mind.
The aborigine’s untold night of meditation on the mountain, coming away with his life-long totem and power.
The mountains tonight are alive with benevolence that could (for one lacking humility and respect or the hunter’s perspicacity) flame up into insane malevolence.
You, old complete night, I wish to make my peace with Being utterly a creature of the water and the light.

Night on the mountain, the human animal alone, without cohorts, speech and music inane without other ears to listen
Yet blasting, blasting against the night
Even after fire dies, its skin still the halo beacon to nothing in nothing, Mind pouring on the electricity, outward to friends back in the cities
Receiving in return only strange sounds.

The ear must differentiate and protect.
Just as fluids within keep the body balanced so must the ear when the eyes are blinded by night Balance the mind. Eyes, heroes of the day, enjoying orgiastically autumnal delights
Are now slaves to every primeval passion of the mind.
But the ears: it is a sound they have heard before and can identify.

Night, old strange night (were we once acquainted?), I wish to be at peace with you by becoming knowledgeable.
Fear like fire clings to its fuel.
I wish to dampen passionate fears by attuning the five senses to all that is normal dark and day.
To know the habits and cycles of everything I live beside
And my inner spirit become a silent tide attuned to nature’s lunacy.
Absolutely Smooth Mustard
I prefer to sleep and dream

I prefer to sleep and dream than face this solitary room. No pity, I go on without a drink and look with gay eyes on my future in a forest or a city, someplace.

It’s very amusing, what a middle class boy like me came to, isolated in the northwest corner of this island, caught in the deepest loneliness and yet in my heart all this joy.

Surrounded by buildings I am not at peace yet strangely I am, not like a zen master but as a man in the wind who when most despairing and oppressed is most released.

Old records, old unloved books. Sara’s cheek is a source of pleasure, but she has a friend with whom to share it and can depend on him for companionship throughout the week.

So I ride the subway home. I look at faces and they look at mine, mute, animated spirits. A crazy woman pushes aboard and exhibits herself. To her, the passengers’ glances are caresses.
Not enough heat

Not enough heat. Snow. Cold. and now rain on Tuesday morning. traffic sloshes to work. it is cloudy for the second straight day. the snow was magical only for an hour. businesses might have closed. now it’s melting in a cold rain.

is the city depressing me? i ride the subway and the people no longer seem beautiful. the noise is just noise, no longer the power of God. i sit slumped, still at ease, but no longer playing with the eyes of other passengers. glance at the ads and then go to sleep with my eyes open.

it is winter, and it should have its effect. the difficult, dangerous season when weak creatures die and the strong barely survive. why expect much heat to mitigate it and the happiness of Spring? accept cold and discomfort and the bad sound made. it is a poor city, the seasons touch us. there is not enough heat. snow. cold. and now rain.
Almost Spring

Almost Spring but only February
almost February but only January
only January but almost March.

Almost everyday I play my trumpet almost every night I ride the trains
every midnight I’m on the trains.

Almost every morning I turn on the radio every weekday I go to work every midnight I ride the trains home.

Everyday I spend at work almost every weekend I play the trumpet
Saturday I ride the train downtown.

Almost every night I get some sleep only everyday I go to work
every midnight I’m on the trains.

Almost Spring but only February
almost February but only January
only January but almost March.
Chinese Sonnets

I

These days I forgive myself everything. After all I’m alone and unhappy so I give myself a little treat whenever possible. On summer nights I remember the good women who loved me but live with their husbands now.

This is not an easy life but I’m not afraid. Despair leads me to talk too much about myself rather than be transcendent. I trade push for shove with the world and sitting above the river feel I could move the globe.

If I could stay out here on the roof all day, get stoned and read the I Ching, write a few lines and forget my troubles, I could be happy today. Then I would go to work tomorrow.

But I rise at dawn and drink some orange juice. It is good with ice. Buy a newspaper going to the train.

II

In this lousy life we work five days a week. An Indian could gather a week’s food in three days and go swimming in the hot afternoon. The pleasure civilization offers is a drive past fast food joints on Merrick Avenue to a sea food restaurant in Freeport.

Almost everyone I know is dissatisfied with life as we have been pressed into it. The system gives us cancer and heart attacks and repressed sexuality when I was born to be sensuous and enjoy another’s body. Instead I slug the world and the world slugs back.

I have five minutes to finish this poem. I remember the smooth women I have known, remaining in bed all morning. Our big ambitions are our curse. We uphold our end of the society.
III

While it’s true that I’m not happy, I’m very amused at the craziness I have let myself in for. Hopefully it’s only one year of sleeping in my clothes without a woman and drinking plenty of wine after work.

I listen to someone start a car downstairs, but that is not my world, nor do I know any of these eight million I live beside in the crotch of many waters. Above Broadway Saturday, the geese fly south for winter.

This morning, in twenty minutes, I will go downstairs wearing a shirt and tie and jacket and carrying a briefcase. I will tear myself from the pleasures of tea and breakfast to arrive at the office where each day my happiness is challenged.

I accepted humanity as a natural part of nature. When I did that I had to pay the rent and get a job, too.

IV

A famous samurai crosses a plain in winter looking for work. He comes to a farm community but the farmers have no use for his skills. So he removes his swordbelt and sets to work digging.

It is temporary employment while the seasons change. The sky is gray and all of the women are occupied warming their homes. None look up from their work except to glance at the strong samurai digging.

Why is he digging in the frozen ground? The poet knows little about farming and less about fighting. He has put the samurai to work at a pointless task. It is too early in the year to begin digging.

Nobody pities the pointless samurai or gives him food. He ties on his sword and starts chopping wood.
These bird songs, this January morning, I look for a way out of life. The Texas woman tells Marc stories about the football players she’s fucked.

Although I complain like a blue jay about it, life has accepted me. Walking uptown with Stephanie it’s clear how much the Empire State Building I’ve become.

Nevertheless, we make our own decisions. To fight war or not. They are all my friends, I work for their success, but choose my poison independently. For me, laziness and anonymity when I could have been a star.

Newspapers indicate there is much to discuss besides myself but the Muse seems to disagree. My few friends and the age will look quaint as a daguerreotype in the light of the holocaust. I kiss the girl of my dreams.

Again it is almost Spring. It gives me only pain to think back on past Springs when I seem to have been someone else. The people who lived then live today in the same bodies but changed in every other way.

Of course I must continue, with or without good humor. What was amusing in my youth, that God’s finger could move me to another square, now makes me fear old friends who are dead to me and yet still here.

The veil of life is thin if one doesn’t believe in mystery. Frequently it blows and reveals the thickening body, alone, without a soul. One hopes for a consort who through her own pain has become gentle and simple too.

If only I could share this life with a good wife. But she would only be unhappy and bring me grief.
South Bronx

While I’m reading a poem about it on the previous page the girls come over to visit their boyfriends and dance in high shoes and perfume. Their legs are strong and their voices high. And the guys get high and hard thinking about what the girls are like behind their eyes.

That says more about me than reality. And it’s exactly four lines. Ken Patchen would say his angel smells sweet and sassy. I feel the bony fingers of mine who has been working to stay alive.

Enough small poetry. One must conceive of a project—say a poem about a bridge—or stop writing and instead walk over the bridge at sunset and see the city in a nuclear war the clocks, the Watchtower and the docks gone and no smoke.

I still exist but I’m late for my job. I’m dressed well in honor of true love and Spring which both outlast the holocaust. The manager cans me with the cold hard eyes of one who accepts the rules entirely.

Goodbye to the rows of dead metal desks and goodbye to those who can take it longer than I.

The guys downstairs do not read poetry and very little prose. The General Theory of Employment, Interest and Money does not occupy their minds. The sex pistils of the mountain daisy is no concern of theirs and the man upstairs who plays the horn is less than a curiosity but makes more noise.

When I feel like this nothing matters and this is good—get warm with wine, turn out the lights and turn up the radio—if only there were a woman who liked the down and out life too.

In the end someone sticks a gun in my face in the South Bronx. How I got among the fire escapes in the sooty alley I cannot say but it is one of my earliest memories. Perhaps it is my grandmother holding my hand or one of the clowns. I say Drop that goddamn gun and he blows me away.
For Spring No Hesitation Is Great

Today is April 1\textsuperscript{st}. Transit strike. Mayor Koch accepting the fact. Myself, far from crisis central, in North Manhattan, measuring the temperature of my apartment. In the sun it is warm. The crows have returned again for Spring.

Today life and the city are o.k. Watching cat in the morning sun. Drinking tea. My 1300 dollars will melt like summer snow, but in the meantime, like samurai I do not show my fear. I remain still as on the subway and prepared to fight.

I am sitting under the emergency brake when a coiffured Latin woman rushes aboard. The doors close but she decides she wants out. She bangs on the door as the train begins to move. I see it happen on her face, she finds the red cord and pulls, no hesitation.

Maybe someone’s hand or foot was caught in the door. Maybe she’s just selfish and impetuous, got on the uptown not the downtown side. Maybe the friends she could have been with didn’t get aboard. Whatever her reason, she acted and the train obeyed.

Some of the passengers sit through the whole thing, some of us stand. Myself, I stand, look for the hand caught in the door. Later, walk home through the pouring rain. Today is April 1\textsuperscript{st}. Transit strike. Sky blue, temperatures mild. Democracy is great.
How cool!

How cool!
this early summer evening
after a day so oppressive even we New Yorkers move painstakingly.
The breeze in sumac trees
so why am I not more content?
The electricity went off at the bank,
spontaneous bank holiday,
so I’m broke, drinking water.

All my needs except love fulfilled. Woman opens her windows. How cool!
this summer evening in New York, dense New York the jets overhead
the people on the ground suffering and struggling toward vague goals or goals clear as Harry Helmsley’s.

How cool and refreshing
this glass of ice water after today’s hot pavement, clothes.
During the afternoon heat
I sleep in my underwear.
What a city I murmur to myself looking at its map. Big, Jamaica Bay to Inwood,
the Battery to Pelham Bay.

Nowadays novels need a few cities to move the plot.
The protagonist does not walk in the park. He uses his car to get around fast.
How cool this evening in New York!
Lost among the bars and industry,
moonrise over Bronx.
Change

I am feeling the shock of fast change. How to cope with it is of course the question. Listen to Beethoven through the neighbor’s window? Look up from the page? Appreciate doves even though they are so numerous? I seem to have limitless choices although this cannot be true. Could I have become a computer specialist? Sure! How to remain still in the ever-maddening mandala. To remain still on the outer edge of the wheel is to ride laughingly and pluck at the gold key. I force myself down into the craw of the black vortex New York until I feel the strong oscillations gather rhythm and expel me or accept me.

What do I find within the black electric walls of this unique vortex? I find there is more space between people than I’d ever dared to hope. That my efforts are unnecessary and hopeless. I cancel my subscriptions and stop eating. I embrace wild roots and run through streets with arm around my girl.

*     *     *

What is important.
That question.
I part my lips in the middle and blow eat corn chips, dipsy doodles make love, eat grapes.

In their mere chronology events have no relation. How was making love different from eating grapes. Differentiation is essential to bring order from chaos. The chaos is the accelerated change created by our own species whose consummations have a quantum effect on the environment.

But the chaos existed long before, and long after us
in both more serene and violent forms.
Again a duality, but here’s why.

For each duality may then be said to be in a dual relationship with another duality, forming cubes.

These cubes are difficult to join with other cubes, unless first they are somewhat melted.

We were traveling among these cubes, maneuvering through a static array of equidistant points but finding it impossible to avoid striking them.

So why the difficulty adapting. Because no species before us had to adapt to its own effects upon environment? No, every species must but our adaptations (of the world) are so successful (such fabrications!) One green, one brown

Two dead leaves sleep-touching
Then a breeze!

*   *   *

Loveliness and loneliness
these periodic auras

surrender to greater force, power, strength whatever it is called, the clog of heels upstairs to the door, turning of the key, the taking out of the garbage down below, car starting, placed in gear, cat meowing anyway, for myself, personally, speaking only for myself, because although the Parks Department rakes the leaves as it did last autumn, to keep them from clogging the sewer system, I am in a heightened state of vibration Quivering

like a long steel pipe banged hard against an iron beam. The hard hat feels it in his hand (on the gears) but great buildings are built that nature destroys in time with a little wind water, fire

air, you glide down through the limpid air toward the ninety-seven story abandoned structure remnant of an earlier civilization abandoned but not yet entirely swept away in slow waves of change.
Material Life

Absolute science and art of being whole at one and under no delusion that mankind (or nature) give a shit whether you amount to something or not.
Narrowed down nothing
nothing but matter matters, matter, content of life (serious, love it) hate death, for the hell of it, to see what it’s like in the heart of darkness.

Deeper and deeper I go but who would bother to kill me or love me? Belonging to the drums of wooful war I woof and bay like every other dog.

Down I go to the depths of material life
the material is spirit wrought by the material world. The drum and jet plane
the bird and sumac
the pollen seed.

No answer is forthcoming for the young fool importunes to ask too frequently the fool’s question. What is my next move. He steps lightly and does not seem to care quite where.
The

material world is reality, my friend and sadness is the spiritual root without which the love-nut may be reached only by stretching the emotions bare

raw, where desert delights exhibit movement in the sunlit light. Where none find their way without following leaders
sometimes the wrong way.
The path is apart from the dance or the dancer who cutting cross country laughs at his perennial fright of being caught outdoors, out of sight alone with the wind and rain for days on end in hiding.

Up

on the roof, the telephone ringing, books getting delivered to the library free, gratis, no fight, no love a meager understanding of what rolls
the earth.
Gravity

rolls the earth (and may sometimes rock it) each of us achieving the gravity of a planet and pulling the world apart with our loves.
Taking existence beyond the limits set for it, into the universe beyond

We went out beyond the surf into the adirondack of trees waiting, wanting nothing, mountains wanting to grow slowly.
This World of Dew

I see a green tree. It is all I want.
A dry rocky mountain and a hawk satisfy. To die spiritually in the hot sun and the body go on climbing. To take the paths among the rocks and mahogany bush.
To feed on rock lichen and blue sky. To not need a house.

To leave my mind in the foothills.
To climb everything but blind. In the deer shade of the cool aspens.
Forgotten by the work force and the shrew.
Bored as a badger disturbed at its stream. Free singing as the stream cutting the gorge. Cool as a hummingbird in its wet spray. Caterpillar fur.

I stay in the mountains unknown.
The roof soot of the city calls me back.
The museum women shaking their bodies at the stuffed tigers. The meditating curators and entrepreneurs. Burro.

* * *

Old Basho, early Spring, took fond leave of his friends, closed his small house at edge of village, and with one peasant companion climbed the long narrow road to the North.

Blessed morning!
the day I left life behind
but not this world of dew.
Peaches

Wherever peaches grow I go and pick ‘em.
When they get ripe I try and swipe ‘em.
The farmer runs out with a shotgun and wonders where’s the varmint gone?
I’m hiding by the railroad tracks stacking the peaches I’ve found.

Then a freight train about a mile long rolls by hauling a bucket of rain.
I hop aboard while beautiful clouds gather to the north.
I put my peaches in the bucket and lug it to a hidden part of the train.
The rain begins, the night looms in, it’s summer and it’s thoughts and warm.

To the clacking rumble and the patter I close my eyes and dream.
An earthquake swallows up the people who wear horrible masks of fright as their daily tasks are trampled.
In a favorite movie theater an illumined lady puts her hand in mine, warm mouths, breath, skin, hair wing-soft, whole bodies, wind, bare.
I open my eyes at sunrise there’s a steady glow of light around.

If you can believe in God, you can believe the mountains go from purple to green.
While the last partier meanders home to bed the first farmer is up to milk his bread.
Fruit of the world ripens audibly and cities make a silent, distant sound.
Kind of a lonely guy stretches, rubs his eyes, pees out a passing train, has a breakfast of peaches and rainwater.
To Eat a Continent Is Not So Strange

1

Waves could wash away certain blue memories but they’re too blue. Today I’ve sat in two places, my heart full of you and how in the night under a half man in the moon too soon, too soon, did love die? Today I’ve sat in two watery places but the rhythms will never wash away the face and smell and voice of you. Thus, I stand in the sun, like that, the breeze gently tears my beard and life becomes death.

No, no, not that. A boat being repaired in a boatyard. And think of it! people on the planet earth! And nothing, but nothing, not even tao, is permanent. Whereas for us my dear this is a disadvantage, since I wished to be permanently a member of your arms, for me the individual I do not disappear as long as there is change. Life is like all things that are forever changing but will always remain the same. Love is one of those things.

From hitch-hiking, as the sun descends I proclaim this, the mystery more powerful than the handshake. Thus, even unto children I have kept my silence, and even unto you I will. The white birch bending over the river fell in. It carried downstream and in one tidal sweep became a great white fish. When the sea dried up this unlucky fish grew wings anyway and became the great bird. The heavens were too small and it shattered into bits like you and I.

To say I love you until the house falls down. Beyond the row of houses lit by street lamps and into the night I go, with and without you, both. How is it the powerful night attends you like a magician his queen? The way the sun would climb into a bottle to please me.

2

Under a full night of black night stars, shooting and shining, turning a world of sun worlds, everything universe and cool wind, mountains of dark sound and a stream’s breath song, I think often, until dawn, of your strong love. All of these true things becoming mine as a shore. And we inside as a breath baby. Listen, life darling long, four horses grazed nearby my head last night, like good luck. Struck thus I write: your love is greater than the real celestial globe.

Something thicker and velvet than deep sea foam for you swirl lover. Something true to the events of our lives, the clear mountainous horizon of vision. Over the vast green earth O population of human and animal lovers to chewing very cud, our bond is fulfilled as a mother. A tremendous earthquake couldn’t exist without us.

Searching for Symbols in a Town Without a River

I begin the day buying yogurt in a small favorite grocery store. The clerk a man of few pretenses was making jokes about his wife, how they fight in bed. Discovering the better stores in the community. In a given day, isolated from friends, I speak to few people. An old woman asks me for directions to the post office or I speak to a stranger over the phone about night work.

At home my every thought comes to the counterpoint of a dream: a girl I love surprises me by knocking on the window. I ply my arts all day alone. After this silence like being hidden away in the woods in a cabin, bored but owing no member of society an explanation, invitation to a party. A flow of wine and devilish drugs and quickly I am making a fool of myself.

My new friends like me but when they think about me at all, they wonder. Wandering home through the midnight air, alone again, free, admiring the ghostly houses of my new neighbors by new moonlight.
Penetrating the Unknown

While waiting but not watching for the sun to set, perhaps the bullfrogs are creating the shadows with their croaks, my friend screams out because he has been bitten by a fly. He is not quiet enough so the flies obtain special pleasure from teasing him. Meanwhile bluebirds skirt the lake surface like the most perfectly designed fighter planes in twos or threes and argue rising up on their tails into the air. While insects prey upon and tease the bare flesh and blood of we humans, they fear the silent violence, the sudden huge presences of these family birds.

A larva with a leaf tip for a cocoon descends a white birch by a long thread. We free ourselves from our writings to observe phenomenon. Then thinking about dinner. The flight of J. Krishnamurti, the eagle guru says even artists (after physicists and mathematicians) may penetrate the unknown if not too absorbed in their own emotions and imaginations. We common people too who loving our wives can love everyone.

What eyesight the bluebirds have to swoop the lake from shore for a flying insect or descend from fifty feet on a thin straw grass and return to chew absent-mindedly! Just fun having song sung among men. As for the syntax, a daisy could swing it unthinking and coast. Along the beehive rocks ants crawl on connecting interlacing instructions. All around us and inside too as if stars were unseen but present it’s true. So a man desires breakfast with his lady; could it be more amusing, material or smell?

As the eyesun descends below spun clouds, spirit or the eagle or the drum? Round. The dialectic obscure couldn’t be more better said. So round and serious. To love everyone with clearer vision than a bluebird or a lake is to transcend the innocence of insect and take flight action and feed the babies of fate. Phew! Dinner outside the cocoon. I brought myself a student upon the hill or mountain and said to myself I said Obo rebop in summer sweater and what less overweight can carry test uphill so slow? Presently, reformed, informed by the bluebird’s eagle spirit, clear cleanhead, I return coagulating mightily ideas the bites of insects ow! to breakfast home and everywhere unknown. Hearing bird with clear conscience echo make.
Morning Chores

As if the sun intended this habitual tendency to make the body healthy I do. First, the brain believes itself what a mistake if it’s blue. The eyes blue breeze sky praise God some beautiful living world earth. Good as a proper prayer could good. Then a leg moves. What a miracle course of muscle goes to greatness human and divine. Morning moving as good a feeling.

An arrow of cloud on the sky points the way. Everyday look you and you find an ancient new way. A list of the components contains the river’s horizontal reserve deep dull and dark as a dream, the blue sky and her daughter the gentle breeze and her great husband the morning sun. After these, men and their nice machines and their morning chores.

When I get up I brush my teeth mundane. I put fruit in a bowl by the bed and brew tea. I feed the cats animal meats preserved and cans of caught fish organs and oils complex. Their shits being different from mine cleaning. I sweep the floors with a broom and a dust. And knock in the nails. I check the mailbox and search the street a fence a neck a stretch for the mailman and imagine the mail. My doing this opens the windows and unlocks the doors.

Next I water thirty thirsty plants important. The ferns smell of earth spray. This good thing lasts into the wee hours of your life remember. Open goodness goes to heaven sky on earth or in a sense four seasons. I open the back door porch and a black cat morning. You wonder why. A childhood breeze makes the feelings in the mind play music. The mystery of night is now a mystery of morning. Something of nostalgia wine.

The center the stomach the body the sex. It propels the people’s body all day. From morning to night a woman a man. Everything fitting and grand and in through the door healthy, nothing and wise. The grass on the hill of a willing riverbank. Welcome and good morning.
Rain

Five days of steady rain. A hurricane approaches the city. The streets are flooding but the wildlife is thriving. Every person wears a raincoat or carries an umbrella. Indoors is cozy. Movie theaters are crowded in the early afternoon. We who live alone are more isolated; those who live together are more aggravated. The heavens are having a fine time belting it out.

A fly is swept from a windowpane in early August but men’s machines are almost oblivious to the storm. Except the wires in Mr. Glyckman’s Volvo are wet. People’s dreams begin to take place in the water. When they awake their thoughts are floating in the puddle of night.

Raindrops slap the leaves and splash the ground. Travel is not advised, wherever you are it seems like home. Next month dirt on the shingles of the house will remind the painter of the great rain. Even the rain no longer makes an impression on the earth, only a ripple in the rain. If there are mountains or the sea they seem more like brother and sister than father and mother these days. Summer feels like winter.

Children are less visible and mothers are women who were once girls. Nightclubs are full and the listeners listen more seriously. Music continues but the rain muse has her say. Lovers are less joyous and more happy. The full moon’s influence is muted by clouds, the blood between people is thicker. The Himalayas come to the Rockies and the Rockies reach for the Alps. The imagination comes to the market.

The roads leading down to the river are empty and wet and the bright painted houses along them are quiet. A dog and a cat under a porch patient and unperturbed. A love-gnarled man with a brown beard and walking stick walks in the middle of the street. If a curtain moves, a woman wonders how many days he’s been out in the rain like a child. But only the water winding back to the sea, a mad naked saint at the Last Judgement, welcomes him home.
"A blank, unpainted space. It is considered one of the identifying characteristics of both Chinese and Japanese painting. Blank space is not simply unpainted areas; it is important to the composition of a painting and carries the same "weight" as the painted areas, often serving to set off or balance the painted motifs. As early as the 10c in China, ink landscape painters attempted to capture the spirit of the scenery around them; in their paintings blank space functioned as "spirit" ki x." —JAANUS

Rather than put myself in the sky which is so complete with blue and clouds, I make a space in a line of people climbing a trail in the mountains.

All night I work on my thinking and waiting until at dawn I see the iron clouds shift sunlight and listen to the years changing my life with a laugh.

I say thank you to all the influences that a plant like me goes on growing fearless as a daisy. I need no robes, I wear baggy underpants in the morning.

By afternoon I am transformed by the light from my beard. Some girls think I’m cute. At first I’m shy but soon I take my wooden chair among a bunch of kids from Waltham.

At night I fall in love with the first person to stop his car. Because I am a well of love for my lady. The drone of stars slowly changing places in the sky.

When I fall asleep by the river it is like I’m dead. There it is. I use my coat for a pillow and lay my head at the root of a tree. Shade my eyes from the sun, white waits.
In a Day

The one power that a man can have is in the perfection of himself. He changes with the weather but of this he’s unaware.

A churlish man and his teacher are walking along a road when he is suddenly instructed to look down a side street. Spring trees in leaf.

I go in front of the mirror and observe the changes to come in my face. I turn my chair so I can see out all the windows.

What is right fits the time perfectly. It is all out of my hands. In this the peace is supreme. Yet my hands embrace the pot.

In the morning the air is cold and clear at the river. Then clouds and the confusion in people. At dusk the sky is clear again.

Absolutely Smooth Mustard

There is absolutely nothing to do. Some people fall in love. I go have a cheese sandwich with mustard. Watch skyscraper lights from the bed. Look at the books and decide to read none of the dry words. The cheese sandwich is good, and orange juice. It’s cold in the kitchen so I go back to bed even though it’s Spring.

Some people go dancing in fish net stockings. They find a good time—but exactly what this means—it’s not more important than a star. Quite what is this waiting. Tonight I could disappear and the world might not miss me until next year. I remember passionate nights with some of the women I’ve known. Two sides of a smooth stone.
The Dark Green Conifers

another day in the woods. on Strawberry ridge looking out over undulating green hills to the next great wall of mountains. the last morning clouds left from last night’s storm hanging in the valley mistily. the sun eventually burns them away.

the respect between old Paul Karlsen and I continues to exist. even though he’s a Mormon and I’m a fallen New Yorker. the work is comparatively easy, lifting hundred pound bags, so you can just imagine what we do other days. in fact, it’s fun, especially for young Bates. we get all white (and our lungs dusty).

on the way to and from the work site I read in Silent Spring, the chapter against herbicides, gathering inspiration for the upcoming controversy. in the end perhaps I’ll be fired for refusing to lay down Tordon beads. realizing this, as I drive with Bates,
I see the dark green conifers and begin to miss them.

Rocks and rattlesnakes, bluebells and mountain daisies, grasses and cactuses, mahogany bush, lodgepole pine and quaking aspen, lush forest and dry sun-tortured mountainside, wind and seed carried by wind, ants, streams, hummingbird and hawk, deer, badger, ground squirrel, wolverine.
Snake Creek

Tired body aches. Long walk on starry night—ears attuned for bear at creek, or cougar. Nothing, not a doe.

But that afternoon came upon a healthy young buck in a meadow. High up. And a hawk left a feather for me. Old, old stands of lodgepole pine, grey bark like wrinkled hides of elephants. Thick carpet of dead needles.

Thirst. Sit at snowbank for an hour eating snow. Burn tongue. To soon after stumble upon a pond and the place that a creek springs from the mountain. Water indescribable. Eat ravenously and drink deep gulps.

Climb highest rocky peak at dusk. Razor-back ridge. Mother hawk scream nearby. Must backtrack and then go straight down near dark feet fall through layers of scrub pine, hands grab for the live stalks only support against broken bone.

Choose steep narrow bed of loose rocks, surely waterfall in some other season and descend on ass and all fours, feet first always fearful it will end in an uncontrollable hundred foot drop. Trickles of water nearing bottom.

Cracked hands, raw behind, cross final snowbank and attain road along Snake Creek.
Brother Death
Take the Ripe Plum

How far from nature and life it is the gray clouds, airplanes in them
the night cooing and pigeons roosting
Sirma’s garden gone to roses and seed

That airplane overhead!
pointing the way
pointing to war

War being an aggravated condition of what we already know

Flowering beneath the noise of yet another jet passing overhead.

*     *     *

Why this much sadness in a world so beautiful?
We are sad for the weariness of everything, including earth (that will go on tropically flowering long after we are gone) we who are nothing in powerful time’s grip

history, passionate history, coffee between neighbors.

*     *     *

Enter into alliance
With the sweet darkness, night!

Night and day, day and night
Everybody knows when the moon is bright.

We dance by the light of the moon
All night.
We dance by the light of the moon.
We dance by the light of the moon and setting sun.

We drive
we crows and call three pigeons!
and make the world alive
even bricks.

Jets
two pigeons!
Milk-skinned doves enmesh

Two gray-skinned sharks, jets, embrace in the sky, a blue green oil truck takes the hill, cobblestoned, in low steady gear.

Zazen position to remain so unmoved yet moved by the stillness

the movement of the car uphill part of your system of beliefs unmoved by it, parked necking in the front seat hawks diving for pigeons’ eggs and so you are compelled to move by the force that created you. but you impose your own small order departing from traditions human history understands a mutant

such as those currently developing the human mind beyond its past capacities.

*   *   *

Two straw sandals blue jay call two sea gulls

*   *   *

The jets return flying low.
       Laying low

and breathing low mists of pure noise.
Monk’s shaved pate

Monk’s shaved pate thick pelt around edge leans over book

leans over book above river reciting lines, reading scriptures, preparing first for his personal salvation, then for those of other men.

He prays, sweetly serenely, steadfastly participating in the broad rhythmic thrusting of the river and the earth.

Completely exposed to its vibration he vibrates passively
yet passionately

putting effort into remembering some of the ancient, past taboos and practices Performing

the art of total presence and abstinence.

Absent from worldly life, abstaining wholly from touching the black girl becoming part of her beads her sweaty underwear

commanding a full dress view of her stimulus, her honey.
Bone Music

1

Last night dinner with four couples points out the difficulties in living together and apart.

Even the son of a wealthy doctor, disdainful of inebriates more artificial than the moon, full, full of joy for humanity and life
suffers deepening depressions like the dark outside a lamplight.

It was a good restaurant expensive but comfortable in the alternate life-style way the cook was a hairy talented clown and we clowned though beneath each facade was turmoil and decay.

We lay beside each other like bones in a boneyard and find joy (I do anyway) in the bone dance to bone music.

2

Without a thought for slash fuel or deer, the mist depens and deteriorates upon the mountain. The mountain completely unaware of its greenness. The ice is centuries old.
A red-tailed hawk floats above the unit observes what small mammals, birds are in the clearcut

Awaits
the moment to strike

or fades away almost silent as the mist. I dream of it, though I am awake among my co-workers, the bullet system zinging cut logs down to the road, firewood.

3

Pardon me you mountains for coming to the edge without mystical knowledge or belief, only love and wrinkled eyes for the women and men who light the fires and wield the chain saws, drive the cat, swing the ax, I completely laugh among them like a god yes, although my face is a mask of hate and pain, what god does not come to this field of flowers out of fear and confusion and chains product of the hot anvil and hot engine of human history.

This duality, these arm-breaking dualities this volcanic eruption erupting from some confluence of beheaded forces, one powerful with eternity, one blinding with intensity, meet and in the middle is me

like a husband and wife fighting like two dogs fighting but not biting hard life bests my best synthesis of it and I begin to pray, hard to believe I kneel woefully and pray for a happy combination of sun and mist
and sometimes man’s destruction.

Sunset

Sunset, quiet, except for happy birthday to neighbor’s child, virgo, and all that means, purity of morality, inability to scheme,
whatever else the stars dictated.

Woodpecker climbs oak, Connecticut.
Not ten years ago this mountain was completely forested, untouched
since early arrival of Europeans.
Now my parents’ home and others stand in new clearings. The birds do not seem to mind. Sing, and deer occasionally visit, from where?
Out of the pre-historic past.

That I must die
is my every third thought.
On my hands and knees, cold sweat,
my own body murdering me.
I meet death with the philosophy
I lived in life. Acceptance of the loneliness, the unregarding beauty. There is that shoreline along the straits to Puget Sound, in mist, the generations of sea birds nesting on the water.
Polar Bear Mugs Wino

Have I ever been profoundly lost? Yes. Railroad tracks and a river wide as the Amazon, yet lost. Living in the intense sunshine of northern New York summer, but lost in the shade of a gazebo. And here? Here I am enclosed in a tomb of porcelain machinery. With another winter passing its calling card in at the window. The warm steam no longer cutting the rough edge. Wearing wool sweater nights. The freedom of summer gone and only one fuck. What a nightmare, what a strange dream, life on planet, winter all around.

A system, they call it a system. I call it an evolved anarchy. Repetition, never. What do I know. Repetition, every two thousand years. Coming of a frost, coming of a fire. When nature proves furious beyond remembrance. Polar bear mugs wino.

* * *

CUNNILINGUS

Tall, attractive, talented WM, 31, trumpet player, takes pleasure in performing cunnilingus with clean attractive women. Age, race, marital status no object. All replies answered.

Here is where it started, amusing myself in an undisciplined manner in the playpen. Being rude when interrupted. Height of bad taste hitting the wall, what’s he talking about. Marlowe went to bed. He had a headache. Used an empty bottle for a teddy bear/sap. In the middle of the night, three secret men approached the rock he slept under. They did not see him there, the fire had long ago gone out. But they’d seen it across the valley, and tried to estimate. They were close.

What do I care. They did this, he did that, they did this and this and that. He used his feet, took off his shoes. It mauled him to death in two minutes of the first round. Would have been better for him if it happened faster. Never got his knife out of his pocket. But he lived, with one eye after that.

*   *   *   *

What do you do with a drunken sailor early in the morning?
You pull that sailor out of bed by his hairy moorings.

Why should anybody believe this, this tiresome outpouring of old moans and groans, grumbles about loneliness of life and dominance of telephone. This gamble on print, above the spoken, sung word. The meditative call to inhabitants of planet to kneel woefully and pray. No, to chant as if the planet were mending.

Alive

What is appropriate to say about the changes in your life. That at 23 I was confused about a girl, under the sculpted pines.

Quietly, my friends and I contemplate death. A subject, until recently, unknown to us in such a variety of forms. Nuclear flash to exploding blood vessel in the brain, control eludes us. Heirs to a society adept with numbers, we run in the park and eat whole grains, increasing survival odds.

The city and the mountain are two hard anvils against which our hot lives are shaped. Love is the fire, and the need for love. To be shaped by the lover’s warm hands, like clay. Alive, almost sure of it.
No cows to look at

No cows to look at
I hear the truck traffic

Everything changes like clouds
The page this poem is on burns

Coming from the funeral with friends
Talking on the telephone

No trucks to grind their gears
I hear the minute hand moving

Birds and people inhabit the earth
A black bear inhabits the earth, too

A rock in the sun
Calligraphy brush

In a mind there is apocalypse
No one can hear it
Crows, bluejays and pigeons

Crows, bluejays and pigeons talk this morning. Closest we come to wilderness here. Autos screech and sirens scream. Only 7 a.m. My fat belly and possible cancer worry me. With a few months to live, I’d search the wilderness for some wisdom I missed. Or plain beauty of natural randomness. Knowing that, why do I remain in health? I must devote my present to my future existence.

The bluejays complain long after everyone else is silent. Love and friendship need the body and society. You belong, you want to belong, three days in wilderness and you gladly return to lovers’ arms and plumbing. But one day you die. And this is the ideal independence you sought. This death is the pristine aloneness, the untouched wilderness and freedom from necessity! And it is certain. You do not save for it. You do not worry that you may miss your opportunity.
East Harlem to the Grand Tetons

No words, oily body sweats, city summer. Desperate to get out and never return although stalled on Triborough Bridge I admired the skyline.

My city, my death, I did it my way. Counting your blessings a healthy activity, the park out my back window, a job that pays.

But I am losing strength to fight for the world in my imagination. Acceptance of reality makes me a fossil of society.

Basho in old age found strength to walk deep into the mountains. He visited famous sites up north. Po Chu-i traveled mountains in his dreams.

You can leave at any time. You can return without being seen. A way to learn your insignificance, freedom to have never been.

Jet, cracked paint, tea

The clouds take a little blue from the sky beyond, how beautiful the weather makes life seem. The sky is where the soul goes when the mind runs out of destinations. We love the mountains because that’s where the earth meets the sky. If you just watch the sky an hour each day, lie back in the grass, you’ll never be ill. When it rains your face becomes a holy bowl. Once I was a beggar, no cares, by railroad tracks. They too disappeared into the sky. A small town you could hold in your fist on the prairie. A big city easy to hold in your mind when you’re in the sky. The clouds take a little blue from the sky. The sky takes a little blue from your soul . . .
Working to Abandon Immortality

Let us accept this pain and some fear
it will heighten autumn colors crack of clean air
black crows in blue sky lake.

Rather than fight pain, falling asleep in front of tv, understand the full import of its situation in the body. Blessed once, cursed now only fear prevents full knowledge of experience.

The gray sky brings winter, no blame.
The poet writes a few last poems or continues to live with his pain.
In itself pain does not oppose life, and may enhance it or build character, create wisdom. But too much fear chokes the throat and burns the eyes. It destroys the last free assessment of life.

* * *

Now I am going to live in my body as it is, almost fearlessly running in pain, working to abandon immortality
as a hope, conceiving sunset after sunset feeling what I feel.
On the streets I meet many beautiful young women curious to a certain extent what makes a man older.
I can only say ten years and the hand that reaches through the cloud. I can say only the knowledge of mortality which makes us brothers and sisters with the animals. And only the acceptance which gives us wisdom to couple often and lovingly.

How am I going to live every day as my last, hoping happiness outgrows fear by an ounce or enough? By running, writing and loving. By moving uphill and downhill like a bear.
By committing my last words to a powerful lord. How do the clouds accept my dead self? A rock thrown, a crow.

* * *

When I am old
young girls will not be frightened anymore.
I will invite them to my seat and tell about the women I knew.
I will tell about the clothes they wore and how they earned a living.
I will try to remember what was important to them and if they had a favorite color or knew how to divine.

Maybe I live and maybe I don't.
The smoke is white or black.
The winds are bright or dark.
The coins are heads or tails.
What have I been afraid of?
Death is most of all like sleep.
We spend so long apart
after briefly knowing ourselves.
I need you to know myself and without you all I know is sun.

Is It Stress?

Is it stress,
or loss, despair and survival
we must discuss.

Stress is just the symptom of a universe intent to destroy the individual before it births new life. It sends the dogs after us, after the holocaust, in the tattered ruins of our city.

There is this despair and expectation of destruction, but somewhere there is still also simple sky blue,
flowers among railroad ties,
true love between sexual partners.

Is it sex,
or love, companionship and reliableness
we must expect.

Sex, nothing but laying my head at your cunt, can interest me sometimes. Your legs lead to a pleasure that seems infinite and smells perfect.

So there is this tenderness, a connection like a suction to the biological that is ephemeral
as snow on the ground,
one elk in aspen,
death and nothing less.
The Shootist

In “The Shootist”, J.B. Books is not feeling up to snuff. He has cancer. What are the concerns of a man dying.

To die commensurate with the way he lived his life.
Books dies in a gunfight.
McIntosh dies in the desert, under a broken wagon, fighting Indians.
Norman Thayer will die of heart failure by the side of his wife, Ethel.

Two police officers die investigating a stolen moped at a gas station in the Bronx.
One buys it between the eyes, the other in the back.
The killer out on early parole from a manslaughter rap.
The DA blames the judge, the judge blames the parole board, and the board says the jails are overcrowded.

What should I be doing, old turtle.
Devote myself to re-order the world or crawl off to a lonely spot and preserve myself.
We are trying to educate everyone to their individual capacities and see that all are fed, clothed and sheltered adequately.
Because the suffering of one citizen makes suffering for another, the slow death of one sometimes makes the sudden murder of another.

There is this black rock we live on and its lovely mantle of green. It is all that is perfect. And everything of it is perfect that respects its integrity. On the subway I was amused to find, hidden in the confused mass of anonymous, bleak graffiti, unseen by the studied, expressionless passengers, in pink, delicate script, vertically written, the word penis.

People are the element I live in.
The world is pushy, we are bone,
the numbers of us overwhelm.
It is going to be hot again soon
and the Bronx will actively resent it.

Books dies in Carson City,
only two or three people will miss him at all.
He died alone as he lived,
with his enemies.

Brother Death

Even in the last days you need clean clothes;
therefore you may be found in the laundry mornings, small task against the larger one of not breathing. With simple joy men may forget to fear their deaths.
Six inches of snow reminds us of its dominance in a pleasant way. Coming and going of sleep, circling of the moon around the earth, earth around the sun. The great man dies and this makes death more noble for us all.
It is with joy that I accept the pains that herald my end. I do my job well.
I go to the well and break the ice for water.
The bucket comes up full of dying wonder.
To Have Loved Mary

Today is Sunday and I’m going to the ocean or maybe not. Definitely not doing the laundry or maybe I will. Moss and even a small tree grow in the rotten stubs of the pier pilings. The city is Seattle and it has a macho airport.

Give me the comfort of a moose knowing its water supply. The mosquito’s acceptance of its position among a million mosquitoes. The pool of stagnant water that remains one with the mothering ocean. I drift on the air, less than a seed, a bacteria.

Or I am human, big dick, big brain containing universal philosophic affidavit. Pleased by the churning of my tongue, sexual enlightenment, devout prayer, gourmet dining. I swear it is best to be alive and to have loved Mary.

Chambermaid with Ravens

The Aberdeen bus arrives, deposits and boards the same people daily. One is the dark-haired chambermaid at the tourist lodge, awkward in her print dress and wearing a frown. Her breasts inspire while her legs are quintessential. The sun dispels moisture and with fire-blackened face I buy a popsicle after work and achieve a counterfactual childhood. This is what the chambermaid’s scowl is about, the frozen treat and smile of a grown man. On a summer night what passions would I find in her? We take our place in the pattern of daily activity, pick-up trucks with crews arriving and leaving, uniformed rangers narrow in their imaginations. Two ravens fly low over the clearcut like weather, in weather, there will be weather. Felling trees in the forest, I look uphill. The ravens float like hawks, nearly immobile.

Plate Tectonics Versus Gamma Ray Bursters

An old man remembers what he has been yet the details are unimportant. Then the outline disappears, and the meaning.

Good, I can die or go to work, be wise or a jerk. Rich or poor, the wind and rain wear us away and it’s o.k.

Ask what matters, that question. Feeling the seasons, wearing a hat, loving your woman, a good shit.

Children born. Two cells meet, multiply, spiral into fetus. The mother is amazed: an intelligence apart from herself.

The violent rainstorm kept me awake although the lightning was still far away. I lay in my bed and listened naked.
Under-sky sleeping, bone keeping

In the holy spot with the sitting rock there is oak. Out where humans live there is shagbark hickory and maple.

Ants climb the rock.
August, and young birds are quiet when the parents celebrate the flowering weeds. Next come the seeds of autumn.

I am here to name it and know it and help it to grow. True, these mountains are my grave. A good grave to go to.

The crows have been in conference, again.
A jay, blue, pokes
a hole through reality.
There I find the sumacs fruiting and the male sex organs of the Queen Anne’s lace.

Company of flies, so intelligent. Two abandoned farmer’s fields are wide as Alaska. Is there one who could name
every flower here?
Under Mummy Mountain

Aspen, ponderosa pine, blue spruce pink glacier-cut rock, scree, ravens gray jay, peregrine falcon, hawk.

We climb to 11,000 feet in three days, camp at Lawn Lake for three days. Alpine tundra. Elk, bighorn sheep, marmot.

Tileston Meadows, ticks in grass,
rock face of Mummy Mountain.
Binoculars show pink cracks in gray rock.

Stoke gas stoves, play cards.
Boil water, set up tarps, lay out sleeping bags, hang bear bag.

Watch crescent moon slice into Fairchild Mountain. Moonlight makes a mosque of the rocks.

Yellow aspen splash in dark green spruce and pine. Gullies where streams slash during spring snowmelt.

One rock, feather or flower worth more than money. Need no wallet, keys. Just clothes for fur.

All day climb toward saddle to see what’s on other side. One hawk floating among bare peaks and over valleys.

Wind at 13,000 feet turns to sleet. Turn back from peak, take boulders two at a time down.

Winter moves into mountains.
Then we fly from Denver to New York where it’s still summer.
The Terminator

One leaf falls holographic illusion across time the Terminator travels to shape Sarah Connors’ destiny.
Heart attack
a common enough destiny
as common as young men discussing girls’ tits.
The Constitution is the document we refer to, the lodestone to correct course and not go crazily astray.
Lose all purpose beyond murder, child sex and food hoarding.
Illuminated manuscripts in a dark age, tape decks remind us of our voice our communal voice Supremes and Fred Astaire
the silken wail.

I lie alone in the night its sensuality makes the best sense it does or does not clarify the day of classes or clients or chain saws whatever fever may have infected me at the moment
a fever to achieve access to foreign films while living in the mountain community of Schroon Lake the fever to instruct the American people how to apply ideals and practicalities of Constitution to international relationships the fever not to die today, to maintain consciousness just one more season (and one more after that).

Anyway, what is being discussed—the finiteness of one life—or perhaps existence continues in another dimension, on another frequency
no owl hoots
but other purpler and indigo occurrences with other purposes
as incomprehensible and wonderful as these purposes to choke on a cherry pit or nuclear bomb to wail our wail together each individual identifiable hoot and wail, loud laugh and suppressed scream one orbicular chant, humanity, from India to Indiana complete, one sing.

I feel this way
searching for my place among you childless, but a child among children obeying or not obeying the speed limit
as my hormones permit everywhere among brothers, the sisters among sisters the races together exterminating the last rhinoceros and preserving its genes at the zoological society my species attacking entire rain forests, temperate forests and boreal forests like the engraver beetle in the red pine’s inner bark.
Thus, I occasionally cheer the Terminator cheer the machine and neutron bomb even in the face of individual heroics, the male and female face their physical love, tender and violent
I don’t know what I want.

It could be simple as this headache.
Not to despair
just to care enough to think clearly and accept 10,000 years of history.
Not to hate those in authority humor is the only remedy yellow ape teeth chimping in the glass death face and ritual is remedy a death song
and one for planting and one for the beginning of loving.
Cities in Flight

In Cities in Flight
transformations are chronicled over generations.
It can make us cry out for the genius occurring now and in our past. How the unseen, unknown participant was made known to himself through devotion to those outside himself. He guides his city into space.

So, the father and the teacher guide the family and the student through the close spaces of knowledge and obligation. And perform the history that surrounds them.
Good actors and directors, philosophers and physicists,
soldiers and foresters.

Today
steam rose from the asphalt because the sun has arrived in place, powerful, equinoxal as the human song that receives it.

Two big deer
Lope cautiously
   Off the open road.

Two crows
Fly low
   Above the Oswegatchie.

Frank Bassett
forester since ‘57
marks a stand of maple and black cherry for selective cutting. His actions today will be noted
by another forester, also acting alone, in the 21st century.

New York City
in a froth of creativity
Pacino and Sheen in Julius Caesar, Sonny Rollins at Town Hall, films opening, one that portrays the flamboyant style and dedication of a barrio public school teacher.

You cannot act alone.
You must belong
in your heart to the flight humanity makes in Spring, north toward wild flowers in geese chevrons.
Upside Down the Ancient Bole

The white-breasted nuthatch upside down the ancient bole.
If it has no soul, neither do I.

Pencils criss-crossed on the desk,
sticks tangled on the ground.
Oblong lenticels, yellow stars.

We try to worship the divine in our sexual partners. They shit and sweat diurnally and fear their deaths. But the abstract

God has also died. He lied to say he was eternal. Earth must burn, universe grow cold.
Old field seedlings become ornamentals.

Mosquitoes prey on us, and black flies.
The body decays, and this is what you come to love. And the ants that carry it away.

This morning, the profusion of species contents me. The temperate zone is warm, late May.
The posture of that bird is wise to emulate.
Silence of Winter

Silence of winter
distant from all but my sexual contacts her bedroom nights and day friends memory of my independence vanishing dream holding on to it, myself knowing how love can hurt.

Its seduction of me, dissolving my man barriers biologically, to procreate or create a new personality, a deepening humility, her womanhood hands.
Not giving in completely touching sweetly
but staying strong.

Going into the winter to mark my trees not flinching in the dark early morning casting an eye cold as a telescope moving inexorably
a part of nature, insect, star.
This is how I'll love and live with her.
Late Summer

It has been beautiful, late August, full moon a million crickets following a million fireflies in June, a million May peepers. Immersed in insect, amphibian cycles, I am a mammal, drugged, crossing the road, car approaching fast, unnoticed.

I would choose to die in late summer.
Why?
So that my wife would have autumn, intense,
to grieve by,
snowy bandages with which to bind the wound,
and spring to reawaken into.
Summer to remember that she's loved.
Pokeweed Waits

Pokeweed waits
underground, snow crusts small greenish white flowers, leaves entire and alternate, black berries poisonous, ripe late.

Waits patiently past February when the sun stays up in the sky more than January and six more months after that past the peepers keeping watch for every passing dog or truck.

We await our time or have had it, or are having it.
Body in slow, not precipitous, decline.
Expend ourselves on work and wine.
Percent of budget expended, year to date.

I heard a redwing this morning who might have been choosing a nest site holding the spot against chevrons from the south.
Choosing the best site, away from predators, near water,
in sight of seed and buds.

It happens that when the pokeweed fruit pokes out the chicks were born, the fledglings flown leaves already leathery and the weather has the faintest hint of January’s cold snow hold.
Cosmo's Moon

The only problem with "Moonstruck" is Cosmo's moon could never be so large in winter, stand for luck.

Mid-winter sledding brought joy snow, speed, although the kids were beautiful none were boys.

Walking the boundaries, and the old field boundaries. Aged maples, barbed wire past the cambium.

Northern hardwood all the way, except less than an acre scotch pine plantation and a few primeval spruce.

Pendant spruce cones in tree tops colonizing the old field too. Conifers a primitive civilization.

Lyonia has red, scaleless buds. Shrub or small tree, maximum height 12 feet. It's a heath, Ericaceae.

Small, white, bell-like flowers become seamed capsules, similar to but smaller than laurel, Kalmia.

The buds had me thinking red chokeberry, Rosaceae, but of course the fruit was completely wrong for a rose.

A timber stand improvement now in the scotch pine would encourage tall even straight trees, a cathedral.

The maples on the upper rocky slopes where the skidders couldn't or wouldn't go are impressive as eagles', hawks' nests.
Mid-summer, Spiraea, field of pink flowers fully encircled by mountain ranges. Bees working them.

Nancy, the broker, coming at five. These 160 acres, a dream, are unnecessary. Offer 500 dollars per acre.

Not an investment, a sanctuary. Backed against the Taconic ridge, real moon rising.

Blackbrush

Blackbrush—Coleogyne ramosissima
the dominant understory shrub in the pinyon-juniper canyons.

Mountain-mahogany—Cercocarpus montanus and ledifolia.
Single-leaf ash—Fraxinus anomalus and possibly a western hophornbeam

by the small birch-like leaves and the shredding bark in a moist stretch of joint trail.

The joint-fir, green ephedra looks like an ocean plant. Could the wind or white water rivers alone have shaped these sandstone, red rock forms? Network of canyons, inverse of mountains. It had to be ocean

ebbing and flowing, emotionally, like wind, moving atmosphere, thicker shaving, scraping, polishing, gouging, digging fish canyons then, shallower, dinosaur swamps
now, dry, rock gardens.

Explain the human history with water:
did the Anasazi visit neighbors along the canyon rims and deep within, combination caves and red-rock houses small windows, doorways, just crawlways, with corn gifts on summer evenings

when the canyon bottoms held permanent, not intermittent, streams? After them came the Ute and Navajo, Spanish and English.

Ravens dine on road kill.
A few long red roads connect some canyons.
The unprotected flats are overgrazed, rabbitbrush.

It is interesting that as I learn the woody and herbaceous plants, walk the desert foothills, I too could stay.
Grand Canyon

The Grand Canyon is like the brain with deep, unexplored fissures and tributaries, the main route well known by now.

I am walking, walking inside my mind, a grand canyon, a planet of canyons, a system of planets. The exploration may become dangerous

I might lose my job, forgetting to go or losing sight of its importance. But the job is gathering pinyon nuts and saguaro fruits, it is the main river, deepest cavity, how I find the unexplored canyons and tributaries of my neighbors and my enemies. But is it a religion, a reason for living. It is a marriage, for better or worse, with all the other living. The concept of life's brevity, temporary compared with the time taken to carve the canyon, does not interest me. Each moment has a weather, is a mirror of all other moments. The naming of things goes on. Cliff rose and wavyleaf oak, new mexican locust and sagebrush among ponderosa and pinyon pine, juniper. Once I know who they are inhabiting the canyon, the raven's flight is meaningful. The raven's rock cave, search for seed and carrion, my home and job.

The Rwandan dead

News photo of the Rwandan dead bobbing naked at the base of waterfall. Wide hips and narrow shoulders, surely a young woman once sexually active. No solution to death’s finality.

Is the production and distribution
d of food and other essential services fragile or deeply embedded.
Can or cannot the economy support the growing or diminishing population.
The Road Warrior, however shallow, attracts for its vision of social breakdown and the sources of regeneration. Of course
Jane Jacobs is more complex and compelling.

The Rwandan dead
had dalliances and alliances.
It is the indignity of their exposure and the rapid decay of their former lives, mere mulch, fertilizer for wild vegetation.
Molecular bonds loosening and joining new forms.

How do the vast darkness extending to the ends of the expanding universe and the temporal light of human consciousness interact to make the world?
What Have I Seen?

1

Sunrise, late winter skunk smell turkey flock playful otter, too.

The white heron
a great blue,
white phase,
in the abandoned beaver pond.

Purple clematis its long-awned achenes in globose heads spidery, fiery, extravagant fruit!

To identify or classify birds by the complexity or beauty of their songs.

And so what is over that ridge or hill
a sink-hole, a sand dune, a steep bluff.

2

What must I do. Organize the heretofore unorganized. The rabble of unemployed child abusers.
Molesters of their intimates.

Are there dysfunctional bird families?
Simply put, they do not survive.
We have hope
that everyone alive is essential, consequential. We classify and specify. The commonplace and everyday is sanctified.

What happens everyday? Morning is quiet, everyone at work. Home writing, watching birds. Afternoon, kids come back from school.

3

Pray to Allah and maybe he will spare you when he sets the world on fire.

Where or with whom will I be on that day? And how many people and adventures will I find in the wind storm and rubble?

I may live, but will it matter whether or not I help anyone else to live? This is no Last Judgement. Those who have learned or who still know how to live will survive. Nobody will go to hell, they will just die. There is no limbo either. Anyone who didn't find a way to be immortal is just dead.

So, what am I trying to do. Organize the unemployed, the welfare mothers and alcoholics into a flying chevron of purposeful explorers?
The doctor's conscious, organized, naive attempt to do good, his legacy, versus the randomness of the road and the war zone.

There his legacy is his rectitude and natural rough compassion for the damaged people he encounters. The difference between planning a legacy as if you knew enough to control events and letting the legacy arise from events themselves, controlling, insofar as you are able, only your own actions and reactions.

The doctor's leadership role such as it was grew out of not his material possessions like the car but his mission, his personal quest to find the young doctors he had naively trained and sent into the war zone where all died.

5

July-a cold city not as great or as gritty as I thought, summer theater left the shoe shine bereft of customers eyes cold as a bureaucrat's except for our soles and their leather. Sweat-soaked girls, the beautiful ones left town.

Emotionless as a bus. Sparrows, no chickadees.
All that's important happens indoors.
Exercise to philosophies.

You get what you see.
The panhandlers ask just once, won't risk friendship, justice.

No sale today in the finite city
where, for the shoe shine, pedestrians are infinite, times two shoes.

6

Faith = wait + trust.
But don't anticipate.
Popper prohibits prediction.
Niebuhr expects destruction.

I believe in God doesn't mean there's a sketch of a man in my head. It must mean all will be well in the end.

Satisfied with snow or summer. And now with dying old or younger.
Gold or paper clips. Gulps or sips.

In the final resting place in the city of the dead are there all night card games and sometimes open swims?

Each inch, square, or cube of Earth
brim with grasses and sedges, dragonflies and spiders, sparrows and eagles.
The tiger lily and the water lily and the lily of the valley, the calla lily.
When a girl on a bicycle smiles, that is a smile.
Night Drive Home

Night drive home
no cars behind or ahead
the day had been satisfying victories, compromises, achievements

half hour to home bubble of warm air and light moving toward it in my metal bubble toward my wife and children

watch for patches of ice casually, not nervously maintaining velocity and analyzing Jim Hall’s and Paul Desmond’s Bewitched

which way should I go back west past industrialized cities to spruce-fir forests then what? the same

need for man-made implements, refreshments, even names
they gave the rocks and trees.
Not one thing or thought uniquely mine.

Whether I am a visitor to my life or the actual owner, inside the bubble of air, water, blood that must not now slide off the road into time.

Bad Movie

We should have gone outside instead of watching one of the sillier, senseless, meaningless movies it is possible to rent or buy. Winter or not the fields and woods are at least real, commensal and understandable if you know the genus and species. Know the genome and biome. Learn the physics and music.

But this much reality requires an escape, hence bad movie. A bad book is better than a bad movie. A good movie beats a bad book, but a good book is best and a great poem trumps all. Will my son Zach be one who applies the scientific method? Can Aaron explain God’s intentions to the people? Their mother and I will wait.
New Mind

The mind is the body paying attention to what it is seeing and doing.

Morning tea, unemployed was one thing twenty years ago and another now, two babies.

Yet when the boys pay attention to what they do a small rift in time opens to name plants and play tunes. In that rift

the quiet morning streams
by. Work on clothing, tools and food
gathering and preparation.
The young children practice holding hands steady

new mind to attend.
Sub-atomic particles

Sub-atomic particles
the atoms they form molecules, cell organelles cells, machinery of life organs, organisms communities and ecosystems planets, solar systems, galaxies galactic clusters and their inverse black holes the doors to other universes, a contradiction in terms.

For language and its shadow consciousness must hold matter the material world snugly inside concepts theories and hypotheses to be experimentally verified using vision and the other senses, collecting data and interpreting the known facts accumulated over time.

Can matter
exist without a consciousness to behold it?

Believing in our mortality (the species)
we have created God (a supreme being) probably not carbon-based to encompass every universe but is God inside or outside consciousness? Can God tell us what to do or must we tell God alone
what to do?

Here is ego
projecting personality, exerting force on community, asserting the existence and predominance of component DNA.
An already hackneyed theory that DNA survival drives procreation, personality, savings bonds everything but poetry (most poems included).

Mustache, cowboy hat horse whisperer, gulag master Odysseus, King Lear salvation in the details. Yes, these personalities individual and interesting as opossum, bear oak and ash beech nut, pine cone Grand Canyon sandstone, Green Mountain granite.
Jones’ Nose

Their unspoken opinions are like a pot of unknowable, unnamed meats including skunk parts one morsel of filet mignon

Family or workplace longer the hours, years of the living opinions accumulate perception strained through mortality

This stew of ethics holds together, blows apart trees, planets, atoms, galaxies on or about year 2000

One must not express the certainty that the child’s coma-induced vision of a dead grandparent did not actually happen in heaven

One must feign respect for all beliefs however abjectly death denying because they are harmless as ozone zebra xylophone zygote

A beautiful day follows on Jones’ Nose ripe blueberries, black cherries
October Sky

The teacher dies having made her small contribution to the colonization of other planets by motivating a boy who would otherwise be a coal miner to become a rocket engineer.

Throughout the nation teachers are sending their prize pupils through the funnel flask to produce technology from pure science. The mother and father are good, disciplined, god-fearing people who stand firm against dissolution and chaos. They hold their clod of soil in place and others do the same to create the landscape of community.

Communities across the nation and the world produce the many to support the few who make the tools and do the math to colonize the planets. Once the secret of warp speed is discovered, expansion of the species is limitless.

Perhaps learning Sidewinder, playing it imperfectly, is not a direct contribution to destiny. What can I say. Please yourself. So insignificant no one notices or cares. Yet some stories may be told for centuries. Homer, Shakespeare, Bible.

It takes constantly renewed consciousness to persevere, retell the stories and interpret lessons. You go, girl.
Engineers

Engineers know to build in redundancies when lives depend not necessarily exact replicas of the primary unit but systems whose secondary function is to carry the load when a primary system fails.

The principle applies to all organisms and the inanimate objects designed to support them.
But the sun and the rock that is earth
need no redundancies.
Burning, cooling one of each, they disintegrate without feeling for the mantle or the planets.

Some individuals
may, it turns out, be irreplaceable.
There is not always another girl singer
this one is the only one for us at this time, while we’re alive in this place with the random weather.
The one singer, leader
the one who interprets God’s words when she is assassinated, terminated, released we are not released, velocity registers a mandatory, momentarily momentous palpitation that is gone unlike Shakespeare so far. She was not the sun.
But she was found to be irreplaceable, unique her song.
Let’s Work the Problem

“Let’s work the problem, people, let’s not make things worse by guessing.” – Apollo 13

I like his confidence, that working the problem will certainly result in better outcomes than guessing. A rationalist who does not depend on a higher power to direct his decisions, but who may concede, observe, realize and accept that he lacks the data or the skills or tools to interpret data and these decisions he leaves to his god.

But not before thoroughly assessing the limits of his power. Guessing before guessing is necessary makes things worse. The skills, tools and experience are the accumulated wisdom of earlier experts in his field.

Yet each generation of communicants must examine the assumptions from which the mathematics, logic, science or law was derived. Rebuild the proofs from the simplest truths, laws, physics. Taking God’s first and only words and extrapolating correctly, getting the trajectory right for successful take off and re-entry.

And then to explain the derivations to your students. Until they too can care for the species and the planet, making whole sentences, formulas and melodies from few words, numbers, notes.
To Go On

If you see a hawk on a bough at field's edge beyond the corner you should have turned maybe it's a sign to go on.

Such as during an improvisation on Flamingo or I've Got You Under My Skin
you play in the wrong key or mode completely maybe it's a sign to go on, in the wrong key.

Or when my sons cry not wanting to be alone, I'm upstairs writing or just enjoying trees in every direction it too may be a sign to go on alone.
Black-capped Chickadees

Having not done the things I wanted to do and the things I’ve done not being what I wanted to do I sit here looking at lichen on the north side of trees.

Black-capped chickadees cheerful and truthful expression grouped in platoons, sharing the point.

The tribes travel together first finches, then chickadees following the squirrels every morning.

What luxury, abundance! Handful after handful of grass seed thrown, into wind. The corn ripe and the rye with it.

The other main families: pines, roses, peas, lilies, daisies, heath, birch and oak. Maple, honeysuckle, pink, mustard, cypress, mint, olive, buckwheat, primrose, willow, buttercup, saxifrage, snapdragon, cactus.

Truth may be ascertained by considering the truth we feel, the truth we’re told, the truth we reason, and the truth we’ve seen.

It is so good to be a chickadee. To tell the truth cheerfully and joyfully. In a way that makes others want to live.
To Fail Well

Fowl meadow grass—Glyceria striata—the striations on the lemma. Drooping rachis a weeping willow of a grass.

Recurring periwinkles, myrtle, Vinca. Helicopter petals. Evergreen leaves. Escaped from gardens, alien or native?

A little further by the spruce stand a new mustard, cuckoo flower—Cardamine—with pinnately compound leaves. What a find!

A good day turns bad. After you’ve died, one of them dogs digs up your grave. You may sit in the rain and think.

Maiden pink. The dark circle inside the flower a g-string or garter.

O to fail well. To lay low. To live long. To run slow. Feel the hill. Pressing down. Do less. Until one thing’s done well.

Certain Days

Certain days planned to be eventful I look forward to for weeks, setting and characters, and the work days march forward toward the horrible or pleasurable and the day comes, it comes without hesitating or hurrying although I hurry and hesitate and when it is here, going by during my hesitation or hurry did I think what I wanted to ask?
Belonging to the Loved Ones
To the Gods

To the gods, the individual won’t matter.
But we’ve said No to that. Here, you count.

Perhaps the gods, their tornadoes and weapons of mass terror
Are stronger than us. But we can read and count

And our music is more ethereal and real
Than theirs. They must divide to conquer us

But we have realized division is a form of multiplication
And have multiplied. Now there are too many Of us to count. But we have learned there are More planets in the universe than people on the planet.

A planet for each one. But we would rather stay Together, continue to discover what we’re living for.

Every human, and every animal, will count. And then We’ll invite back even the gods themselves.
Family of Weasels

On last night’s news I heard of an engineer named K_____ who invented the microchip and changed our lives. How the chip now contains a billion circuits which I still don’t get but what I do perceive is this engineer’s (a man modest in pride, fame and wealth) achievement of Teilhard de Chardin’s vision of a world that is one organism and a single-minded mankind.

Also mentioned were Edison, the Wrights and Ford, oddly not Einstein, Galileo, Copernicus, Newton, Hamilton or Jefferson, Christ or Buddha, or the unknown gatherers and traders who invented agriculture, money. 8,000 generations and each individual an experiment gone well or wrong, a chance to respond with love or grief to the universe’s effort to extinguish us.

Family of weasels, young ones playful. One reference says they’re vicious murderers, killing for sport. Absurd, I think, in the wild. Another clarifies they eat ½ their body weight daily, extremely active, high metabolism, hunt all their caloric needs before eating. And, like the raccoon, ferocious defenders of their young.
Ulzana’s Raid

In Ulzana’s Raid,
the Native- and European-American concepts of property ownership and rights are incompatible and irresolvable. McIntosh had no illusions about that. He said hating Apaches for killing whites is like hating the desert for having no water.
I suspect the movie’s not a good source of anthropological data and overlooks the commonalities among human communities to focus on just a few bold characters as all art must.

I consider McIntosh fortunate to have died commensurate with the way he lived his life, rolling a final cigarette, nothing between him and the desert, and no gravediggers waiting, jesting, defecating. Also,
he is lucky to have had one last, dispassionate friend to whom there is nothing left to say, the Chiracahua tracker Kah-ти-nay.

Last night’s performance of Beauty and the Beast
may have been the most victorious, ecstatic, cohesive moment in our little school’s history. Emily was Beauty, a filament of energy
who doesn’t like to be touched and has been known to punch boys hard. She had memorized her lines until she was hardly Emily but only Beauty in a blue dress unselfconsciously hiking up her tights between the Beast’s advances.
Is this done in every American town and the world over so there’s no need to feel lost or lonely ever?

There is no context for a man outside the platoon or raiding party, home or shop.
When violence comes to the neighborhood,
the hierarchy of communicants will hold or fold
it is then the peace work proves relevant. I noticed McIntosh, grizzled as he was, accepted the given hierarchy, a raw lieutenant’s orders, as he did the desert and Apaches, with a shrug and foreknowledge

104
of the outcome. If there’s anywhere with no Emily or Beauty we should bring them such blessings at the point of a gun. But there is no place without Emily, not the least-known prison in deepest space as long as we do not hate or hurt or shun the Beast.
The snail will get to Easter just as soon

—title from a ballad by Eustache Deschamps

Faulkner’s comment, I imagine him tossing it off like Yogi Berra between games of a doubleheader. The hero, the expert, the virtuoso has no real control, is going to feel unmitigated, unsparing forces, a mighty sun swallowed by a black hole, coughed up into a big sky. The past isn’t dead. It isn’t even past.

Versus Wayne Gretsky’s formulation. When I think of my death, I think of returning the chemicals and microorganisms I borrowed. If my plane goes down, when we hit the ground fruits with names will be waiting—squawbush if in the desert uplands, rose hips on a Vermont farm. The past is skating to where the puck will be.

I realize I have a religion, a science fiction the size of Jupiter which is, as these things go, small: Chardin’s theory unifying physical matter, rocks and all sentient beings into one—here’s the catch—conscious organism. Having said that, why not claim the same for the entire universe? Rock + DNA = soil. The past isn’t dead. It isn’t even past.

These trees cannot feed me. Self-sufficiency is relevant only in context of community, economy. Every drug, every vitamin is wrung from plants, tools and shelter are ore. A tincture, infusion, decoction, a douche, a compress, poultice, a salve, a syrup. A war president needs war. The past is skating to where the puck will be.

5 a.m., first of Spring. Robins still in flocks, not paired off. But crows mating on the sky—two couples dating a sign of luck, that Celtic god passing Peter talked about. 8,000 generations, I reach only to my grandparents but history and the naming of things extend our vision. The past isn’t dead. It isn’t even past.

I was handcuffed but not beaten. Humiliated but not insulted. And when I came before the judge, he was uninterested in vengeance or restitution. He had his own death before him, probably. I keep wanting to go back to before the big bang, reading books about the cosmos, FLO, LUCA, the texture of reality, consciousness, God-seeking. The past is skating to where the puck will be.

For the next 5-10 years my goals are: geographically compact and contiguous Congressional districts, term limits for Federal legislators and judges, election of the president by direct popular vote, public financing, spending limits and free air time for candidates, abolish UN vetoes, consent of the governed before governments can sit in global councils. The past isn’t dead. It isn’t even past.

No greater tragedy than the death of your children. Yet you live on, eyes drained of color. Old, you make plans. To know the names of every flower in the temperate zone. Every bird by its song. Just as you’re about to reach your goal, a tipping point comes along: a nuclear detonation or it gets too cold. The past is skating to where the puck will be.
Occupied

“And he is generous, and brave, and when the darkness comes to him he does not sit and weep.”

As a boy, I’d find my father sitting in the pitch dark living room, cigarette aglow, as I’d pass from my bed to the bathroom.

Did the boy consider, at that late hour, what plans or fears occupied the man? Not at all, nor did the man share with the passing boy what he thought.

Now he’s gone. Back from that piss and many another, I can well imagine the mystery I must be to my son. Has much changed but the date and where the man fought?

Most men, most times, abide in peace, leastwise not always angry or afraid they cannot save their children from the gas or the abyss about which God lied.

Yet, when the boy dreams through the room in the movement of his body there’s a sleepiness to make the man weep for himself, his father and the boy who comes to the darkness unafraid.
Avoiding Beautiful September

1

The personal is boring
as are my ruminations on the war.
What I need to do I can’t try:
wander without shelter in the backcountry.
Or go deeper into the polity,
join a committee or a party.

Minute by minute and season to season
I like my life but what does it add up to, what reason to go on? No better than a squirrel or a spider. Spreadsheets, fake books, girls
I want too mildly, modestly or morally to have.
Can the economy and community be called love?

You can be killed and buried in gravel
Your children can be failed at school and marched to war
You can be taxed and sent to gaol for the honor of it
And there’s nothing you can do about it.
Will we find the universe not large enough to hold us?
Will planet after planet be too old for us?

If you were president, what would your program be?
What one question is the key to another’s truth. How do you spend your money?
Do you believe in a god who can see all and understand? Or is he unable to care, a different species.

2

We take the long view that as individuals drop from sight, new enthusiasts will associate. Legs give out, lungs collapse,
but we do not let the circle lapse.
For every Aristotle
there are a million toddlers who will advance no memorable theories. But the mist on trees and mountains, sunrise over desert, are for every merchant, traveler.
My sons will take on cares, which toys are theirs,
as their parents grow older. Slowness brings us to our goal: do one thing well.

By that what is meant?
Don’t be a dilettante.
Not having found the greatness of a single, clear description, definition, the greatness comes in doing everyday what’s known.

The Recent and Long Dead

November is sweet, sunshine through bare trees, dry brown and fungus-free leaves companionably visiting among the dead as I did yesterday our town’s small graveyard military dads who recently died lie under polished stones embossed with actual photos of themselves and their wives flowers and plastic totems within a miniature picket fence overflowing with the emotions love and grieving of the living beside or not far from simple wafer-thin old moss-covered stones on which I could not read the names.
Such peace I realized which may be found around any rock or tree has escaped me while I pursue my particular happiness and our particular war,
and such a blessing awaits me, too.
Much Like Living

It was with almost joy that I watched at my father’s deathbed. His struggle to let go of his body and thoughts was like being at a birth.

But now I’m not so sure.
Now that I’m back with my life.
Unlike Lear who will never, never see his daughter again

I feel the man’s presence in every third thought as one who went before.
Twice that Spring he said
Rob, I’m dying
but I failed to ask my question

What is it like?
He wouldn’t have been able to say. Not because he didn’t know.
Because it’s so
much like living.
A Designer of Systems

“I design systems that allow people to do their best work regularly and predictably, instead of intermittently and by chance, and to produce outcomes in quantities large enough to make a difference in their communities.”

1

I say I’m a designer of systems, plans Man’s
Parts that stand together, set in place to serve
Trees and planets, too, which are unplanned by us
The observant, wise man Tries to understand
Name the parts, pistil and stamen Rocks, eskars Elements.

Winter is shuddering to an end, mud roads
Cardinal pairs
Robin flocks return that will soon pair off
Buds
Soils swell
Will I live to smell it again, learn the lobelias
Understand and name the parts
It ought to be a great comfort to be so insignificant
Go among weeds, a wind
Thinking to myself

One’s never alone
A dichotomous key is needed, a book of twigs and fruits
Accumulated over time and generations
Without it mine would be a blank mind

To be blank but knowledgeable Without any machinery
In a perfect silence
That is the definition of death for which we have only to wait
But in my panic last night I thought death’s inert
Grace requires consciousness
Hold on long to the senses
At least a century, maybe more
A boy hanging upside down from a fence at sunset, counting clouds

2

Now we go to our daily practice
And chosen disciplines
Sustained by the satisfactions of being good men among our fellow men Women
Choosing to do this and not that
With the finite days allotted us that at first seemed like a lot They’re now few
But the chickadee’s life to the chick and the cankerworm moth’s to the worm
Seem as long to them as ours to us
What question am I asking today
By now, past half a century, I should have chosen a discipline
And been satisfied

To be a war president one must have war
May you live in interesting times—wish or curse?
Squirrels, high in oaks,
Fiber, fat and protein in acorns
Strong runners, leapers, climbers
Should stay off the roads which some cannot avoid being where they’re born Natural selection is occurring
Those that look for machinery in motion
Hesitate or don’t as needed before crossing
Live in larger numbers than those whose modus operandi’s Guessing
The ravens eat the fur and guts of bad guesses off the roads

I impose my own small order
Having chosen mountains over plains or shore
Go to my daily discipline
And estimate the motions of the seas and stars
Measuring my satisfactions by my children’s satisfactions
Birding by Ear

The poem requires a mind that finds meaning, even divination, in language. Non-fiction, up to academic standards, demands evidence. Nothing less will do. Most of us read fiction and this needs a taste for action, motivation.

Lately, as have you, I have thought about our war and its purpose, motivation. But I have also closely listened to the wood thrush, analyzed its song like a tune by T.S. Monk or J.S. Bach concerto. One belongs to the loved ones who ostracize us, too.

A robin looks, hops, pecks, is never calm. It is the flute-like tones, yes, but mostly the patient, meditative clarity of the thrush that enchants. One wants to be that bird. How will we attain calm clarity for the species Homo sapiens? Through the discipline of asking questions.

Mimics, woodpeckers, sing-songers, hawks, chippers and trillers, whistlers, name-sayers, loons, owls and a dove, high pitchers, wood warblers and a word-warbling wren. Unusual vocalizations. What did the wood thrush sing teaching its young thrush meanings?

Too much commotion is the commonest of mortals’ sins. Peace has many faces, the wood thrush in the canopy is one. A word of praise here, an encouraging word there. A wraith, a ghost against an impatient man, verbose, unsure of the path, always longing. Nothing satisfies like the thrush’s song.
Stay together. Learn the flowers. Go light.

—title from lines by Gary Snyder

1

At peace perhaps too much a fine Spring rain
we seek news from the desert or capitol of those who have dedicated their lives to losing their lives for us adventurers, ancient honor, land runners this campaign a must to advance one’s career
a war president needs war

2

All you need to know is the names of things
chambers of commerce and large corporations elements, products, decay fungi, egg masses cultivars and their relation to wild grasses and the edge uses of herbs, languages of mammals, purposes of insects, placement of rocks
the names of everything by which we know our way

3

I’ve read about those remarkable souls who maintain self-control among murderers and the unentertained multitude who may have even spoken persuasively at the right moment for speaking and thus attracted a now unwanted immortality there are only two ways you can tell a bird of prey from a vision—humor and ritual

4

the Fedex gal
would be unlike taking off Emily Dickinson’s clothes over the counter perfume and spray paint hair postman’s shorts, black socks
a woman’s legs are much like a man’s yet she too is beautiful, too beautiful, weekends boating with her man Suburbs, lawns, blankets in a long, long nursery of babies napping, old, blameworthy and, I say this respectfully, blind certain and uninterested in motives more subtle than their immediate comfort
Who am I to complain?

Plants, poems: riches our financial advisor doesn’t count. Good and simple a man as he is. Comes tousled from early morning golf and puffy from a late night fight or lovefest with his wife.
Inchworm
letting out its rope down an oak.

Late afternoon meeting
like the dry samara, achene or capsule surrounding a seed how often have I tried to escape my need, community, chamber of commerce you cannot drive the roads are theirs and the signs, perhaps you can walk if you can name herbs and ores and are willing to die

O happy family
there’s some contentment in letting community and family decide your place in it. Gatekeepers—unconscious god, invisible hand, natural selection—kind when refraining from violence when not responding with force to the universe’s effort to extinguish us.
Eastern tent caterpillars

Mid-spring, skinny, black, blind
eastern tent caterpillars—
Malacosoma americanum—falling from the cherry tree leaning, human, over our deck.
Irksome. Mash and kick them with my feet, continue practicing or reading.

Three weeks later, reading late at night. Heavy-bodied black-eyed, reflexed antennae—many hundreds of moths crave the lamplight, some attaining extinction through cracks around the window screen. Vexing.
Until next morning, I look up the name that has eluded me all spring and early summer.

The single-minded moth and larval colony—
one small monophony.
America the seeing-eye dog

Policy or personal questions? In the poem Two White Wines a child adopted from Cambodia is a thing of beauty, and so she is as she showed herself to be yesterday. Lovely. However the poet implies market, i.e. economic, forces brought her to America when, as her parents know, it was war, the sad Vietnam War or the War with America as I think the Vietnamese remember it.

Honor and bravery equal courage. Reed Whittemore’s poem about a photo of Viet Cong prisoners, stoic, defiant under an American officer’s boot expresses admiration for the enemy. Then and now a dangerous sentiment. Your fellow citizens, denizens of convenience stores, even your family, may come to see you as the enemy. Once ostracized, the other, not belonging to the loved ones, you’re not long for this world of dew.

Tits and ass Ken says, describes America’s culture, not its poets or jazz. What’s worth fighting for? Your land, your right to be stupid on your land. Now there is one large land, one people and many. The vote is a crude, monosyllabic grunt, no way to express the subtle degrees of experience our long lives represent. Thus, it is good, when the family gathers, to talk, each person speak of what has been forgotten, forgiven and forgone.

Trading or taking every family must be tithed or taxed. Every man who finds his meaning in war will be pained into wisdom and gentleness. Who comes home comes home to a future that bypassed the fighting, or did it?
The oil must be sold,
even Saddam or Osama cannot withhold it.
You can drink your quota of water and still your heart can ache.

Empire or democracy of nations? We can choose to be the reigning kings between the last empire and the next or we can implement a vision of collective deliberation.
America the seeing-eye dog,
not America the junkyard dog.
Going question by question toward predictable, transparent governance.
Example: How can a people become a nation without resorting to violence or incurring violent reaction?
Courage

It takes some courage to eat a legume’s fruit knowing what is known of each poisonous part of the locust (although the flowers may be frittered).

What’s pushing up through the leaf litter before the canopy is out, past the stone fence? Wild lily-of-the-valley is my guess.

Of 140,000 soldiers, less than 1% have considered the fruit of the desert surprisingly good and varied. They have stayed and married women who are crows.

My own land is a land of wetlands but we too have crows. We have waited and waited for this election and now we’re divided into just two factions.

If everyone votes and every vote’s counted there will be nothing for either faction to crow about. All will be well with the republic and in the world what will be will be.

What responsibility does a citizen bear for participating in a war, blowing the roofs off houses, exposing the beds and clean-swept floors?

Warriors at the gate, you will not run, you will not bargain. Dig in deep, feet overhanging the abyss, protect your children.

I poured water into the dry vase of garden cultivars—snapdragon, phlox, begonia, bluebell, mint—and have they not rewarded me with their collective scent?
Providence

In disaster and war movies
the protagonist (Queen) and her immediate circle are protected from anonymous death. They may die (one by one or all at once)
but someone at least grieves.
Or the audience is full of glee.

But in Star Wars (for instance) what about the many hundreds of nameless, faceless soldiers in body armor and visored helmets, or planetary citizens, who fall by the dozens or more, like the leaves this rich fall. I think no one thinks

how one of them may have had her first lover the night before and one may be leaving behind two sons he read to last night and loved with all his heart.
Neither belief in God nor being a god entertained can explain or forgive this oversight.

Ah, how sweet
the film in which no actor dies or if they do it’s from their own disease or golden age.
People grieve for the soul that left and celebrate the soul that flew.

I was in Providence for a conference,
a town I had thought insignificant, not a city to be considered a city in flight. But that night they lit one hundred bonfires in the river running up through the streets and the face of every girl and woman with her lover by firelight was beautiful.

Had the city been nuked
by a terrorist or rogue nation I would not have minded dying there, with them, that night. It is possible to be several million strong and every homeless man with a singing voice belong.
At Basketball

Basketball stands for war or battle. That’s why I think about the players’ personalities, in my foxhole or squad. Danny and Ben are fast and smart. Dan especially can pass making him master and commander. To defeat them as we did is very satisfying. Ben’s five year old son is intelligent but distant. Disdains to answer my question Why are you you?

But I’m not here to catalogue the men’s personalities. I like them. But each of us has moved on many times, when _______ suddenly died the games went on with hardly a mention and his name has since been forgotten.

But even this, absolute mortality of not just our bodies but our names and souls is not what I came to talk about. Yesterday, between games, I asked Joe how Molly his daughter likes the high school. He mounted an impassioned defense of reading as the indispensable skill when I suggested math, the scientific method and history are essential too.

Also between games Bob diffidently asked why my kids are bald. I was moved by the care he took to satisfy his curiosity, concerned the subject might be difficult. He’s a political science teacher so I took the opportunity to ask What ails the republic? Of course I answered myself wanting mostly to hear myself talk about Iraq and how empire is self-correcting. For once I was amusing I thought, treating the subject with a light touch heretofore lacking.

But none of this is what I came to say. A new guy, very big and strong, a bulldozer under the boards with a good outside shot if needed got into a dispute with the other Bob who likes to tell people what to do sometimes, about an offensive foul Bob called which we almost never do. The new guy said If you can’t take it don’t play under the boards which is what I say when I’m pissed and don’t give a shit. Bob said You’ve been pushing and shoving me all day. I said He doesn’t want to be pushed and shoved which got a wry smile out of Danny as I put the ball in play.

Home Schooling

November and April when the trees are first bare and last naked have become my favorite months. All the food eaten except last rose hips and earliest leeks. Leaves innocent as dying men and infants.

Study one plant or animal each morning before writing anything. All reading—poetry or prose, truth or fiction—classified the same, the distinguishing characteristics being helpful or boring, beautifully or indifferently written. Then practice trumpet worried not at all about my sound or perfection. Afternoon, my sons return from school, math and (again) reading, piano. Wednesdays we walk observe plants and animals and record our observations to identify and classify later in the week. Nothing else special need be done but stay alive.
The End of Faith

–ending with lines by James Taylor and Kenneth Rexroth

Two thoughts come to mind this morning. The deficiencies in our systems of governance—local, global—and the first two pages of The End of Faith in which he mistakes acts of war for religious acts but recognizes understanding the workings of the world is not the same as knowing the unknowable.

Every new twinge provokes fear but what is there to fear? That one won’t live forever? The year of a man is the day of an inchworm and 267 years on a reverse-rotating Venus. A billion of anything is a lot unless it’s the distance one must traverse to look at God.

How much silence, or tinnitus, can you handle? A chipmunk cannot for long stand still. Once the twinge passes I’m off to the next task: building a constituency for this compassion, that solution. The dialogue starts with a question. To know the question is almost certainly to find an answer.

Conflating questions is the commonest of logic errors. No negotiation unless the violence ends. Why not talk while we fight? We can always kill, torture or assassinate between conversations. Justice, or retribution if you want, can remain on the table even after we achieve understanding.

Nature is my religion, I know no other, and community is my church. The sacrament is policy debate. I attend church everyday. Our jobs are hymns (the classifieds a hymnal) and payment for services rendered is sung praise and gratitude. Walking and talking is prayer.

Strategies to limit or subvert discussion are the only evil. Violence is one but not by far the only one.
What’s the hurry to build a highway or free a people?
The secret of life is enjoying the passage of time and time is the mercy of eternity.

Of Judith and Inanna

For the accountant, the librarian, on this cold day there is no revelation. He will go his own way to the roar of the tinnitus in his ears.
One wonders what is there to say. Yesterday a flock of bluebirds was the only color in the woods.
Have they arrived too early for their good?
Of Judith and Inanna I have Korf’s fears.

Inanna is generous, Judith is dangerous.
On each the wise elders depend for sustenance, protection. Agriculture is sexual and wars end when men remember cunnilingus.
To savor the young woman’s thighs and the old one’s food,
to water her womb and cut her wood.
Is this not what’s real, the actual, the animal?

The women I have known were bluebirds and crows, such nuthatches, cardinals, robins, an occasional thrush.
They did not consider their bodies holy,
they found my seduction easy. What good luck on the bed, in the light of the land, in our youth.
Our enemy eventually becomes our brother,
his misery lifted by coming to her city.
Caterpillar fur

Spring is sprung.
Clouds of maple.
Skies of pine.

Red in green.
Serviceberry understory.
Spring is sprung.

Skunk cabbage spathe.
Black birch sap.
Poplar flowers.

Opossum tires.
Spring is sprung.
Blackbird wing.

Wasps won’t sting.
My father died.
Town meeting Monday.

Spring is sprung.
Sing cuccu!
There’s no down side.

Infinite willow.
Leaning oak.
Spring is sprung.

Budding flame.
Budding thumb.
Cat claw.

Bird yolk.
Spring is sprung.
Dandelion

Shoots. Arrowhead
Roots. Waterproof
Boots. Old bed young.
Spring is sprung.
Ring and wrung.
Thank and thought.

Seed and sawn.
Wait and walk.
Spring is sprung.

Infestation

Full of doubt. About survival of the species and my own.
A plague of tent caterpillars, worse than an infestation,
an insurgency that has left the sky naked, bones revealed, trees knee deep in webbing.

Another way to look at it: The caterpillars have opened up the understory. It’s not a form of terrorism, it’s an opportunity for otherwise repressed species to assert genetic relevance.

A scientist gets out among the ticks and webs, observes
the march of barberries up the watershed, mustards spread in tire treads, and hidden among this mess of invasives, a jalopy of a hunter’s roost.

Beer cans are also diagnostic. Inwood Park, dog poop and abandoned cars, yet a copper beech around which Indians camped. The broken asphalt and Spanish language.
Humanity followed time there.

When I see a fox, a coyote or a bear, I think What Good Luck to be made of clay and alive this year. If I saw a cougar
I would not know what to do. It would change my life, like an archaic torso of Apollo.

Look for the silver lining. Walk on the sunny side of the street.
Count your blessings. Life goes on. A little better every day in every way.
You can’t take it with you. It’s only money. People who need people are the luckiest beetles in the world.
Two Hawks Aloft

Two hawks aloft
crows anxious banding together
Carol Ott comes over to my house, likes the warm weather, November a California Christmas and maybe species will change places to reflect that,
paints watercolor ornaments, gentle Jewish lady how far from her past is she now? or is she quite aware just not talking about it now
I wonder what she thinks the solution to Israel-Palestine might be ask her sitting around the pool next summer almost always disappointed people haven’t given the single state solution more thought we discuss Thanksgiving, the cleaning and cooking before and the cleaning after, then the insane Christmas potlatch deciduous trees have a special winter beauty, conifers among them.
All Soft Feathers and Flight Muscles

In the intermediate zone between heaven and hell opinions and complaints, after much moaning, may come to be held in common.

The way a flock of chickadees moves through the woods, cheerfully, each bird taking a turn on point.

All meaning must be found, here, in the middle zone, notwithstanding fears that rend and own us, of dying unknown.

A Spring day the flycatcher broke its neck against our bay window nothing changed.

I buried it, somewhat reverently, in a shallow grave. No differently, really, than I would a man who’d died suddenly.

Who’d left footprints in the snow which became wild lily-of-the-valley, running pine then snow again in time.

After long enmity Sally hugs me, asks if I’ve been happy. A moment in a year.

February, the light is long, more direct. It’s meaningless, repetitious but held dear.
The seasons inure us to loss

The seasons inure us to loss
whether a vote of confidence or no confidence
we are neither more nor less in our hearts and souls. We are still whole, history forgets our story

but immortalizes us, nothing is annulled.

Today’s board vote affects my livelihood
how and what I hunt and gather, money, but not whether
I live or die. That’s God’s and luck’s neighborhood.

I like capitalizing God
although I don’t believe and can’t imagine an intelligence managing or wanting to manage this interface of rock and flesh, fire and sod.

The Knowledge
tells us how to rebuild after an apocalypse,
not let the circle lapse, outlast the holocaust. I have no vantage from ridges I ascend Cercocarpus, turbinella, dry and hot places worry, planning, thought stop. May they inure me to my end.

The Perfect Year

The perfect year,
two equal halves.
One with leaves
one without.
Forest thinning out.
Bring indoors
swing sets, pools, smiles, thoughts.

Having enough and not much else is a lot.
The transfer of funds is a loving gratitude for work well done.
Not self-sufficient unless self is defined as family, community and nation.
The world.
Universe.
Thus,

I settle my haunches like a bear content, snug into coming winter.
House will be warm notwithstanding the Muslim-Judeo-Christian condition
not to mention the Hindu-Buddhist vortex.
Searching space for an entity
to unite us as humanity.
Carbon-based, earthbound meeting, understanding and absorbing the clicking, algorithmic logic of passionately computing species, insects, machines, bacteria.

A world moves only as fast as you think.
If it moves faster you’re not thinking, you’re it, dead, chemicals redistributed
in an ever more painless process.
What are my feelings exactly?
Systemic joy.
Lovely the logic
we have invented and applied identifying, specifying, classifying.
It can keep you busy counting, praying
while all the leaves are falling.
God is correction, feedback and bifurcation

Vivacious, practical, self-directed Mary Bailey, nice body
it makes no sense that just because George might never have been she suddenly becomes a shy, homely, lonely librarian without a dog or god.
No, it did not fundamentally matter whether George was born except to his mother. Potter might have taken over but why should the morality of a whole community decline? As for the ship going down, if a butterfly in China had fluttered right instead of left 10,000 years ago the tragedy would have been entirely averted in fact the whole war would not have happened!

I pleasure in and treasure my insignificance. If only I could be overlooked by the planning board and IRS.

One false note gives the lie to the whole premise. God died but was elected posthumously to the Senate as for the Big Bang theory, when it supposedly happened what surrounded that golf ball of matter and now what occupies the time beyond the furthest edge of space?
My wife over dinner laughs, says Face

it, you’ll never know so stop asking questions.
That is how we must make music, mindful of our extreme limits, our politics, our complete dependence on the theme of God as feedback, bifurcation and correction.
Organization man

Organization man. In the best sense creating the environment in which experiments can be savored and remembered.

Then there is the world of interlocked organizations. A world of missions and contracts finely tuned and binding.

Is the formation of associations as instinctual as nesting and gestation? A leader may be one who asks a question.

Or may be one imposing order. Imposed through consensus and broad shoulders. Waits, watches, acts his part.

I was impressed by the list of distinguished senators from Vermont. He placed himself among men, orators, imperfect, in history.

We march forward, imperfect in our justice and compassion. Overriding logic with conscience sometimes, not often, when it counts.

And mercy. A seemingly irrational, total abnegation of the markets, rules of war, law. Good to be so flawed.
Toy story

Bright and polite kids. Deferential squirrels. Leaders of leaders. Each man his own man living with his mate.
The great and the small,
all, the state.

On the other hand,
you find yourself
no hawk but stuck in traffic. Lack of spirit, spiritual identity, not free or free philosophically about no freedom. Caught no sign of letting go.

One. Bo-Peep’s sure Woody is her man, an answer to the question why be a toy? Buzz too would do.
Two. The men at least have missions leading other toys through risky situations sprinkler weather or just play, cleaning schedule.

So it goes not homosexual not hetero.
Not defined by circumstance or genetic material. Gone beyond the creator to an infinity that contains him and us and our collective minds. Question is can it exist without us? Would it matter? Yes, if that damn squirrel gets run over.

Until the fight is done

My confusion comes from too much doing. During the news eating cheese and crackers, drinking wine, thinking the world needs me.

Or the falling leaves, the days shorter but so much brighter. How the cloud cover of the canopy has lifted to reveal maybe God.

The longest continuous democracy may end in another theocracy. A bunch of voodooists with their hocus pocus blessings and understandings.

Unbelievable acorn crop this year! Skate on them like marbles. Last year was a maple year. The ash crop significant, too.

But not the cherries. Or a single pear. Blackberries held back too. Sure the towers were a violation, but they came to hold community.

One stands not apart or alone but an individual within his or her platoon. Committed to the mission and survival of the platoon.

Fedex leaves a package. There is or is no anthrax in it. It is our disappointment as Americans that the world cannot be trusted.

Yes, New York is the enemy and brother of Kabul. How does one reconcile those differing communities and be a non-violent human?

With words. Wendell Berry’s words. And service such as the secretaries of state give, leaving when one’s time and work is done.

Staying in the diatonic. Agreeing first on rules of engagement. Then engaging. Not stopping the fight or thought or song until the fight is done.
Operational Culture for the Warfighter

What would be the point, in this first winter snow, of going back to several of the women whose bodies I have known and wondering what they thought about all these intervening years. Inevitably it is their children, illnesses and death. Their art, their work, community. How their words enter your ears and stay forever! Rib cage and knee. How we lay on the beds in our youth and late afternoon light.

At no point will the snow and bare trees stop being interesting to me. Seven loads of apples went into Jim Kelly’s cider press Saturday afternoon. A paragraph from Wendell Berry’s recent essay was read. Those who felt part of that place were embraced. Fields of pumpkins, corn to the west and east. But I remember winter nights hurrying under elevated subway, Bronx. Alone, unknown, I did not exist.

The point being maybe now I don’t exist anymore than in Afghanistan. A land to be admired, like all lands. How lovely the harsh mountains and deserts, indigenous plants and people, adapted ungulates, carnivorous mammals. What is left of them after 10,000 years of human history. Much has been made of the snow leopard, by Peter Mathiessen. The city of Kabul is understandable using the very same analysis Jane Jacobs learned from New York City.

At this point I would have to overcome a deepening solitude, the snow of it falling about my ears, to hear their cries and joys and understand thanksgiving. Has my father gone to his grave without saying his one essential thing? He has said it, said it in war and in preparing boys for war, and in peace and his wife. Have my lovers gone to their graves already or are they still in life? I have heard a random, strange selection of their words.
Rereading

Rereading the poems of others and my own. Community across time and graves. What’s left exceeds in significance one’s last moment. Yet his last moment must have been exceedingly important for the poet.

Nothing he did that day will seem meaningful. While we prosecute the war a pileated woodpecker and red squirrel compete for sunflower seeds. A winter slow to assert itself.

I can still see my mother’s father and his bowl of filberts, almonds, walnuts quiet weekday mornings.

Both grandfathers read sports pages religiously. I don’t know if my grandmother who gave me the anthology of, to date, dated unreadable poems read poetry. I remember my mother’s mother spoke rarely as an animal.

Writing but not knowing where I’m going unlike Joan Didion justly cannibalizing candidates who didn’t read the Constitution, Bill of Rights or Federalist Papers. It’s late, I have not vacuumed or shopped for food. Instead I reread Phil Levine’s Salami.
Fear and Awe

Spring. Same plants, same order.
Monday morning, open for business.
Tractor-trailers, day care centers.
Every leaf that’s coming out is out.

To tonight’s town meeting I will go unaware and foolish.
It’s delicious, the unimportance of my feelings.
Even our particular war was small.
Europe had one last a century.

Hubble photos of events 13 billion years ago
Do not put me in mind of the species’ insignificance.
Just the opposite having witnessed the universe’s birth.
But birth from what preceding state? God again rears his hoary head.

They say one must let go and will let go,
God will decide what tragedy you need.
Not every seed becomes a flower,
Not every branch breaks out like a prosthetic trombone.

While the ancient Romans wrote of love
The ancient Britons wrote of war.
The Romans should have been perfecting their republic.
No god could do that work for them.

The November moth’s the fall cankerworm—Alsophila pometaria—
Slender-bodied, beige, beginning life as the well known inchworm.
In our war more children may have died than would have had the tyrant lived in fear and awe.
We can never know because we conquered.
Belonging to the Loved Ones

Why make a sound or noise or do anything to the page? Unison playing from polyphony, music evolves toward simplicity.

Gould’s assertion that complexity, NASA, is no more certain than a drunk in his city weaving, heaving his guts into the gutter; by any measure, evolution’s favored bacteria.

Therefore, the earliest poem taking joy in abundant crops and the lover’s body, 2K B.C., followed by Yeats’ Lapis Lazuli offers the completest hope to us, easily, for living this life without God’s help or even probability’s. We meet in the meeting house, argue and pray. We sit with the dead who gave their genes to whelp ourselves. Today, and then, the one question is What is the polity’s interest in the private soul? Being free means belonging to the loved ones. O the individual, alone, cannot be whole.

Governance evolves to democracy, man accepting sole responsibility for his thoughts, his wants, his words. Pure, vibratoless genes from a polyphony of wars.
The Summer Noosphere

Wet nights, warm days are what we want in the summer noosphere. Man’s mind one with weather. If this is true, life is good, or will be good. Can I be encouraged that my sons will find mystery on the planet as I did?

How sweet the slow spring! May already and the canopy not out yet. Woods quiet all winter. Now I can’t distinguish the many bird songs from where I sit. Red maple flowers and first sugar maple leaves are, to me, the Christ child that’s been coming.

The ancient poems and the new make the 1/10 inch of annual topsoil from carbon dioxide loading. As a humanist I want everyone pursuing happiness; as a naturalist I sometimes pray for man’s destruction. As a rationalist I admit I lack data.

O to play slow and sure, even when the tune is fast. Inside an aquifer of love for the audience. Not to fear or even necessarily obey the changing wind’s direction. Being here I breathe and make the atmosphere as seen from outer space.

The song of the world will often take you far from yourself. There will be no self. How will you know yourself? By knowing thyme and dandelion, the blue jay from the hawk, the heron in its swamp, black cherries and the one pear at the junction of the trails. They are yourself.
Two White Wines

Dinner with old friends:
salmon with red cabbage, asparagus, Caesar’s salad, penna with broccoli, two white wines.
Jane Jacobs could analyze how it all got to our table or even how their daughter came to us from Cambodia. The economy or market bringing a thing of beauty, the farms, the trucks, such comfort. The ancients knew this too yet we are anxious about famine, genocide and nuclear war. How can we organize (govern) ourselves to end self-imposed suffering?
That Quebec and Puerto Rico may secede peacefully at any time a majority chooses is a source of pride. Why not Kurds, Chechyns, Tibetans and Armenians?

Difficult to write a poem about it. At table, candlelight, we debate or whine about the other side winning and making a mess of our lives. The election could be stolen, tampering with voting machines, what policy question does that possibility raise? War in Iraq, school testing, prison population. Religion, the abyss surrounding the little promontory life.

It’ll all work out in the end. Go to your daily practice, be a good citizen. Another failed effort to write what I mean. Such confusion, yet two white wines.
Miniature Juniper

Although I hardly gave it a thought I didn’t really doubt our miniature juniper, a bonsai, would survive our desert vacation.

It likes the dry air of our home, needs water once a week at most and seems meditative and active, both. While away
I rediscovered my love of agaves– sotol and century plant–met Mortonia and became reacquainted with squawbush, its citrus drupe which makes traveling the long horizon of the desert uplands endurable.

Live oaks–emory,
wavyleaf–dominant and regally spaced giving ground to mesquite only on the sere sand flats. I counted and drew inflorescenses, spikelets, florets, awns but grasses remain a mystery their microscopic parts. This year I’ll study, give them serious thought before our Spring starts. The cactus wren was the one bird I could be certain about. Sunsets made me sorry
the desert is not my home. But the ocotilloes flowered before we left and that made up for the vicious attack of a hedgehog cactus.
Impressive, ponderosa pine and Arizona cypress
the canyon canopy watered with snowmelt and along the high cliffs limestone formations predating our arrival by ten million years of weather. Newspapers kept us aware humanity had not accomplished yet the end of history and that was fair. The planes were full of citizens who no longer applaud upon landing. Snow flew, not a pinyon pine or manzanita within two moons walking. On the dining room sideboard, waiting, our miniature juniper.
Okay Love

Dear Robert
    I’m enclosing the warranty for your shaver In case anything should happen I’ve circled the address where to bring it

Dad still isn’t feeling well and is going this week to the doctor I can’t imagine what can be wrong– but I’m really getting concerned

Oh! by the way did you mail that letter to the bank I hope so

Today we are going to a wake for Phyllis Spina. She died on Saturday– acute leukemia.

Your brothers are fine they’re off– Yom Kippur

All else is okay Love Mom
Election Day

This autumn morning with the birds waking up and the leaves changing is Election Day. I meet Jane Trichter on the downtown train and discuss Henry’s upset. Her skin is soft especially her cheeks and she is intelligent and sensitive. The subway riders do not recognize their representative.

All week, at the office. I accomplish nothing substantive but I keep the aides and interns working and cheerful. On Tuesdays there is always a wave of constituent complaints, by telephone. One woman’s Volkswagon is towed and the police break in to get it out of gear. Do they have that right, can they tow even though no sign said Tow Away Zone?

It is an interesting question but I try to avoid answering it. The woman persists and succeeds in committing me.

The people at the office want to bomb Iran. A few Americans held hostage and therefore many innocent women and children pay the postage. It may be good classical logic to hold responsible the whole society for the acts of a few, however, then I must begin to expect the bomb and the white cloud that waits. Apocalyptic visions are popular again but we are more likely to thrash the earth to within an inch of its life than scorch it to charred rock.

Corner of Church and Chambers, German tourist’s language, accent repels me although I wasn’t alive 45 years ago and many sweet, great Germans opposed the crazy Nazis but lately I’ve read Primo Levi’s If Not Now, When?, seen William Holden in “The Counterfeit Traitor”, have followed the argument started by revisionists who say the Nazi atrocities never happened.

War brought many shopkeepers, bookkeepers close to their earth, weather, seasons, death.
I see daily life as low-intensity warfare
as my father, the World War II vet, did.
Off to work we go. What is war?
Population control, mother of invention, diversion from the work of making life permanent.

Today is Election Day and because it’s a day off for most municipal employees, the City Hall area has been quiet and easy to work in. Henry and Jane hold a press conference on teenage alcoholism.
Leslie, the other aide, who I’d like to draw the stockings and clothes off of and feel her whole body with mine, goes home with her mother, leaving me standing by my desk with my briefcase at the end of Election Day.
Troy and Trinity

Learning disabled, hopelessly unemployed
Troy can’t write the address for his next interview.
Warehouse stock, 331 Tiffany Street, in the Bronx.
His girlfriend, Trinity, also unemployed, with one child by Troy. She’s more resourceful but doesn’t realize it. For one month she worked an evening cashier job until her mother refused to babysit at night. Wants to go out, live her life, too. Trinity made numerous appointments yesterday, can write and find the addresses o.k.

Troy has nowhere to live, has been crashing with a woman in the Bronx. She’s on public assistance, they share the bed. How Troy reconciles this woman with Trinity doesn’t matter. Survival precedes love.
Troy can’t meet the rent although she gives him subway fare. He dresses well enough in the youthful style, dark shirt, thin dark tie. At least no sneakers and saggy pants or skinny jeans. Smokes cigarettes but so do a lot of people. Hedging bets on life.

Trinity is tolerant of Troy. Understands his predicament. No stable home, no money. How does she feel about her kid? At least she has someone to love her now. Troy forgets to record the names and phone numbers of companies he applies at. Burned out on angel dust. Wants a job that pays and offers benefits. Too old and desperate for a work experience/basic education program. Needs a living wage, not a stipend.
But can’t read or write or even speak coherently.

Interestingly he’s not desperate enough to work fast food at age 22. So the woman on public assistance is a surer source of income than we think. Good.
Security guard may be the way to go with Troy.
No police record, requires no writing skills, just stand there and be big. A job with no security for the guard. Troy’s mother threw him out four years ago, although she helps out now and then. He dropped out of high school in the tenth grade kicked around the house and streets two years doing drugs and partying. Met Trinity, got her pregnant.

Does Trinity have a contraceptive in place? We don’t know. As employment counselors, is that our business? Only if Trinity brings it up. On the bulletin board there’s plenty of information about family planning clinics. When she lost that cashier job, I was completely frustrated, but not Trinity. Takes it all in stride. I gotta admire her cheerfulness, but why shouldn’t she be happy? She has friends, family, a community such as Hell’s Kitchen is, not the worst, and a purpose for living and acting in her kid. She feeds the baby, negotiates living space with her mother.

Troy and Trinity wake up, late August morning, hot and humid New York City. They have interviews planned as well as personal business and pleasures today. They have responsibilities, society puts survival on them, never mind their disadvantages. It is tough and it is good. Trinity will land another cashier position, maybe today. Troy will go for security jobs, I figured it out, the uniform will make him feel better, the check too. The work boring, easy, slow, perhaps fulfilling.
Dendrology

Surveying
northern autumn afternoon
Pitcherelli, ex-marine, body-builder,
Lussier, long-haired father of three dark-skinned children and myself, sharp-edged loner, ex-lover of a fair share of women are belly-laughing in the dying sun. Clouds.
The crew, in timber.

Laughing
over recent visits to marvelous cities where we could not keep ourselves from touching the terminal buds of numerous exotic trees and attracting ridicule of stylish girls and tame boyfriends.
Pitcherelli before the Albany bus station shaking hands with a red pine planted thirty years ago.
Lussier, one hand in a child’s hand and the other feeling scabrous bark of urban woody plants.
Myself among partially shaved heads and leathery aromatic jackets getting close to the hairy bud of an unidentified poplar or sycamore.

People laughed, but we laughed best back on our mountain under the blackening weather.
Life is not a curse

I’m not hard,
I’m scared.
I thought the cherry was the birch.
When the cloud cleared
I was still afraid.

At my best
I accept death
As a necessary search, wary
Of philosophies
That assign us souls but not the trees.

Nonetheless
I want long life, yes,
I want to plant my seed and walk the wilderness.
But not yet.
First I must just sit.

Sit and feel the pain
That keeps me sane.
Eat my meal quietly and remain
A guest
In the body I know best.

This morning in the east
The sun rose on the lake. Again
I breathed. I was blessed
And thought to say
Life is not a curse.
The Canopy and Economy

Sun and traffic–day economy.
Six a.m. drive to plywood mill. Too tired to be angry. Each day a step toward death. What is being accomplished? The small satisfactions within each day. Book consciously read.
And frustrations. Package dropped, honey jar broke.

One of 175 soil types. With the fifty tree species comprising the canopy under which Eric and Lisa clean their baby’s face.

Sun in winter, old apples.

Inside the school
a brilliant but rebellious history teacher is suspended by the school board.
200 students
wearing armbands and painted teardrops protest. Another 400 are silent.

Within each structure
human dramas and routines.
Nancy will not love
any man who cannot do as many push-ups as she.

Trees grow,
porcupine scat in snow.

No job,
no niche,
no existence.
How you earn money is who you are. You are what you do to get food to eat and shelter from the winter, summer heat.

Each morning I seek God by holding still waiting for the smoke to be black or white coins heads or tails wind dark or bright.

Flock of evening grosbeaks
nipping maple buds:
the sign I need.

*       *       *

Less need = more wealth.
2/23/89. So much equipment just to sleep.
More than a bare floor.
Plumbing vs.
wash at stream, find a log in woods.
Implcements of human existence unlike the deer or bear who nip buds, forage berries.
I cannot eat the gum out of balsam fir or bark from a popple.

I am not Wendell Berry with a wife, a farm, philosophy.
I like the accuracy of counting pear thrips in maple buds.
8/bud = complete defoliation.
This insect has four wings fringed with hairs and is minute, 2.5 millimeters.
Two species within the genus:
one with tubular abdominal segment,
the other with conical abdominal segment.
Sugar maple their preferred food.

All I need
are names.
Names and habitats.
Elements, products, decay fungi, egg masses.
Marriage, copulation, regeneration, education.
Machinery, accounting, hand tools, laboratory.
I need your names and histories.
Sexual histories, books read, unrequited loves, significant landscapes, broken bones, periods of boredom, favorite shows.
Immediately means without mediation, intermediate moments time in the middle.

Time in the middle
time in the middle.
I’m bummed I never saw a dinosaur, an ice age, a cave man, even missed the last world war.
Thanks to paleontology, geology, archaeology, history mind equipped to take time out of the middle.
It’s in our DNA!

Why should she love me, her tenant?
Because I pay the rent on time.

Excellent. The white sun rose and lit the frost.
Early February, late March, or in between.
Birds begin discussing family. Sap starts to flow.
Where the borer spirals in, it comes out wet.
Birch or maple.

I watched from the window. Beautiful but no desire to go out and touch swelling buds of elderberry.
Is this shrub crazy? It knows what it knows with elderberry knowledge.

Come Spring, so much to identify and name.
Insects, diseases and new flowers.
Lepidoptera, root rot, the pinks.
I think I might get married too and watch the moons pass through the mists.

March rain.
Some snow remainsoads dangerous but truck deliveries must be made.

The light
pushing back the dark.
Bark going softer, slippery at the cambium. Sap simmering. Summer and spring are here and there
although only winter birds are in the air.
Some buds break swell want to turn inside out but wait knowing better.

I too will not break or run early hold hope bound by ropes of discipline, experience time the magic moments to come take the last sleet and pain slap in the face glad for predictable seasons.

We anticipate however drought, maple defoliation, increased gypsy moth infestations which some attribute to our existence.
That may be true.
Or it may be that the universe has reversed its decision on us and there’s nothing we can do.
But we will do what we can and some things we shouldn’t because that is human.

Continuing into the space inside me unconnected to the light switch, plumbing fairly independent of materials beyond food and sound.
Where I pray like an oak that the light will enter me unbroken, forever
and I will live the meanings in the wind.

Basic necessities, wood wine and friends. And the names of everything
by which we know our way.

Love and Death and Governance

First Living Organism

Anyway, there is love and death and governance. With the birth of my sons, love was fulfilled. There is no romance left in love for me, women are another form of men. Perhaps their toes are painted rather than blood-encrusted, but blood runs from their bones, their eyes are friendly as camera lenses, muscles hungry. Death continues to be my every third thought, fittingly. Occasionally I feel strong, but when I don’t it’s death waiting. I think I know it’s a waste of time to imagine being dead, as if being dead were a form of living. It’s not, but last night I was reading about the efforts of astrobiologists to identify LUCA meaning Last Universal Common Ancestor and FLO, first living organism, and that gave me a calmer feeling. Bringing me to governance, how we manage together between birth and death. What can I say that hasn’t already been said by Aristotle and Plato, the Republicans and Democrats, Hamilton and Jefferson. To start, your daily discipline is a personal governance. There are many ways to know a person: by their god, by their fears and appetites, by how they spend their money or organize their time. Who is in authority, who is in command here? The one in authority is not necessarily our leader.
Patience

I live in a mountainous community about 140,000 strong. My irascible, aggressive temperament toward my fellow citizens has exiled or sidelined me to a peripheral almost insignificant role although when I arrived I was considered a problem solver, even a savior of the poor and the wealthy classes who feared for the future. Why mention this. He who knows patience knows peace. I have surely lost face often in my life. As a kid, lost most fights, as a man, chosen last to lead the squad or platoon. Only when every known leader had died did those in authority decide to use me. Someone must begin to write the federalist papers for the world. And, of course, it’s being done and heard. Books in print, blogs, debates. My vision is a world where you can fly from Madagascar to Mississippi and be greeted by a sign that says Welcome to our land. Go about your business, setting off no bombs, and fly home. Perhaps take a lover for one afternoon.

The Machine and the Season

The machine and the season are so far incompatible. The machine claims electrical problem. The house leaks from rain. The men who left the machine have started their own business. A new endeavor by which they will keep warm and purposeful. The junior partner, heavier, says the Grand Canyon’s not so grand. Jaded individual or one to set himself against the depths, abyss? Man’s systems. Man made the machine (and the town) from rocks mined next door. Some few men understand these invisible electrons moving the machine to perform. I still cannot imagine, i.e. my mind cannot move fast enough to know how so many particles can be sorted and split so quick to make words on a screen. My simplicity is terminal.

Saving Grace

Today it is fall, first day for long-sleeved shirts. The boys at school. I admonish Zach not to whine and complain about the work. Lately reading or practicing piano, prone to fits of frustration. To the point of claiming belly pain. Last night I dreamed I had pushed him to suicide. It is so important for a man to do no harm. This is what makes us crazy against Wolfowitz, willingness to kill to do good. Someone very sure of himself and shining, much wiser and more compassionate than me, has calculated for the world that more lives now for fewer later shall be sacrificed. The people he serves are cantankerous, disorderly, selfish and complaining. The same diverse, spoiled, unpatriotic revolutionaries as at the nation’s beginning. Their refusal to be more than the sum of themselves is their saving grace.

Politics

Politics can be an escape from the personal, the debates are of little interest to a man in hospice. Will the machines do their work? How will we make decisions together? Roger Johnson’s gravel pit must be killing his neighbors with the noise of boulders being pulverized to rock but Roger is certain his business is necessary for the public good. He knows he has a right to use his property as he sees fit. There is a noise ordinance, a state employee will travel out to measure the decibel level in your front yard as compared to the ambient noise level. There is a measurable amplitude beyond which the legislature has determined no citizen may be exposed or corporation go. It can be measured.

Measure for Measure

Measure for measure, all’s well that ends well during a midsummer night’s dream for the merry wives of Windsor. A million or more poets but only one Top Bard. How did he know so much about kings and fools and murderers? An Elizabethan and no Freedom of Information Act. Today it is fall. The legislature and president are at work and so are our machines. One by one and then in armies the leaves come down. It is not that someone must decide, we must decide how we will make decisions and where authority resides. What am I learning, sitting, watching the season turning? Content this morning to admire my sons’ photos, reread my own poems searching for the prize answer, and answer the phone. I seem to be alienating potential business partners with a take it or leave it comme-ci comme-ca attitude. All you can do, the best that can be done is to go to your daily discipline. Driving home or waking up at night I think I’m dying. Do the much-admired writers of our time die more content than that?

War All the Time

War all the time. I’ve been fond of saying what distinguishes America is its daily low intensity warfare. Endless but not fatal conflict. Chambers of commerce, municipal government, big corporations wrestle nearly naked and will lie as needed for what? I tire like an 80 year old man of the storm and worry. I remember my early years when I had no known skill to offer and elections occurred without my vote being solicited. I noticed no harm or good I did was noticed. Autumn was all mine, mine alone, I was alone in the world with autumn. My mind could not stand it. I cried out for comfort, someone to obey. I needed to grow up and know money.

The History That Surrounds Us

I’m not going anywhere, I chose to stay and hold my clod of soil in the landscape of community oh blah dah. I want like Shakespeare and other writers to discern the motivations of women, men, see through their lies to a humorous truth careless about success and able to explain why what happens today or on September 11th obtains. I was impressed by the critic who found that Shakespeare in Hamlet had tried to write about the thoughts of a man suspended between having decided to act and the act itself. Why bother he soliloquated why commit or submit to the great moment when mere men of bones and dust, disgusted with themselves and others are the actors of the moment, beheaders, rhymers, debtors. And, of course, the answer comes to one in the night like Chuang-tzu, or Lao, why not? The great moment is no greater than the small and the small no smaller than the great. You perform the history that surrounds you and go to your daily practice.
A Systems Guy

I’m something of a systems guy. I want the truth and death and worth to be independent of individual motives, paranoias, prejudice, peccadilloes, virginities, crucifixes, paradoxes, protons, protozoa or curses. I want pure human machinery, stainless steel, clear thinking, even handed, not a doubt that every doubt is wanted, needed, good to the last drop toward the ultimate ignition into outer space, colonization of diverse planets and immortality of the genome. Here’s what’s odd. While enduring ever more frequent panic attacks (and nudging toward survival and self-sufficiency my offspring) pounding and pinching my skin to stay sensate, maintain consciousness, I parabolate (always orbiting myself, eye on the tip of my penis) to another extreme, i.e. my belief mankind can escape the earth unlike Hamlet’s dad’s ghost. A system is a set of inputs—values, policies, objectives, procedures, data—organized and repeated to generate significant quantities of desired outcomes without redesigning the system for each individual outcome. I told John Russell from Amnesty International at Jack Shwartz’s daughter’s coming of age party about my plan to reorganize the U.N. so only the democracies can vote and no nation has a veto. He said the world’s not ready, with absolute certainty, knowledge and authority. I looked out the hotel window, this was shortly after 9/11, at dozens of American flags and a lone security guard. I’m always right I said to myself.
Just Us

Suppose there is no life in space, just us. And we inhabit Mars, air condition Venus. Hold family barbecues, national holidays on Mercury. Fly to Jupiter for spas of ammonium nitrate. And go farther afield in the galaxy and on to other galaxies leaving behind map-faced men, crow-like women and open gates.

Who will be the first-born human on the moon? News from the moon colony! And so on, on every planet where we’ve visited and established dusty villages or vast cities over thousands of centuries. Then, will we not have somewhere, somehow, under some sun’s rays become another species?

Born Again

If, as they say, the cells of the body are replaced every seven years, then I’m a new being since my sons were newborn. I have died and been reborn neither better nor worse yet remembering feeding them while dancing to Moment’s Notice, as they attended with new minds.

Having died, as such, I find I do not mind quiet living with the purpose of a cell unbound by minutes or moments as men know them. There are seven deadly sins, seven ways of remembering, seven stages in which to have been or continue being. None of them recur after one’s reborn and none are known to us from before we’re born.

Of the two young people to whom I was born, one has lately died. I do not so much mind. Although I do not, he believed he’d be reborn and who can say what happened to his soul or cells? Perhaps in Christ we continue being, or with some other deity, as the churches claim monotonously, momentously, demonically and deviously. It seems about as relevant that seven rhymes with heaven and rhyming’s a mnemonic device (for remembering).

But remembering what? To go to the daily discipline to which you were born? I fought seven forest fires, took seven lovers, my sons are seven, and my mind is the sole owner and subsidiary of these memories and moments. Unless I am to be reborn they disappear with me. Masefield’s poem continues to be the most honest and chilling assessment of our souls’ and cells’ disbursement. I can imagine stem cell research may lead to a cure for dementia, loss of memory about who you are and where you’ve been. If one’s not been born this doesn’t matter. But if you’re being reborn, in the sense of “he not busy being born is busy being reborn” (Dylan), then it is best and most correct to consider your last moment of a continuum with moments endless and entirely in your mind.

The mind is made of cells and moments, seven billion of them. Remember to be born and reborn, early and often.
Can poetry matter

In the debate between accessible and difficult poems
Poets’ poems and poems for people
Only the single poem and private reader matter

Both kinds and anything between can matter or not Solid or made of air, a vase or heavy clay ashtray
One word repeated or many like a lei

An acquired taste, like wine, and like wine
Not sustenance, yet men die with their miseries
Uncut without it, news and mere matter

I advise everyone to keep a personal anthology of poems that matter
Or not. Perhaps it should be novels. Stones, insect wings, Feathers, Birds you’ve seen, People loved.
Wetland Song

The April morning’s quiet and so is the November.
Wherever people outnumber trees or the dominant cover type is unquiet. Nothing wrong with that.
Walt got it right, and Jane Jacobs:
the city is an experienced,
used beauty. Her toes are long, nails thick and hair thin. Yet her kisses can be sweet; or smell of shit. All my life I’ve tried to point my window toward some narrow wedge of nature.
On Seaman Ave., over the roof beyond the chimneys to the park where every dog was walked.
Could I survive soot and an air shaft now, pigeons and cats, or even a desk in the legislature for my lot in life. How about prison like Etheridge Knight, Nazim Hikmet?
I’ve gotten soft.
When he builds that house in the pocket wetland my window now looks out on, the developer will have given me what I need.
Amphibian mortality, gravel, fill,
oak, ash and maples felled. Good to the last drop is our bitterness, our love.
Communicating the Bird
While Sleeping

Spring peepers stop peeping. A satellite crosses sky. One peeper keeps peeping in time to the satellite blinking, an eye. Deep thinking.

The Self

“The study of myself is the study of all I do not know” – Montaigne

What kind of day was it. Clean the house. Notice the full moon. Read a sheaf of old poems. Listen to jazz tunes. Open mail.

Refuse to make of it more than it was. What is it for, don’t ask. Squirrel or spider your cares are yours to savor, enjoy or fear. Tinnitus of the ear, sinusitis of the nose, bale contriteness of the soul. Moriturus.

Consider economy soul’s eponymity. The opening canopy panoramic mystery.

Neither joyful nor depressed. Not the worst and not the best. I lived, as did my dentist. To the east and west, the self.
Who should I thank?

You may feel about the planet what you feel about a great baseball team or band:
that once there was a moment when, unknown to us at the time, we convened and lost and found ourselves in what we created.

Who should I thank for this day?
A fresh-mown lawn is a robin’s repast.
A bear a black bear a rolling delicately dancing graceful as silence sailing through the ferns and understory unafraid and in no hurry.

My musician referral service, vacation rental business, nonprofit management system, plant identification database, great American songbook and anthology of poems. Coach says in a thousand years back and forth games like lacrosse and soccer will be played against genetically engineered primates

but baseball will be played solely by humans.
In a thousand years, amen.
Ectopic Heart

Ectopic heart beat. Acoustic neuroma. Sleep apnea. Getting older blessing against alternative.

Neither hate
nor repair.
Immediately
the woods were familiar—bunchberry, clintonia.
Red spruce, yellow birch.

Heron rowing northward overhead
a sign: good luck.
Or was it just a crow. Rock thrown.
Don’t know.

Life’s ending.
My sons have each other for laughter
at their tragedies.
Avalanche, cataract.

Clean house or run for president.
Power and talent
are bones in your feet.
Nature’s the bed
you’ll sleep in.

Thyroid storm.
Screech of the long-eared owl. Even if portent of death
it’s welcome.
Eye of the tropical January sun

Exercising belief about unknowns.
Makes sense to take your best guess.
Using history, numbers, extrapolation.
Getting the trajectory right for re-entry.
Few dissenters left for climate change, evolution.
Nuclear power brings a process to earth that occurs only in space. Dangerous but necessary? Not a risk-averse weasel.

One among many mammals is the weasel, not known for its consideration of unknowns but, for its extreme caloric needs, considered dangerous. My wife says in England violent gusts forced a locomotive off its tracks. One interpretation might reasonably be that the mother, earth, has stopped mothering man. We’re entering a period of unknowns and must evolve.

What might this involve and what adjustments are possibly feasible? Walking rather than riding to the subway entrance, using less electricity until more is known, preserving agricultural soils and forest land, buying fewer plastic contraptions. My brother’s washing his pajamas less often.

None of this may make the slightest difference in how the earth and the sun and universe revolve. But we are human and addicted to action, the probable less attractive than the possible. Also, there’s no percentage in respecting death unless it’s imminent. Better to remain centered, focused on food, child-bearing, war and the poem.

All driveways plowed, all lawns mowed. Just in time before the first snow, I raked our leaves. Two eight hour days. What percent of all time is that? Draw a ray with point A the first pile of leaves extending to the extrapolating end of universe.
.01 of Aaron. Zero of Zach.
Hawks playing, hunting, mating, canaries in the mine.

Having been too many places to count.
Sex bars, infant formulas, fire crews, last rites, permanent jobs, traffic tickets, judges’ chambers, out houses, wedding banquets, boiling teapots, frantic centuries, facial tissues, presumed innocent, clear intentions, stainless steel.
Spiderweb glove. Deerfly earring. Daddylonglegs seeingeyedog.
Memorized songs. Privatized loans.
You cannot know what you’re doing until you’ve done it. Eye witness.
Erudite sweep the floor. Articulate make the bed.
Eye of the tropical January sun. Slouching toward temperate zone.
We like trees

We like trees.
Rocks. Crows.

Trees are good.

If they leave,
we’ll leave, too.

Snow. How come some there, none here.

Sun can kill or be fun.

God can’t care about you, one.

Jacket caught in thought thicket.

Barberry, rose thorn in nose.

Elect a nobel laureate not a noble idiot.

Eat. Eat so much your bones grow.

Kinnakinnik. Chinquapin.
Almost edible words.

Naked buds, bears,
understory shrubs.
Man’s Mood

Generally cheerful institutions school and hospital, The Constitution, roadways with their yellow stitch lines.

Order on the mountainside, in the city,
the veneer is thin, the people thrifty,
the freedom to associate unlimited.

Smoke the cigarette, sound the subwoofer,
I woof and bay like every other dog, proof
one cannot escape the planet, life’s foolproof.

Magic’s secret—rabbit, lion—the inner animus emerges from the hat. One eats magicians, the other’s skewered for dinner.

Thus, happy and sad at once, death a solace and a fearsome fright. As the dashed lines pass, confidently, and when necessary, I drive fast.

An afternoon, one hundred years of solitude for our silver maple. Microscopic magnitudes:
the snake’s skin, the fly’s wing, the man’s mood.
Marines Call to Say Hello

Marines call to say hello, impress. I’m over 35 but my boys 19. They could go: Hide!

One moment spent tying a shoe,
another dying, gunshot wound or poisoned food.
Events in their mere chronology make no sense.
And the details of yr dad’s life don’t either.

late night
quiet cigarette smoker. But next day, the butts cleaned into the can. Who does that?
Lady in a skirt or overalls rolled up – cigarette smoke.
Now it’s yr dad.

Yr dad who watches for war.

Even if Uncle Sam disbands, dissolves
we the people will still be here and stay involved with North America. The purple mountains majesty and shining seas little people, big people, brown, red and white. Addicted to action movies.
Perhaps there is no choice. One must sit sitting still as a buddha, sitting bull.
I can imagine myself and all others – drivers, voters, runners – little fetal muscles at first. Metastasizing. What’s it called when the cell at the tip of the organ or organism, divides, and the organ grows? It’s called girl on a bicycle.

I find I make no sense. Her cunt, a practicality to her, is delicious to me
a miraculous sea lettuce or snapdragon. You’ve heard it before.
A moral dilemma wrapped in robes and silks and odors. Yet, come close, and business beckons work gets done, life goes on, hair grows in, we go on vacation
the Marine Corps calls, desperate for new fetuses, to teach purposeful workmanlike killing I’ll do my own killing, thanks, when violence comes to the neighborhood
    if I’ve got your back your back’s gotten and if I’m on point, the point’s taken.

One world under God invisible with liberty and justice for all who Art in heaven
what the hell’s his name.

    Nemesis.
    Hysterical.
The small war of an especially inept empire. The world’s too big to swallow as the Krauts and Nips found out. Empire is self-correcting. Them dark-skinned mustachioed shitheads who can’t fix their own electricity seem to be kicking our asses pert good. As did the gooks before them. All to the good. A good lesson to know and then we all become friends following the brawl. We apparently cannot skip the fight. It must be fought, and fuck the girls.
Snow. . .

A year in which each day brings one ten tenth inch.
First the window sills are covered then door jambs. Our lips are sealed then our eyes shut. Sleep like this we’ve never known. Will Spring return?
Unknown. We care not.

Rhodora in Winter

Rhodora in winter, capsule like a claw, remains of the 5-part flower Emerson saw, gone to seed. Deciduous blossoms have their own winter beauty and a power akin to the fittest’s survival, self-same that brought me, musing, here. Large globose buds!
(that dwarf the rose’s but not the butternut’s) discern it from other Ericaceae that surround this inland wetland. The Lord all claim to worship is not superior to thou. I’m passing through naming you, your parts, and the autumn elaeagnus who is your neighbor. Good a walk as it gets before edible understory herbs sprout.
Words for Birds

First person singular prohibited. In order to be more crow.
War! war! war! war! war!

Then there’s that lowland wetland bird around the stunted red pines crying
Birdy, birdy, birdy, birdy.

Hear the redwing blackbird chirring Her, her, her. . . she as one might expect, Spring.

Words for birds
since they’re inaccessible. Aim binoculars left, right, up, down—missing every time.

At the piano recital
Aaron made the penguins run, run, run, not waddle,
from a hungry polar bear!

Everything passes, even a massacre,
but birds outlast cars
and words like chemical and holocaust.

Woodpecker climbs oak,
Connecticut.
Not one neighbor heard the knocking.

The voice of a pewee whose nest has fallen out of the tree.
Oh my! Oh me!

What did the wood thrush sing that summer evening
teaching its young thrush meanings?
Enduring Spinning: Agriculture, Culture and War

You can feel it spinning fast
the Chinese, Japanese, American and European junk orbiting at several thousand miles per hour could punch
a hole in your armor, future. Thanksgiving passes, then Christmas.
A nuclear detonation, we absorb that fact. The scientist in us delays sadness by recording observations. What is is, sorrow’s for tomorrow.

By reducing probabilities to near zero I hope to avoid sorrow.
In yr suburb.
In history when there were many fewer people we still found reason to cross space, explore, trade and war. Now overpopulation may not be the problem but food and water shortages get our attention.
I have Korf’s fears.
And hear what I want to hear.

Some hear singing, some hear speeches or complaining.
Martin Luther King sang his complaints, dreamed of a brotherly nation which came to pass, spinning fast, past Thanksgivings, past jailings into reconnaissance, small wars, drones, renaissance, inventions.
At the border,
where the Juaristas fought Maximilian:

Benito Juarez (1806-1872) Zapotec Amerindian who served five terms as president of Mexico. He was the first Mexican leader who did not have a military background and also the first full-blooded indigenous person to lead a country in the western hemisphere in over 300 years. For resisting French occupation, overthrowing the Empire, and restoring the Republic, Juarez is regarded as Mexico’s greatest and most beloved leader.

Each soldier chooses what war at what border or just shows up spinning with the planet.
The neighborhood and surrounding nature is orderly.
But always there is implied force, violence holding it together, chaos is contained kept out of the playground, government buildings, children’s games but lies within the force maintaining order, a spinning tumor, a gyroscope of inertia.
The force of the spinning, the speed of the force bring one to one’s death seasons, weather, earth.
While the emperor’s being beheaded enduring seeds are discovered and invented, cross-fertilized and bred.
Corn, yams, potatoes, sunflowers, rice.

Food is life and a good study, useful discipline daily meditation.
The fighting man protects the farmer and the farmer feeds the fighting man.
They elect the governor who serves the people. Peace out.

Peace and war are transitory manifestations of spinning electrons, planets.
The sun’s a nuclear detonation, essential to spring and planting. Food is life. Seeds endure if man goes to his daily discipline. If woman is man.
Birth and death
together are orderly, the border can be known, voluntarily. How we live together, by prayer or force, is our story.

Knowledge from laboratory to starry corridor keeps us very versed.

Did Juaristas consider the rights of animals not to be eaten?
Not during that spinning.
And perform the history that surrounds us.

All that can be done
is written in the spinning:
The people of the land, the Indian farmers of North America – like their counterparts in Mesoamerica, the Andean region, and the Amazon – have continuously cultivated maize, beans, squash and other crops for more than five thousand years. One of the salient features of their traditional farming systems is the high degree of biodiversity. These traditional farming systems have emerged over centuries of cultural and biological evolution, and they represent the accumulated experience of indigenous farmers interacting with the environment without access to external inputs, capital or scientific knowledge. In Latin America alone, more than 2.5 million hectares under traditional agriculture in the form of raised fields, polycultures, agroforestry systems and the like document indigenous farmers’ successful adaptations to difficult environments.

The Ordinary Care of Providence

Madison’s defense of the establishment clause to the Virginia legislature:
Religion both existed and flourished, not only without the support of human laws, but in spite of every opposition from them, and not only during the period of miraculous aid but long after it had been left to its own evidence and the ordinary care of Providence.

May I say electromagnetic waves. Radiant energy. Light travels in waves Waves of what? Electromagnetic waves consist of electric and magnetic fields oscillating at right angles to each other and to the direction of motion of the wave.

All waves can be described in terms of amplitude, wavelength, frequency and speed.

Waves of what?

Think of a hand waving. The wave itself is virtual, ideal. The hand and eyes are waves. The wave’s a quantum guess.

Religion and electromagnetic waves—visible, audible, ideal causing real reactions in earth-time (real as it gets). Madison’s ordinary care of Providence impossible to handle.

Needed is a medium: antenna, cathode ray, page body hairy, sweaty diurnal
with the capacity to say Providence electromagnetic visible light element god.

Alone in your life and body. Say the heavy word weighty word isotope charged word (ion god)
the particle physicist and political philosopher have it over the poet who is sharing ignorance pretty much all he doesn’t know.

Or who stays within a dimension she knows she knows, extrapolating her hand in a child’s hand or husband’s hold or nest in a tree hole limited government separation of powers daily low intensity warfare light, radio and gamma waves

Waves of what?

Matter can be treated by both wave and particle theories (the duality of matter) since its convertible counterpart—light—has long been treated successfully by both theories.

convertible counterpart light matter light

Solutions to the equations are called wave functions, or orbitals.

Religion or the duty which we owe our Creator and the manner of discharging it can be directed only by reason and conviction, not by force or violence. It is proper to take alarm at the first experiment on our liberties. We hold this prudent jealousy to be the first duty of Citizens, and one of the noblest characteristics of the late Revolution. The free men of America did not wait till usurped power had strengthened itself by exercise and entangled the question in precedents. They saw all the consequences in the principle and they avoided the consequences by denying the principle. We revere this lesson too much to soon forget it.

Last night’s movie She’s No Angel on the Christian channel begged many essential questions (and had bad music)

why

the loving liberal successful couple should keep a shotgun in the home (later used per Shakespeare) what the community’s (authority’s) reaction to the violence and precipitating dissembling might have been (per The Crucible) whether the golden spiritual couple would subsequently dissemble lobby or defend themselves and the loved one legally and lengthily (per Dostoyevsky) where unclean tragic outcomes end in Death’s cleanliness ravens eat the fur and guts of bad guesses off the roads (per A Designer of Systems)
but not I think missing the deeper lesson that she is neither her past nor her wings
but a pure goodness bone stillness potential energy a light wave
and a particle.
The Burning of the Jews

It was a woodcut in our high school history text, Unit 4 Beginnings of the Modern World, that so disturbed, from the Nuremburg Chronicles depicting the burning of the Jews, flat perspective, faces of the victims among flames, in no particular agony, not especially Jewish, during the Black Death 1/3 of Europe died 1347-1351 alone. Although you die together you die alone. Earlier that week, I attended our 6th grade’s performance of Fiddler on the Roof, thinking Coltrane should have recorded Matchmaker as a bookend to My Favorite Things but as the play darkened with the town’s absorption into the diaspora, democracy yet unthought of and rule of law a fig leaf for authority, Jasper, who played Zero Mostel, delivered his line well to the effect you’re just doing your jobs while wrecking our lives.

Anyway, nothing like that is happening here, is it? The gardener planting tomatoes, the gravedigger finding skulls, there is so much life a little death won’t matter. Jasper was a beautiful ham, big as Zero. A friend posed this question: must all states be melting pots like the United States? I said yes not because they should but since it’s inevitable. Let labor flow like capital! America was the last word of the play and brought a tear of pride to my eye.

Immigration, exasperating argument re the Other. How many’s more than enough? 9 billion, a rational, real number that exceeds or we’re convinced is within the carrying capacity of the planet. Climate change is the new Black Death. I like the Amerindian body type and face mixed in with the European, African.
The irrepressible economy rolls out reams of logs, ores of elements, bags of ice, fields of rice.
Embargo. The moon stares, bare, full of interstellar space.
Better a cold shoulder than a visit from our military.
The crazy Nazis must have felt themselves extraordinarily compassionate toward the mother, earth, the goddess, history, or some such abstraction and, thus, acted on a fraction of all they did not know.
Selfless soldiers just doing their jobs guarding the border or, on the other hand, collecting fagots for the burning of the Jews.

Lawn Party

A robin hops, looks, pecks.
Looks, hops, pecks.
Pecks, looks, hops.
Communicating the Bird

How many poetry books = 1 Nissan Pathfinder exhaust system.
How many bluebirds? Money is how we thank people for what makes them special
How we express our love and gratitude.

Weight and moods, up and down, with weather and outcome of meetings.
I am so sick of humanity, people. Wouldn’t I prefer chickadees?
Then I get home, that is the comfortable tree hole I’ve been longing for.

Aaron pitches and plays piano. Zach likes lacrosse and math.
The mound was soft, sand, with a hole big enough for an urn or to hide a plover
But Aaron pitched carefully anyway, slow strikes and the opposing team scored.

What would God’s work be? Meaningless question. Today’s schedule:
Write fund raising letters, conserve small farms. Local food, local jobs.
Don’t transport food coast to coast. Save fuel, less CO₂.
In my opinion the dislocations resulting from climate change and global warming will be within man’s adaptive capacity. On the other hand.
Also, green industry will open a vast employment market, a job for every grackle, crow.

The good life, unsustainable, we’re poisoning our children although my children are not so poisoned. They’re bald. Unusually bald. Good looking bald. Future of man bald. Happy bald.

Bald eagle. Nesting, mating near Karen Sheldon’s, a conservationist, philanthropist, on the river, whose husband recently died. During romantic dinner on a second honeymoon in Paris so I’ve heard.
That’s Jake’s spirit come home as an eagle, Karen said. Isn’t that great, I said, and the she-eagle he’s nesting with!
—I’m gonna kill that bitch.

Compare Captain Carpenter and In a Prominent Bar in Secaucus One Day. In each case the hero’s (heroine’s) body declining Under life’s duress. Anything located in Secaucus, NJ could not be considered prominent, could it?
In the end, clack clack takes all. Hard to end a poem better than that.
Clack clack the crow’s beak, upper and lower mandibles meeting. From hunger, or it just does. Crows clack clack to communicate. Whitman’s greatest poem is Out of the Cradle . . . also involving communicating birds, in what is initially an embarrassingly emotional display. All that italicized moaning and yearning. Get away.
Then, clack clack, he turns on you. Death lisping, straight into your eyes. Suddenly you realize you should have taken him seriously, been paying attention.

In the meantime, traffic, corn, new exhaust system, ask for money, save farms, poor people, sun on garden, whole wide world, wars, stars. I gave up long ago on a quiet world. Now going deaf. Then it will be quiet, too quiet.
No more birding by ear. “No more fucking.” I mean really . . . I was moved as anyone by Hall’s honest poem about Jane dying and I guess fucking can be music to someone’s melody, stand for living, but not me.
No more birding would have had more meaning. I’d rather bird than fuck. No more fucking, no more worry, no more war.

Which is why I’m gonna kill that bitch is so funny, such a life-affirming comeback.
At first I worried Karen really believed the eagle is her husband. Maybe she does
But that punch line makes her the kind of woman I want to know.
The Writer Working Hard

This morning I put the apostrophe in and this afternoon I took it out. Oscar Wilde’s comic wit about the writer working hard.

Revision has lately become the sign of seriousness, as in I revise some poems a hundred times, maybe more. A word of praise here, a critical word there. Before that there was the debate if poems not stitched with end-sounds were playing tennis without a net.

Late summer, August, hot, but chickadees forming platoons. Three months until the snow flies, sure as the June my father died.
Negotiation

Chipmunks, squirrels collecting bitternut hickory, chirping against a small owl cruising low beneath the trees.

Everyone has gone this morning to school or work. Laundry rolling, carpets vacuumed, cleaning in the bathroom on my knees.

I’d like to be Whitman, praising the pure contralto, Wynton practicing all day. But like my father dying I cannot hear what I cannot see.

Locally there’s politics, processing points of view. Eventually coming to a decision, building or not building windmills on the sky, bridges in the sea.

Insignificant and mighty happenings seem the same from my vantage ageing gratefully, inexorably, planning how to die in my own damn way.
The Art of Appreciating Snow

Nearing the end of a too busy week it starts to snow. Dangerous but soothing. Wherever you go, take care. Your memories are too weak, alone, to keep you alive. Yet on the other side of the globe, a people has perfected the art of appreciating snow from inside their lives. Not unlike flower arranging or pouring tea correctly. Tonight I must drive through hail and storm, down the steep and icy trail, inside the tunnel dimly lit, me.

Prose

Prose is unpretentious, that’s its attraction. Avoids bombast of line breaks but forgoes – what – perfect rest. Anyway today, a November day in February, no chance getting rest with the poor clay I’m made from.

With my mother this weekend, her dementia proceeding according to what plan. Saturday the kind of day I never have. Actually read three stories by Updike. One extraordinary–Tomorrow and Tomorrow and So Forth–which I chose from his Complete through 1975 for the reference to Macbeth and in it he so humanely, sympathetically explains through the high school English teacher’s thoughts Shakespeare’s mid-life bitterness or disappointment realizing few men achieve their potential in the face of history, society and their personal flaws. Making for tragedy. Hard to be humorous about that although Updike finds in Shakespeare’s late plays, especially The Tempest, a resolution amounting to wisdom that there can be contentment with imperfection and partial achievement. Updike took some of the starch out of my contention that all Shakespeare’s plays are comedies, impossible to take Hamlet, Lear, Macbeth and Othello seriously. Certainly not Romeo and Juliet. It is a consolation that Updike’s and even Shakespeare’s achievements are imperfect although it would be wringing blood from a rock for me to achieve as much. The other two stories by Updike assured me that prose story-telling is as hit or miss as poetry. Bulgarian Poetess and How to Love America and Leave It At the Same Time made me think how fortunate I had been to find Tomorrow on the first try.

Not so much luck. I was attracted like a bee to a blossom to Shakespeare’s lines in my personal anthology. No anthology and the poetry dependency it has created and I might have passed over the story. But now there is this conversation between me and all other writers. The anthology helps me know what I like but now I am tempted to try to articulate why I like what I like. Like the calendar, time and all else man lays his mind to it is a matter of bringing order from chaos by naming things according to our observations.

First, I like to understand what’s going on in the poem. Not paraphrase it but describe the action. In Yeats’ Lapis Lazuli, in the first paragraph, strophe or stanza he talks about a community, a city or country, in which people, the women especially, high-toned maybe?, are upset about a political or wartime situation and are too hysterical for art or grace. Then he talks about actors playing Hamlet and Lear holding it together even though their characters die at the end of the play. No shouting, no crying. Then a paragraph or stanza about how whole civilizations are transitory too. Finally, in a reference to one of our oldest civilizations, two old Chinamen and their retainer are in the mountains. From their perspective, calm acceptance and longevity, perhaps some sadness, they look on all of history and non-history with something like gladness.

From there we can appreciate the artistry—in Yeats’ case the interesting rhymes and variable line lengths—recognizing, however, that the artistry is not so much a demonstration of skill or a performance as the particular vehicle or discipline by which this artist discovered the content of his mind. It little matters whether verse is free, rhymed, blank or formed as long as it is understandable and meaningful. Understandable to anyone, meaningful to someone.

The oldest formulation I have is Pound’s—the great themes of literature can be written on the back of a postage stamp. Until recently, I thought you could do it but you’d have to write very small. Now I know you can do it in your normal handwriting. I think they are Love (how we come into the world), Death (how we leave the world) and Governance (how we live in the world together). It may be possible to group Love and Death together, coming into and going out of life being similarly unknowable mysteries. The ways of talking about this one same mystery are apparently endless and endlessly fascinating. We cannot leave it alone. Almost all the greatest poems are about this mystery. Life is but a dream.

Then there is Governance—how we live in the world together—about which there are far fewer great poems. And usually they are about how our failure to live together leads back into the unknowable mystery through premature and sometimes mass death. Siamanto’s The Dance comes to mind. I think the best poems of this type are written by so-called oppressed people.

Many poems treat both themes. But on the question of content, Pound is where I begin. My anthology—Whole Wide World—has a section which I’ll call Double & Triple Features: Poems to Read Together, which pairs and groups poems according to my feeling that they share something—theme, voice, structure—in common. Subject matter is, I think, the commonest sharing. If I tried to name each pairing or grouping I might then have a hundred or more themes. Naming them adequately would be difficult to impossible. But why? And why not try? It would be a necessary start to talking about the poems: I read these poems together because . . .

Prose doesn’t have to be beautiful, sometimes it’s best when it’s flat as Hemingway conclusively proved and one of its attractions is you can run on and on as long as the mind goes on following a thought without a stop sign for a whole page of books like Proust or Faulkner or Joyce.

Auden’s is the second useful formulation that comes to mind (besides his chummy reverence for Shakespeare in naming him Top Bard). He classifies poems five ways:

1. A good poem that’s meaningful to him;
2. A good poem that’s not meaningful to him;
3. A good poem that may someday become meaningful to him;
4. A bad poem that’s meaningful to him;
5. A bad poem that’s not meaningful to him.

I find I do about the same. But I discard all poems, good and bad, that are not meaningful to me. I have little taste for artistry for art’s sake. The poem must speak to me or awaken me. Dickinson’s formulation—takes the top of your head off—is the same as We can’t define pornography but we know it when we see it.

A short aside: it feels inappropriate to answer the question What do you do by saying I’m a poet. It would be like saying I’m a leader or I’m a prophet. You cannot anoint yourself a poet, a leader or a prophet—others must do it for you. I wonder if I would be more comfortable if I had a larger audience (following) like Billy Collins for example. I think not. It would be like being a rock star not a composer.

It’s much more acceptable to say I’m a writer. Then when you answer the question Oh, what do you write? with Poetry, you are not self-aggrandizing, merely irrelevant, effete. Being a poet is viewed as being a flasher or nudist, exposing parts of yourself others would rather not see, at least not up close and personal, providing more information than others need or want to have. Maybe that’s a good definition of a bad poet. Self-revelation dressed in verbal prowess is acceptable but naked, abject confession is unpardonable, tedious.

Although content is requisite for a poem to be meaningful, a poem is not really a communication like fiction or essay. It is more like an object, like a painting or sculpture, and perhaps like a musical score, sheet music. Yet I would still instruct students of poetry to first read each poem by the sentence, not the line, to derive its meaning, understand its argument, visualize its action. Then one might ask how and why is it sculpted, structured, with line breaks and strophes. Ultimately, the form of the poem is nothing more or less than the method by which the poet discovered his meaning. Although it is arbitrary—it could have been said another way—it is the only way it could be said by this person in this time and place. I have always liked the idea of a sculptor carving away stone or wood to reveal the form inside the block.

The poem lives on as an object, recognized by many or few or none. Like art or furniture most are briefly useful then are moved to the attic or shed where they gather dust and mouse turds then break, dry and decay and find their way to the dump, the dust heap of history, only not even human history, just your personal history.

The anthology has made me an antiquarian—one who cares as much for objects made by others as if I had made them myself.

So how can one talk about poems? The argument that any attempt to discuss or describe a poem is better served by simply reading the poem, perhaps memorizing it, has merit. Except in one respect—the process can take you to undiscovered and half-discovered country within yourself. Always, first, you must understand the action otherwise we are just re-reading ourselves in our own tried and untrue ways. We must not mistake an old dog dying for a puppy being born. Misunderstanding the words is like constructing a science experiment with a flawed methodology and then using the results to shape or live in the world. It can be dangerous. Therefore reading poetry is a mental discipline worthy as the scientific method itself. It takes you out of yourself.

The fun of criticism comes in examining why and how the poem made you feel or think as you did. You can read closely for the chosen words, rhythms, lines and stanzas. You may admire the skill or wit of the poet. And you can refer to your own experience to understand your reaction. You can even disagree with the poet’s thought or perception, or reject the sentiment. You can say that’s him, not me.

Then there are Bloom’s formulations of which I am wary, he being a critic not a poet. Yet here they are. Three sources of healthy complexity or difficulty in poems: 1) Sustained allusiveness—cultural references that require the reader to be educated beyond the poem’s content, for which he cites Milton as an example and could have Dante; 2) Cognitive originality—leaps of perception and depths of understanding that startle, enlighten and take off the top of your head, for which he cites Shakespeare and Dickinson as examples and to which I would add much of what is memorable in modern poetry; and 3) Personal mythmaking—whereby the poet constructs over time a system of images and personal (more than cultural) references that with familiarity become understandable and meaningful, citing Yeats and Blake as examples. How to make this formulation useful.

A second formulation by Bloom discusses poetic figures or the indirect means by which poetry uncovers truth, dancing with and romancing language rather than wrestling and pinning it down like philosophy tries. There are four: 1) Irony or saying one thing and meaning another, usually the opposite; 2) Symbol (synecdoche) or making one thing stand for another; 3) Contiguity (metonymy) or using an aspect or quality of something to represent the whole; and 4) Metaphor or transferring the qualities or associations of one thing to another.
Meanwhile, here’s my arse poetica:

1) Poetry is an acquired taste, like golf or wine, with no obligation to appreciate it.
2) Poetry is divination; prose explains what we think we know but poetry discovers what we didn’t know we thought.
3) Poetry is one of many man-made systems, like baseball or the scientific method, for producing knowledge, meaning and pleasure. Or are they all natural as sex?
4) Of all the other arts, poetry is most like sculpture; the word “poem” comes from the Indo-European root meaning “to make, to build.”
5) It is impossible to write exactly what you mean or be accurately understood; poetry uses this to its advantage.
6) Line length–enjambment–is the single most important feature of poetry.
7) Poems are made from ideas; poetry is philosophy but where philosophy wrestles language down, poetry romances language.
8) Meaning is the most important product of poetry but it’s completely personal; poems almost always say one thing and mean another but the poet often doesn’t know what he meant.
9) It is almost impossible not to rhyme or write rhythmically in English or any other language.
10) The forms poets use are how the poet gets to his truth and are basically arbitrary choices.
11) Poems may be difficult and complex and irrational but they must be comprehensible.
12) Just describing the action of the poem will take you where you need to go.
Dad’s Bark

Dad’s bark is worse than his verse.
When he hits it doesn’t really hurt.

The dirt outside the house is soil.
The mouse inside the house is life.

Can’t escape the printer or the car, IV bag, heart monitor, a billion trillion stars.

Snow descends, each flake unique.
My sons’ friends, each infinitely
a Greek or Trojan hero. Our morals: hit not the girls, nor rape. Love more than you are loved, by a little. Give but stop before it hurts. Stand together or fall apart. Which candidate you vote for less important than to vote. Don’t depend or dote on leaders, housekeeper and president are gods equally remote. The human body is a thing of bone, a strange upright animal, and the telephone a mystery to other animals.

Everyone and everything is spinning electrons and the space between.

A great crunch, inverse of big bang,

yr big sister told.
Lazy, Happy

I woke up Saturday joyful at my body’s triumph over virus, breathing again without pain and enjoying winter and the cold that keeps us sane and sober. But by Sunday my mortality had returned.

If I pass away now, how to assess my days. Is balancing income and expenditure reports enough? Our marriage and our piece of land. Dependent on economy. For food delivery and machine repair.

In my youth, I imagined crossing mountains to the sea, living off the land. Enduring weather patiently. It's impossible except three days or three weeks, with a load of supermarket food on your back.

So I accept home gratefully. And a niche in society. We could explore these hollows and hills on foot but my wife is weak and I am lazy. We use the library to travel inner space. We found this place.

Next spring, a garden. Dig depleted soil behind garage and fertilize it from our compost pile. Learn the names and ways of cultivars, their relations to wild plants and the edge. Finally know the fern and sedge.

Lazy one, life is short. You have never fought, to yourself you remain unknown. You go the way of an unknown soldier. Unable to assess the purpose of the battle. Nameless, hungry, same as the neighbor's cow.

Be happy, slap happy. Within your generation, surrounded by history. Seeking mastery through practice. Rewarded with the sunrise, sunset. Yet to have delivered on the promise expected by the parents of the baby.
When Peg Laughs Like Liz

When Peg laughs like Liz deep woman-hearted laugh eating beef jerky on Mesa Verde

the good hearts and smarts of women come back to me, not guessing any better than they at the time what love meant, leaving them behind in sandstone time going to my own cement, sandstone or good mountain grave

having seen the sharp-shinned and sparrow hawk flying and at rest, not at peace, seeking prey from a ponderosa snag.

I left my woman behind to float alone down the long canyon for feathers and signs, she's making camp

the moon half full, the sun half high sky full of planets birds and stars
I look up from the rocks

elements
housekeeping, thinking love that's learned to love

from earlier loves laughs remembered, heard in the laugh of the woman who is my wife.
Geese in Winter

Full of courage, winter, geese fly north. The car almost wouldn’t start.

Drive along the Mohawk flood plain. Cattails, grasses, no doubt ash and elm.

Restful tans and browns. Flat, low, but still city. Arrive at the interview.

Corner of State and Clinton luminous blue corporate logo between empty store fronts.

That they might not offer me the job and they might, make me equally sad. Fly in formation, life for pay.

Young, my boast had been distances and heights traveled. Now any road serves well as the long narrow road to the north. The cold, quiet solitude of that road would serve well too.

The story of Sally, the story of John. It takes an advanced, healthy economy to produce science and technology but aborigines may track animals and draw symbols in the sand, give each cloud and bird and tree a personal secret name. And explain according to a logic for which we need equations how geese in winter flow north today.
Year Million

Standing at back of cafeteria during youth basketball awards ceremony
This is my community.
“What you do may not seem important but it is very important that you do it.”

The men and women bringing the boys and girls a step to wisdom. Win or lose play your best and treat your opponent with respect. Maybe the school principal can explain the ultimate mystery?

The women cannot be this chaste! The men so committed to non-violence!
What is the board president alone in her bedroom.
Coach Strong and his blowsy frowsy wife?

They put much emotion and gratification aside to get things done. Done for their sons and done for their daughters.
Visit the web site! Buy a raffle ticket! Belong to the loved ones!
I follow distantly. I watch warily. I have not been asked to lead or lift a load.

Sitting in a chair in a corner of a room at the top of a house near the end of a street on the edge of a city at the mouth of a river, Estuary of ocean, ocean of atmosphere, pierced by a meteor bringing ore and organisms, incinerating elements and rototilling ecosystems, Everything changes but consciousness.

The kids of course are perfect as animals in habitats. In light of these basketball certificates, team spirits, Time, our moment, is indeed “the mercy of eternity.”
Enemies

I cultivated at least two enemies yesterday
the enemies I wanted
I wanted them to be angry instead of me my attitude being I don’t care I’ll do as I please

Please is a word we’re trying to teach our sons to use when they use services or receive gifts courtesy is required it requires a show of gratitude and recognition for the effort others make in making their love felt and known

Knowing how to say yes when you mean yes and no when you don’t and doing it without hurting the feelings of others is another chickadee skill along with watching your partner’s back holding back negativity and expressing joy

I’m joyous making friends and enemies enemies these days are my only friends, no one lives to hurt us who hurts so much from something done or said they’d say our demise gave great satisfaction

O to be great with enemies satisfied and want something done to hurt and be angry and love more than one friend!
Cameron Diaz

Herpetologist meets actress (Cameron Diaz).
If he’s funny he’s me.
South America or Africa (on location).
In a diamond mind.
The protagonists (lovers), the diamonds, the miners and the minders.
By minders we mean watchers, organizers, supervisors.
As all art must: choose a focus.
The personal is political said Cameron on the night bus to Quebec.
I had never met a girl so willing to make love in public.

To what extent is violence necessary? And is that the essential question or should violence be accepted as man’s state, fate a more essential question existing beyond or below peace or war. Perhaps the religious and (for the irreligious) sacred injunction against egregious violence exists to still ourselves to open ourselves to the deeper question. That Cameron Diaz is funny and beautiful is hopeful. And the telescope and microscope have extended the eye’s appreciation. Under the microscope Cameron becomes a collection of foreign, alien, uncompassionate, selfish, self-organizing organisms. Frightening, inexorable, fascinating to the scientist in you!

To the telescope vanishingly small, infinitesimal as the farthest sun only smaller smaller by magnitudes of magnitudes of ten and incinerated in a nanosecond. Gone from the movie (photographs the contents of which move for the naked eye).
I cannot help what I do or hope.

Anyway, it’s a love story or science project, socio-political documentary. An essay.
An essay about how it is actually impossible to say what you mean but it is possible with a lifetime of meditation and study to shut up and know what you meant.

Now I’m deaf.
I can see Cameron Diaz but not hear her.
The guy, the herpetologist, at first colorless turns out to be colorful as a bird or snake!
He knows a lot about snakes, and birds! Not only how they mate but what they eat (amateur botanist)
where they rest
what they do with their pain. Do they get depressed?
Can they have guests?
How do they judiciously employ violence to organize and defend the nest.

The international collective remains insufficiently organized resulting in violence and threats of violence that interrupt commerce, procreation (love) and the pursuit of happiness (Cameron Diaz) at least for certain populations, sometimes.
Otherwise, most men, most times, live in peace excepting flood or fire God or man may choose to impose.
I lay in my bed and listen naked.
Have a good day (Diaz).
The goddess does not exist, except as bone.

Around this time (July)
the queen yellow jacket (redcoat) searches blind and deaf for a ledge or cavity to build a city of her descendants safe, that they can defend.
Most cities prosper, undisturbed and sleeping peacefully, overwinter. We, however, remain active, Cameron Diaz makes winter movies or love stories in South America, and I delight to imagine her herpetologist. Or one who discovers the sun around which a habitable, understandable, compatible orb orbs. Or maybe the movie’s about the revolution, soldiers dying defending this dictator or that dreamer and the movie completely failing, not even trying, to explain how the sons and daughters of the dying soldiers (miners) feel fishing alone, hunting for wisdom, thereafter. Sure, these men chose violence, not Cameron Diaz, and were not farmers, botanists or herpetologists their tools could have been and should have been the telescope or microscope but are there enough microscopes and telescopes to go around and did we not (taxpayers, moviegoers) encourage them to defend Cameron Diaz?

Man’s world is insufficiently organized to preclude violence in allocating resources (Cameron Diaz). When we invade Iraq to defend our allies and interests with rockets and rocket throwers, Rockettes and Cameron Diaz each man (each Diaz) must make his own individual choice whether this war is worth fighting for or the next or the worst. Go to jail, go directly to waterboard, at the hands of your local police, chamber of commerce. Learn how to walk the desert and the universe. The names of rocks and planets, that being the only answer to the hyperorganization that is a cancer on our insufficient organization.

I was reading Foreign Affairs The Case Against the West by Kishore Mabubami (Cameron Diaz). How can I relinquish my privileged position sit still, lie naked until what constitutes consent of the governed and non-violent change, Cameron Diaz, to her herpetologist is known.
A Gun in Every Home

Two fine films: The Lost City and Blood Diamond.
I joined Blood Diamond during a village massacre and said to my wife A gun in every home.
Those devils would think twice before razing the village and seizing the boys.

A well-regulated militia.
The local militia the most interesting moment in a strong film with motive (economic, emotional), action (chases, fights) and a sexy, sexless love story.
Use of violence by the local militia for a limited purpose: protect the community, the young from the janjaweed. The crop from the weed.
Limited scope and defensive posture
but armed and coordinated, cooperative, the men (and the women) side by side.
Warriors at the gate, you will not run, you will not bargain.
Just violence = limited scope, defensive posture.

Great music. Cuba, Africa.
The Lost City, when the communists tell the club owner under threat of violence
No saxophones in the band. The saxophone!
Invented by a Belgian–Look what the Belgians are doing in the Congo!
When the state’s violence is turned against the citizenry for non-violent acts.

This quiet neighborhood, July, undergirded by violence, force. That’s a given– any farmer, custodian, EMT will tell you that.
Without just violence
Gandhi’s scope, and King’s, might be vanishingly limited, negligible (but not non-existent)?

   Regarding King
the matter is simple—he was non-violent but dependent upon federal force to counter the South’s violence.
No doubt without the larger force, the non-violent would be overwhelmed by southern violence.
Here, non-violence was a tactic, not an ethic.
Gandhi, however, had no violent partner to protect him from the British. Or did he?

1) There was the potential violence of the population, which Gandhi restrained but could release which the British feared, and

2) It was the restrained (limited scope) violence of the British that allowed Gandhi to exist rather than be extinguished—this restraint was a (British) cultural imperative (limited scope) as well as emanating from Britain’s view of India as a protectorate and valued citizen of the United Kingdom (defensive posture).

What about violence or threat of violence to compel compliance with community as in mortgage foreclosure, driving without license, drug possession. Perhaps it is necessary violence to maintain orderly commerce, the common space, and preempt bad behaviors associated with otherwise neutral, private acts. The defensive posture is the common good; the limited scope is forgoing deadly force. But the citizen, too, must maintain a disciplined, armed non-violence, in case the state (the janjaweed) engages in an unjust, autoimmune violence. Hence, a gun in every home.
Perfect Rest

Yr cancer is inevitable as love.
You didn’t last forever. The pain wasn’t the main problem, unconsciousness was. Dad cannot see or hear,
the walls of the house contain just dust,
that’s it, and if he shows up as a ghost
I’m lost, all my theories false.

Dr. Cherry certified my cancer as a cyst.
A drupe, a stone, a past mistake.
I left the examining room elated,
and have gone on to conflate my happiness,
relief, with that of the whole village.
The message is: to the east and west, the self which is carried around as a pound of garbage.

“I like to be kissed before I’m fucked.”
And what is poetry anyway. Its role, local and global. Well, I for one have no friends or family sufficiently interested to come to a reading. Don’t take offense, we prefer novels, and especially movies, coffee, sugar, oil, parrots, ponies, you name it. Seven goes to six. Prices bust and burst, but life (and school) goes on, or whatnot. Atomic bubble gum. Protein computer.
Grass roof. Sun spot. Perfect error.
In the mirror where everybody hides the body.

Finally, I have been going for walks, girls with protection dogs, black flies in my eyes.
Peace of noon, bird siesta. August returns, the snow flies. Did you survive summer, beat the reaper? I hope so, and yr fern allies.
Perfect rest is priceless, paradise.
Meditation

There is no religion in meditation but it’s worth visiting with your mind in the morning. What will you find?

Equally, think about the moose and nation. Cleaning house no less than apocalypse, food rations. The mind lights at random.

Sit ten minutes. Breathe in, out. Counting, or imagining the mind’s a horse galloping leads to other thoughts, not catastrophe but also not allowed. Visit with your bones which will outlast words and desires. In them there’s a fire banked low, where particles of sun are stored and slowed, or stilled entirely. That’s where I reside. Not really, not certainly, not virtually. Then eyes open, flowering or snow falling, the day begins no wiser, happier or myself.
Reverse Gestation

Cold, a killing cold is the best defense against aliens. And viruses, bacteria are our friends.

Perfect rest, perfect motion.
Another autumn, another election.
So aimless and sublime.

Back and forth, forth and back.
Rock and roll, spoon and bowl.
What a symmetry, calculus, trigonometry.

Measurements reduce violence.
Makes sense. Temperature measures change. Time’s irreversible.
Change is all that’s visible.

Learn the changes, then forget them.
Lost my timepiece, lost my metronome
now my music is ethereal.

Ethereal or dissonant,
the clash that brings you home from winter and starvation’s wisdom.
“Unit, corps, God, country!”
Man’s Machines

Might as well go to market. Gather money, kindling. The economy scary, debt deep, winter coming. Reminds me of my youth, cold poor and scared but living truth? Shit. Never have I understood life’s meaning, significance. Not to say there is no purpose necessarily, just I don’t immediately get it.

Other hand, if you don’t think too deeply about death, this being but a dream, sleep of a god snoring with apnea or who’s alarm goes off, wakes up for work, spring and expecting spring’s good as it gets. Rhodora in winter completely forgets what its blossoms looked like, how attractive to bees and flies! It’s probably healthy that everything dies.

The dire economy can bring us together or lead us to war. It’s cold then warm. Your lover doesn’t write letters anymore giving thanks or encouragement. Friends never really know each other, nemesis. Just as it is impossible to say what you mean, your closest lover’s near but external, forever. You’re alone.

More than ever men have one mind and finding it’s as easy as flicking on the tv, huckleberry, but that always was the problem. We march to war in rows and back in columns. Learning who you actually are is difficult as sitting still ten minutes without a thought or want. Nothing to say. Nothing to do.

Interior solitude, imperative belonging. Repetitive dreaming. Until you draw a circle with a dot at the center. Stop. Full stop. On a dry rocky ridge, hot or in a frozen swamp. One heron and yourself. It is possible to hear not far, a car, a train, a plane.

Peace Out

I can’t blame the teenage girl for being forward, then passive aggressive. It shouldn’t make one angry; she has her interests and that which bores her.

Or the adolescent boy for being antsy, a little loopy and aloof. Under that hat he wants to be good, is deeply disappointed with the world (and the food).

Robert Francis: the finest poet no one reads. We care not. Such prisms of philosophy need no acknowledgment. The catamount is only believed to be extinct. The wildlife tree, a mere bole, deep in the forest, far off the road, when it falls takes many squirrel turbines and spider spans down with it.

Noon, Julian has nothing much to do and likes it that way. That way nothing much gets done today. Every man, every tree, lives with disabilities.

Crooked finger, rotten bole, under stars, over soils. The I in my old poems is no longer me. The one in this one will be someone else soon.
Injury

My face tells me nothing. Not nothing but nothing useful, the complications of aging humorously but not exactly how to avoid injury.

Permanent injury is a now popular cliche. At this age any injury could result in pneumonia, pain in bitterness for your peers, your jury.

What a headache I have! And never forget injury provokes at best only pity. Friends are merely friendly, they belong to the majority.

They forget your name and so should you, who are you? Even you don’t know for sure. In relation to community, no change was noted in the registry.

Still, man’s mercy, economy’s ecology, there’s some joy in being small, some joy in staying strong, and keeping death before you without perjury.

Unsafe to run the wind. A big stick might hit your head. Then the hip and heart and head will hurt, all three. Unfortunately.

I like a strong wind. Dangerous to go out in. As a fire or flood. I like the way we are at risk, not a risk-averse weasel. A carnivore, very hungry.

Scared to die? Why? Take appropriate measures, descend through meditation. Be empty, rest. And to your friends and sons be as gravity.

Tired of death. It’s what it is. Let’s play sports, have sex, kayak to the huckleberries, fish for marvelous fish, live a wonderful life, give generously.

Done blowing, O wild wind? Not yet? So be it. I lay my head in your felt hands. The motion of the branches, evolutionary branches, are my guarantee.

That’s all folks, 7:30. The sky is clear, the crows are out. The clouds are with my mood commensurate. I should shout, having lived prodigiously.
I like immigrants, immigration. Legal immigration, Jane passionately corrects. Actually my goal is a borderless world. That’s a new idea to her. Gathering the neighborhood like family. The men discuss sterilizing welfare mothers. I say You’re working around the edges, humanity has exceeded the carrying capacity of the planet, even those with jobs. And spouses. And houses. Yet it’s an idyll of an early summer evening, new cut grass, two baseball teams of children playing in it. Safe from Pakistan. News photos of Muslim refugees, women in blue robes, biblically carrying children away from holocaust. The fundamentalist army not far behind, beheading sinners, sure in its righteousness as the Holy Roman Empire.

Somehow Joel Osteen the evangelist comes up while talking about how the Catholic Church is irrelevant in North America, even Latin America and Africa are going evangelical. Izzi likes Osteen, awesome extemporaneous speaker, no teleprompter, up from bootstraps message. My wife says he’s probably Jewish. No one wants to go there. Fortunately no one claims the Holocaust never happened or slavery was voluntary.

What is the carrying capacity of the planet? Two children have replacement value. In China is it each couple or each adult that gets one offspring? As life expectancy and standards rise, family size diminishes. We draw together into greener, tighter cities surrounded by farms surrounded by forests. The children of three monotheistic religions, atheists and agnostics play in city streets, work farm fields, explore forests, deserts, grasslands, space.

Two ancient female poets: Enheduanna and Sappho are a revelation. The clarity of their complaints: lost lover, lost city.
Oh Pilot Me

–title from a poem by Robert Hayden

RNA or DNA polymerase, an enzyme, protein, attracted to promoter molecules in the polypeptide chain causing a zipper motion and transcription of the code, a duplication of codons, introns and exons, and so it goes, sharing and unsharing electrons.

These attractions and repulsions, coming near and going far in nanounits or light years, fail to explain things permanently but make possible the technology to live long and well, with personality.

It is a form of governance, the governance of elements, elements are now apparently our gods. Learn all you can about their laws, their names, their needs, read their poems. Only the mentally unusually sound would, given this knowledge, agree to the process of fertilization and mitosis. However, organisms go round then senseless via involuntary respiration. Therefore, Pilot Oh Pilot Me.
Anyone who wants to fight me all the time

“Soon I will know who I am” —Borges

Anyone who wants to fight me all the time committee meetings, board meetings. Facing death was how they knew they were alive or was it more about allocating resources like yr Dad said. It's hard to step outside what yr DNA tells you to do. Nice tits. Family farm, fight club. It's all one yet distinctions are what separates the librarian, reflective man, from the road and bridge crew. That's a class statement. Us guys love our children and will, circumstances dictating, fight for you.

*       *       *

Anyone who wants to fight me all the time is more important to me than my wife. But there is no one left to fight and no one knows me and I know no one well. That's good, there is more space between people than I'd ever dared to hope. I'm confused. Meditator or gunfighter. Either could come to know himself, flat abs, clear sight with patience and discipline. What's this: know yourself? Once yr knee or neck is smashed there's no getting up to fight.

*       *       *

Anyone who wants to fight me all the time will grow old alone once I'm in the ground. He will live with the question what was our purpose? He was managed by the molecules we're made of, proteins, enzymes, amino acids, DNA. Fucking DNA. I'd rather be a rock. But the rock is subject to its elements. Thus, the periodic table and particle physics, meiosis and mitosis and yes, democracy and self-governance, all the colors of anthropology and ecology, windmills and sundials, fission and fusion for evil and light and the devil who exists to carry the load when we misbehave and fight among ourselves.

*   *   *   *

Anyone who wants to fight me all the time
is how I know who I am.
Because the truth is always changing, depending on the meeting.
What's good.
Service to others is a safe bet. That service may take many forms: fighting, meeting, teaching, making.
The fighting may be part of holding community together. Limited scope, defensive posture.
How broadly we define community says everything. So, we come to Mexico, a violent border and an unhappy history.
Or Gaza and Israel. Or Russia and just about everybody.
How can a people become a nation without resorting to violence or incurring violent reaction?
Does it matter? Accept violence like any EMT and devote yourself to what, beauty?
Why do I write about violence, I've almost never had to fight.

*   *   *   *

Anyone who wants to fight me all the time
is nothing compared to the ocean which can take your children any time.
The Nazis or janjaweed.
In peace we have our meetings.
When violence comes to the neighborhood the hierarchy of communicants will hold or fold it is then the peace work proves relevant.
Hold your clod of land.
Give way to the waves.
All I do not know.
I admire the writer who penetrates the unknown by describing that which is not himself.
His enemy,
anyone who wants to fight him all the time helps him live outside himself.
Ricardo’s Lunch

5th Ave. was shoulder to shoulder with hungry lunch-seeking business men and women. Ricardo unpacked his horn nervously and a foot cymbal. Spring, early street season, too cold for most musicians but he needed money. His lips kissed the cold metal mouthpiece.

Carrying the saw and the pulaski. Cutting brush for a fire line high up, where raptors and ravens fly. No sound but wind if you could subtract the crew working and dirty, joking during lunch. A good year it had been sitting in the soil feeling Ricardo’s body on the mountainside. Mountains moving as good a feeling.

Yogurt and Honey

Yogurt.
“I begin the day buying yogurt in a small favorite grocery store.”
Not pizza, nor gatorade.

Bananas
although they are imported from afar and grown in monocultures.
Attract fruit flies in August.

Peaches
locally grown with rainwater. I ate all the farmer’s peaches alone stacking them by the railroad tracks.

Water–
rainwater, tap water, distilled water, carbonated water, spring water–
deep gulps, infinite sips.

Nuts
in moderation, or not, unsalted, raw, replacing chips. His bowl of filberts, almonds, walnuts quiet weekday mornings.

Edible plant parts– roots, leaves, stems, flowers, fruit, buds. In olive oil or butter.

Potatoes–
look on line how best to prepare. Baked or fried. With a little fish or meat.

Tea and honey, play and prayer. Swimming and running, talking quietly.

Bread?
Bread’s possible as the Bible. Each is liable to bloat us.

Wine and dandelions.
Dandelion wine’s Ray Bradbury’s story. Cans in a pantry, books on a shelf
to the end of time.

Pasta
we used to call spaghetti, never noodles. I wonder if I can remember how to make grandma’s sauce.

Tomatoes—cherry, grape. Grab God’s eye going by.

The Invention of Zero

Zero.
By which nothing is divided.
No zero
no negative no opposite no hope
no Adam, no apple, no marriage, no morning.
No mirror
no knowledge
no God, no soul, no ear lobe, no Iliad, no Odyssey.
No universe
no black hole no zodiac
no hero
no mission, no omission, no fission, no fusion.
No beanstalk
no tractor
no yellow
no 7:30, no wind, no window, no owl, no one.

“In 773, at Al-Mansur’s behest, translations were made of the Siddhantas, Indian astronomical treatises dating as far back as 425 B.C.; these versions may have been the vehicles through which the “Arabic” umerals and the zero were brought from India into China and then to the Islamic countries. In 813 the Persian mathematician Khwarizmi used the Hindu numerals in his astronomical tables; about 825 he issued a treatise known in its Latin form as Algoritmi de numero Indorum, Khwarizmi on Numerals of the Indians. After him, in 976, Muhammed ibn Ahmad in his “Keys to the Sciences”, remarked that if in a calculation no number appears in the place of tens, a little circle should be used “to keep the rows.” This circle the Arabs called \textit{sifr}. That was the earliest mention of the name sifr that eventually became zero. Italian \textit{zefiro} already meant “west wind” from Latin and Greek \textit{zephyrus}. This may have influenced the spelling when transcribing Arabic sifr. The Italian mathematician Fibonacci (c. 1170-1250), who grew up in North Africa and is credited with introducing the decimal system in Europe, used the term \textit{zephyrum}. This became \textit{zefiro} in Italian, which was contracted to \textit{zero} in Venetian.” –\textit{Wikipedia}

“After my father’s appointment by his homeland as a state official in the customs house of Bugia for the Pisan merchants who thronged to it, he took charge; and in view of its future usefulness and convenience, had me in my boyhood come to him and there wanted me to devote myself to and be instructed in the study of calculation for some days. There, following my introduction, as a consequence of marvelous instruction in the art, to the nine digits of the Hindus, the knowledge of the art very much appealed to me before all others, and for it I realized that all its aspects were studied in Egypt, Syria, Greece, Sicily, and Provence, with their varying methods; and at these places thereafter, while on business, I pursued my study in depth and learned the give-and-take of disputation. But all this even, and the algorism, as well as the art of Pythagoras, I considered as almost a mistake in respect to the method of the Hindus (Modus Indorum). Therefore, embracing more stringently that method of the Hindus, and taking stricter pains in its study, while adding certain things from my own understanding and inserting also certain things from the niceties of Euclid’s geometric art, I have striven to compose this book in its entirety as understandably as I could, dividing it into fifteen chapters. Almost everything which I have introduced I have displayed with exact proof, in order that those further seeking this knowledge, with its pre-eminent method, might be instructed, and further, in order that the Latin people might not be discovered to be without it, as they have been up to now. If I have perchance omitted anything more or less proper or necessary, I beg indulgence, since there is no one who is blameless and utterly provident in all things. The nine Indian figures are: 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1. With these nine figures, and with the sign 0 . . . any number may be written.” – \textit{Fibonacci, Leonardo of Pisa}
Nature’s Intelligent Partner

The wood is stacked for winter.
One way out of the mind’s limitations is through other minds’ contemplations.
The books are stacked for winter.

Yet even that cannot satisfy.
Failing to hold still for meditation
my teacher smiles, makes this observation:
The purpose of sitting’s not to be satisfied or satiated. Remain hungry, cold, uncomfortable and counting enemies.

These, and fear, are our commonalities,
and the discipline of not hitting whenever angry.

You’ll appreciate dying quietly at home. Whichever season has been randomly selected will be beautiful as ever

as a molecule of water is to all matter.
“In my life there were always too many things.”

If there is no time, only change
the linear becomes circular.
Do not say north or south. You’re within the winter range of chickadee, hawk, owl and heron.

River grapes, rose hips, the cedar waxwings’ repast. Their talk is my reminding there is change and endurance.
Number and Verse

The question should not be in what ways writing and utterance trope each other, but how both are involved with number. Without relating the technology of writing to number (as opposed to sound or drawing), it is impossible to discuss it meaningfully as an aspect of versecraft.

Courage to write and courage to count. Read
The great poets and highly accomplished letters
Of leaders. Yet the war and the book have lives
Of their own. Vacuum house, analyze mankind.
His idea of himself. Ideas subsumed
By better ones unite people into one people.
I watch from my little bowl of nuts. Watch
The one red squirrel and the many gray.
Watch the nuthatch pair, platoon of chickadees.
Here is what I say: When we can go
From planet to planet on nothing but air,
Leaving behind a drop of water,
No burger bags blowin’ in the sun,
I’ll love my children, and my dogs will be happy.

What is needed is a way to pry apart the polar, mimetic fiction that undergirds discussions (even sympathetic ones) of writing and versification, and see how we can relate writing to measure. Roy Harris’ investigations into the origin of writing make this connection possible.

Electronic millennium. A long silence Wouldn’t hurt. Not that the national debate Should cease, it should proceed, passionate
And furious. Those who have studied the matter
And have something to say should write cogent
Opinion pieces on the totalitarian Tendencies of orthodox religions,
The terminal contradiction of advancing Democracy with the unitary military.
George Washington would not have approved
And even Lincoln vacillated between
The practicalities of preserving union
And the ideal of freeing slaves. The president Carries his burden of matter, the physics
Of existence cannot change our aloneness
Or the butterfly’s importance, the very Last insects at the screens of August.
It is life we face and death we meet.

He argues that the origin of writing did not lie in the drawing of figures, or attempts to imitate speech, but in the recording of number. According to Harris, the oldest ‘writing’ that we have, like that on the 11,000-year-old Ishango bone, is in ‘lines.’ The surface is scored with rows of short, parallel strokes, which probably served a numerical function. We still use such scoring systems today on occasion.

OK, different strokes. But reading North’s poems
And his predecessors’ in which noun and verb
Are so far separated by modifiers,
Post-positioned prepositions, diversions
Into ditches, gardens, heavens, I don’t know
What to do laugh or put the book down and eat
Several cookies. In other words, anything goes,
There truth resides. 1/3 life in suburbs,
1/3 on the subway, and the last third
On the mountain. A fourth hallucinating
In heaven. That’s how it goes. You get what you believe.
Bones in mud. It’s always possible I suppose That for nine months analogous or symmetrical
With gestation our souls wander call it limbo,
Doing the limbo and harassing the living
With unanswerable questions, finally accepting Free molecular rent in a cubic meter
Of interstellar space, a rose hip.

Harris speculates about counting by scoring:

What is relevant for our present purposes is the fact that counting is associated in many cultures with primitive forms of recording which have a graphically isomorphic basis . . . The iconic origin of such recording systems is hardly open to doubt: the notch or stroke corresponds to the human finger . . .

Partridgeberry, mugwort, mats of raspberry,
Cranberry, bearberry, autumn eleagnus,
Autumn Nocturne, Autumn Leaves, the changes
To the tunes and the scientific names.
When it doesn’t matter what you do You’re probably doing something new.
That’s a woodpecker. That’s a moth. I’m bounded
By my surroundings, I feel at home.
Could be Schenectady. Could be Troy.
One of many small cities in which to while Away my anonymity. Be specific.
Not asphalt but impermeable surface.
Not trees but mature stems. Quercus rubra—
Quality veneer. Into such a garden
Have a victor and a fool penetrated.

In short, the rows of strokes are graphically isomorphic with just that subpart of the recorder’s oral language which comprises the corresponding words used for counting. It makes no difference whether we ‘read’ the sign pictorially as standing for so many fingers held up, or scriptorially as standing for a certain numeral.

In a crowded world every action results
In an equal and overwrought reaction.
Yet, all the energy recycles
And there is not one thermal unit more or less
When all is said and won. Even when the tribes
Were isolated behind mountain ranges
And rushing rivers, they sought each other out
For trading and for taking. Humanity
Is lonely. Humor is the only remedy
And going to your daily discipline
The only way past Monday. Join the torrential Flow of words, emotion, wit and erudition.
It is embarrassing to see a good writer
Work himself into a lather, having Something to say. A system of beliefs
To illustrate, characters dressed accordingly.
Gardens and wilderness in which to wander.
A cave with a view. The plumbing problem never Resolves. Fax your results. We’ll be working late.

Along with other evidence, this leads him to argue that the invention of writing—or the division of writing and drawing into separate functions—occurred when the graphic representation of number shifted from the token-iterative system that appears on the Ishango bone, to type-slotting.

Electricity is occult enough for me. Excessive classifying could be fascist! Yet how else can one organize people into contexts. By their associations. Family, work, habits, each assigned a day of the week, moon of the month. Poets rhyme, jazz musicians count time. There is more than one way to make war. By declaration, by punishing offenses against the law of nations, by granting letters of mark and reprisal, by making rules concerning captures on land and water, by suppressing insurrections and repelling invasions, erecting forts, magazines, arsenals, dock yards and other needful buildings. Today I face the blank page between the finished pages.

Harris gives the following example of what he means:

The progression from recording sixty sheep by means of one ‘sheep’ sign followed by sixty strokes to recording the same information by means of one ‘sheep’ sign followed by a second sign indicating ‘sixty’ is a progression which has already crossed the boundary between pictorial and scriptorial signs.

When my grandmother considered it favorable that I would be a writer, she had in mind clear commentary from which many people would derive meaning. No such luck. My writings are like the flicking tail of that flycatcher, and I am the flycatcher, weighing but an ounce. My grandfather’s rough-hewn peasant chairs are well known by my sons though they never knew him and the chairs were not hewn, just owned, by him. One is in a corner of the room and two are scrimmaged around a computer screen. Computers post-date him and cars post-date his father and so on. If the grid collapses, the crops fail and the roads close, some will be forced Across boundaries among boulders, naming snakes
And stars according to memory.
They will be hungry, mortal and strong.

A token-iterative sign-system is in effect equivalent to a verbal sublanguage which is restricted to messages of the form ‘sheep, sheep, sheep, sheep . . .’, or ‘sheep, another, another, another . . .’, whereas an emblem-slotting system is equivalent to a sublanguage which can handle messages of the form ‘sheep, sixty’. Token-iterative lists are, in principle, lists as long as the number of individual items recorded. With a slot list, on the other hand, we get no information simply by counting the number of marks it contains.

When this change occurred it opened ‘a gap between the pictorial and scriptorial function of the emblematic sign’, which had been previously inseparable in the counting represented by rows of slashes.

No book I know tells if blue cohosh
Caulophyllum thalictroides—a barberry—
Is edible. Other barberries are
But that blue berry looks risky to me.
And May-apple—Podophyllum—other Than the fruit itself which is definitely Sweet. So I read, not sure of myself.
There is a patience with which to wait out anger,
And a patience with which to endure ignorance.
The job is everything. It is freedom
And purpose and religion. It is acceptance
And shelter and sustenance. Last night
We were watching Tweet’s show: groveling before
The rich pharisee’s judgements. I said no Amount of money could make me grovel
Before that guy. His toupe’s gayer than his lisp.
But who am I? You think bullets won’t kill?
I’m the guy they put before a wall and shoot
Then eat lunch. But that feeling passed quickly.

This semiological gap made writing possible because it meant that signs could be manipulated to ‘slot’, or identify, anything whatsoever. The open-ended quality of the scriptorial sign was a necessary precondition for the development of writing systems.
Lately I’ve been copying wholesale
From the great poems, lines and ideas not my own
Or owned by all? It’s ok, I can be ignored
Or appreciated in a future city,
By a future shore. The honest man can Only recognize what he loves and point to it.
That Borges poem called In Praise of Darkness.
Emerson and snow. A meditation
That bumps serenely, with acceptance, Between things and thoughts. It is said one should Know for whom, to whom one is writing.
These are letters to those who love letter writing.

As Harris points out, no writing system is accurately phonetic. Even the alphabet only highlights certain phenomena in the speech stream. The reason for this is that alphabetic writing did not begin as a simpler or more accurate way to record speech than other writing systems, but as an easier way to write.

A possible cancer had taken me
To the edge of my endurance. Pokeweed,
Poisonous, became attractive. Red stems
And juicy black berries. I had packed warm clothes
And pain killers. Why the warm clothes if this Was to be my last walk? To die in comfort
Without a fly’s buzz. Overlooking a ravine, Sea of mountains, dawn. But it proved a false alarm.
Now Sunday will be a holy day of plant Identification. Nothing better Than lying in leaf litter, skin drying
To a taut drum. Ravens stay away!
Until cougar’s had his fill! Instead
I showed the boys pokeweed growing among blackberries
And taught them the differences and uses.

Through a radical reduction in the number of signs, the alphabet simplified the scriptorial system in and of itself. The evolution of writing therefore may look like this: simple forms of counting preceded the complications of pictorial representation, which in turn led to simplification of the writing system in cultures that adopted the alphabet.
I was running uphill, parallel to The Taconics extending northward into Vermont (I find Vermonter in their jalopies Annoying but admire them for planning To arrest the president for war crimes) when I happened upon a flock of cedar waxwings—
Said to be a gentle and politic bird—
Sharing—very orderly—dried frozen grapes
On the vine. (Rose hips, buckthorn, ash, pokeweed.)
I tried one, too, the two seeds in my mouth
Keeping me company down the mountain.
I see no downside whatsoever
To compensating for global warming,
Constructing the green energy economy.
New inventions may facilitate
Our transportation to other planets.
Yesterday a young man, Barack Obama, Won Iowa. I’m hopeful he will Articulate an international vision,
A world order in which each neighborhood’s
Good as another. I have no particular Love for writers; they’re a dime a dozen.
But so are chickadees and I love them!

Discussing the power of inscriptions of number, Harris points out:

Counting is in its very essence magical, if any human practice at all is.
For numbers are things no one has ever seen or heard or touched. Yet somehow they exist, and their existence can be confirmed in quite everyday terms by all kinds of humdrum procedures which allow mere mortals to agree beyond any shadow of a doubt as to ‘how many’ eggs there are in a basket or ‘how many’ loaves of bread on the table.

True, nature would be a stern, unforgiving
Mistress too, and man is but her right hand
Acting on her command. How cold! How hot!
The individual doing what he loves or not.
Trees and cities. Herons, hawks. What we fail To govern in ourselves, nature will.
We caught the killer and his gorillas,
Now let’s go home, let the “innocent” choose
Up sides. A good thing was done but the tyrant Should’ve been undone through global governance.
Writing is divination using rhymes
And estimations. Words like mammals
Come near your sleeping head. Last night I emerged
From the hum of our refrigerator
Under a hazy, phaseless moon. The peepers
Were an exact expression of my happiness.

Or, one might add, for how many stanzas there are in a poem, or lines in a stanza, or stresses, feet, or syllables in a line, or occurrences of particular syntactical or grammatical patterns, and so on. As every serious student of versification has always understood, versification is about counting language.

5:30-6 write poetry,
6-7 shit, shave and shower, stretch
Then get dressed, 7-7:30
Clean house, 7:30-8 drive to work
8-6 work (except Monday and Friday
Work 8-4, basketball 4-6)
6-7 drive home, shop, help make dinner
7-8 eat dinner, read paper,
Watch McNeil-Lehrer News Hour,
8-9 play trumpet, study plants, type poems
9-10 watch TV Mon: Murphy, Cybil, Tues: Frazier, Grace, Wed: Roseanne, Ellen,
Thurs: Seinfeld, Friends, Fri: go out to dinner,
10-11 read, except Tues watch
NYPD Blue, Fri: Friday Night Lights,
11 sleep. I could send this to the networks, Get a gizmo in my box. I hope my Schedule won’t be interrupted for war.
My dentist asked had I seen this morning’s
Press conference, didn’t it just scare the shit
Out of you. I said your bill is what scares
The shit out of me. But here I am, writing
And the sphere’s still turning. Or should I say Burning. As long as you write one poem per day
You’ve left a little litter in the world.

*The reason to write verse is less to score the voice than to imbue words with the magical quality of counting. That is why meter, or measure, is at the heart of debates over all verse forms, including free verse.

Vigorous wind, voracious ocean,
Many merciless hard frosts, hurricanes.
The bed of a human, its smell and warmth
36 teeth, 46 chromosomes, 2 feet, a loose dime,
61 summers, some soot, some sand,
Thunderstorms. I wake up to a lightning strike
And my dream incinerates. When they say
Life is but a dream, that’s what they mean.
The writer working hard, telling the story
Of what happened yesterday or yesteryear,
A man’s born to a country not his choosing,
Let labor flow like capital, of mere being!
Pomegranate juice, broccoli, arugula,
Brussel sprouts, cabbage, cauliflower,
Collard greens, kale, radishes, turnips,
Garlic, leeks, scallions, onions, 2 lbs
Swordfish, tomatoes (8 medium),
3 cups almonds, carrots, a sweet potato,
Winter squash, cantaloupe, mangoes, watermelon.
2 daily writing exercises,
50 words on any subject: complaint, headache.
The imagination applies a Countervailing pressure to reality.
Writing badly is the best revenge.

Number is one of the creative grounds of poetry, and the idea that writing grew out of counting is the missing link in studies of the graphic in versification. It is almost uncanny that lines of verse look exactly like the most primitive ways of counting–parallel scorings that can be numbered.

What you do to one side of the equation
You gotta do to the other. Isolate
The variable. Combine like terms. Metaphors
And analogs are reduced to least common Denominators. Multiply through (parentheses).
Write a new equation after each operation.
Inscribe neatly. Check your work. Imagine
That if you’re wrong, the astronauts burn.
Change the signs which will avoid going
The wrong way down the number line. Zero
Is the middle of your universe.
There it is, calm, comfortable as an egg
On a spoon. That is, before possibilities Become probabilities. This is just Another equation manipulated
With opposable digits. For at the ends
Of your guns is the earliest calculator
A magical machine which converts
Numbers to words and words to numbers,
Measures the mists, frequency and wavelength,
Of the material penumbra.

Verses are countable in exactly the way that token-iterative digits are countable, from either end of the sequence. Each one indicates only its singularity, not a number. Every poem in lines effaces, or predates, the distinction between writing and drawing in the same way as the lines on the Ishango bone.
Outside the Circle

I am outside the circle of sex. Just as well. Population control, the biome's survival instinct. Or I’m old. Look in mirror, skin over bones. Young girls on bicycles, running, have that granddaughterly smile for me, all is safe, well. Much is well.

The neighborhood safe, the nation a non-violent helpmate among nations. Until food shortages, weather crises, nuclear mischief apply. Police patrols. I was proud of Massachusetts voting to decriminalize reefer. Let’s go all the way: free all non-violent offenders from their cells! Force police out of cruisers to walk the streets and say hello. What else can we try:

Open the border with Mexico. Let labor flow like capital.

What has this to do with the self, the temperamental, fragile self. The one that leaves no footprint in eternity. No smell.

Not like a figwort

Not like a figwort but not an aster, either. Could he be a buttercup with sepals, no petals, but sepals like petals? Alan is a bluebeech, an ash if his books sell. Quick shake hands. Zach’s bald ok, a magnolia, cone-like fruits a bridge to his neanderthal father. When did Ben become a chestnut lover? It’s said women are practical but there’s much variation in their leaves, ovaries. Many are older, stumps, snags for peckers and porcupines, teachers, feeders, seeders.

What did the wood thrush sing teaching its young thrush meanings?

Sometimes a mushroom. Did you know such fungi are mostly protein? Mushrooms could replace meat, and the dead, the dead’s feet, white as pyrola, could replace the living. Well, we worry. Will we bad luck be extinguished. Denizens of convenience stores think who cares, will I beat the reaper? Hope sempiternally springs. Things rarely clear as sun among the sundews. Eating huckleberries from your kayak. What Paulinaq says is live your life and then your death until nothing’s left.

Then thou shalt be bereft of the heavy sackcloth of the soil, soul.

Said to Mrs. Buckthorn good poets imitate great poets steal. I think she’s more an apple tree. Or pear. Good to eat, amenable to loving. Rose or Ericaceae the differences make the difference. Emerson and Rylin Malone are dead. The dead are dumb, the dust won’t speak. And this deep, dull and dark blessing’s a horizontal reserve. Moonlit. Mr. Hickory is actually a yellow birch, holy and exfoliating. Busy spilling seed on the surface of the snow.

Teaching essay

writing, algebra, earth science, branches of government.

I would be a cypress, cedar, branches calligraphy brushes, divorced from desert. It takes a divorce for one to know one knows no one not only one’s wife but your very sons who will always choose the open flower bud. Good, as they should. Their bones are your bones, strange bones, and a strange selection of their words. They are Uvularia sessifolia (wild oats) and Polygonatum biflorum (Solomon’s seal). They outlast the holocaust or not, they’re made of matter. These windows need a good cleaning. Leaf-raking. Dusting for ghosts. Ah, sweet peace, perfect rest, there are no ghosts adults are trees, teens are shrubs, and children are herbaceous.

Shape of the Institution

I have the shape of the institution.
Each email address is a human.

They are known by their words and actions.
The whole wide world is just a fraction of all I do not know. Expansion and contraction, breathe in, out, meditation on existence, non-existence, creation and duration. I have no explanation for fusion, fission, taxonomic relations or artificial classification.

More I do not know: locomotion by combustion, electron separation and transportation via superconduction which supports the idea of the unified nation.

What girls are like behind their eyes. Masturbation a useful restraint on overpopulation.

The story of a life, my life, any life, cohesion must be rationed, conjured, a fiction

about a vexed, tenacious town, its rail station truck stop, high school, night spots, recreations

the temporary citizens enact visions dream-like orations, ballets, conflagrations to in the end receive in annals honorable mention from family, friends, neighbors, colleagues, institutions.

Adnate to the Funicle

Accepting aloneness, incomplete solitude, imperfect rest. The garden wasted, pumpkin patch planted late, potatoes untasted left in ground.

A thousand email addresses, each unique represents a flame of passion, compassion, desperation or depression. To understand, to know’s impossible. It is therefore only reasonable to observe the shadows on the mountain, the actions of the dreamer which tell us something, little, nothing of his dream. It’s a simple secret shared, longevity. The half breed John Russell says it right, the date and place don’t matter, dry desert or cold mountainside, lush bottomland, soulless or hospitable, contagious hospital.

The best laugh’s death’s, a perfect escape, perfect error, perfect rest. Their solicitude’s unnecessary, grief is temporary, life goes on, you go under, underemployed, the undertaker’s never unemployed. Forensics prove an ovary with two chambers, ovule adnate to the funicle.
The Happy Tectonics
The Scariest Stanza in All of Poetry

Numerous number systems beyond the real: complex numbers, octonions, omnions which can eat whole black holes. It’s axiomatic that your personal history, preferences, how you feel account for nothing at all.

$30 buys a flock of chickens for a needy family (International Rescue Committee)
$29 gets a girl a school uniform (CARE), for $300 you can stock a fish pond (Heifer International)
$69 can start a female entrepreneur in the sewing business (Mercy Corps)
$5 will buy a bed net that protects a family from mosquitoes (Against Malaria)

20th century experiments demonstrated that electrical charge is quantized; that is, it comes in multiples of individual small units called the elementary charge, $e$, approximately equal to $1.602 \times 10^{-19}$ coulombs (except for particles called quarks which have charges that are multiples of $1/3e$).

Why has the experimentalism of the avant-garde, which has failed in the novel, succeeded in poetry? Because poetry is always experimental; while the novel, on the contrary, by its nature, cannot be . . . which is to say that experimentalism is synonymous with poetry, and that applied to the novel, it leads simply to the substitution of the novel with poetry. —Alberto Moravia

Man made the town, Fibonacci inflated zero to be the wheel around which the universe turns and language is the soul walking and talking quietly or going angrily to war. "Counting is in its very essence magical, if any human practice is at all. For numbers are things no one has ever seen or heard or touched.” As are words.

Joan Didion thought the scariest stanza in all of poetry began Row, row, row your boat gently down the stream. The elements, the material penumbra, irresolvable for the mortal, readily dissolve in words and numbers.

Defiance

The Jewish brothers in Defiance were definitely tough.
One wanted to kill many Germans, the other to save many Jews.
The German soldiers were expendable, unmarried, unremarkable.
Each little death was very little, a little spittle in a big wind.

Fast forward to my friend’s son’s bar mitzvah or daughter’s coming of age ceremony. Food is abundant, the music frenetic, the rabbi paid. Gifts generous but not obvious.
Wealth does not obviate death and we know it.

Here too we have natural leaders. Youth basketball coaches, school principals and, again, interpreters of prayers. When violence comes to the neighborhood they are who we’ll first look to for governance and guns. Unless have you read The Admirable Crichton?

Boredom, boredom conflated with loneliness, may be a sign of good luck. To live a good length or light year away from man’s bad breath, allergenic perfumes, sickening flatulence and shed hair.
But you are drawn back into the debate about perfection by your own erection.

While teaching at the old city jail I have learned this: only meditation upon the periodic table can save your soul. From itself.
Imagining the world without the self will make you whole.
What else is there to say. Do less until one thing’s done well.

After the war the brothers started a small trucking company in the Bronx. Grateful for such peace, the accounting was relaxing. They thought back to how they met their wives, naked before the bombs and bullets. How they lost and found themselves in what happened.
Uncertainty

— with a line by Pico Iyer

There cannot be two identical things in the world. Two hydrogen atoms offer infinite locations within their shells for electrons. Thus, nothing can be definitely eventually known. All to the good because golf and chess and basketball, as well as mathematics, language and genetic recombination are systems for discovering the possible (which is more attractive than the probable) in what we thought we thought about the sun and clouds.

In Borges’ The Parable of the Palace, the poet’s attempt to replicate the world in a word results in what, surprisingly, is his termination personal obliteration a piece of anti-matter that occupies no known shell in this or any other instantiation. Got the plot? We are “moving through some allegory between a City of Hope, where history has been abolished, and a City of History, where hope can be slipped in only as contraband.”

Actually, the recombinations which make prediction and intuition fortunately hopeless and each individual an experiment gone well or wrong, are represented by equations of such complexity they differ not at all from the very stars and neurons whose interactions we wish to count. The world keeps up or ahead of the collective attention span by offering inexorable expansion or otherwise rapidly contracting universes, big bang by big crunch.

I like that, I like that I can’t know what I’m doing (until it’s done).
Therefore, faith and understanding (hope and history) become one absolutely fluid quantum motion, a lovely early Spring morning a thunderstorm, a terrifying and (for someone) final tornado or volcano. Oh well. From his earliest published work, Ronnow displays a fascination with death, the world without the self, a ridiculous consideration considering time’s geological pace \(6.5 \times 10^{10}\) sunsets and sunrises over mountains and deserts (for every merchant, traveler) themselves rising and setting via magmas, oceans, tectonics, meteors, forever.

Do your homework I said to Zach. Why bother was his attitude. I explained time is an illusion, an invention man made, there is only change. Birds know this. But the calendar and colors, genus and species, bacteria and galaxies, are the innumerable wonders about which Sophocles said man’s most wonderful why because we can identify or classify birds by the complexity or beauty of their songs.
The Happy Tectonics

Next to my son’s anger plate tectonics are nothing to me. His unhappiness was caused by me. His purpose and mine is to catch photons and store them in our bones. Time measures change which continues without self-doubt. There is no self there. Therefore, why care about my son’s anger or my guilt?

Is it possible as Deutsch suggests that the changes a self-aware organism can applying the scientific method instantiate are innumerable compared to those of the sun or any big bang? Therefore, one must care about the harm you’ve done or the good you’d do. As Stevens proved the essential activity’s to imagine the world then test it against the breeze.

What good is philosophy without a confession I sometimes hit whenever angry and can kill given opportunity and permission. My knowledge of enduring seeds and periodic elements is limited by my impatience.
If I could stop circle with a dot breathing
perhaps then I would understand myself. But what is there to know about the self?

Long ago, according to Borges, Shakespeare imposed a self-imposed silence on himself. He knew what, that perfect acts, accurate and factual, actually requiring microscopes and telescopes for growing small and going far take you to the very space a gentle breeze and ridiculous bird occupy at the end of the mind
at the end of your life.
As Arpad Vass writes:
“Death initiates a complex process by which the human body gradually reverts to dust
but minerals may fill the cracks and voids, bonding the hydroxyapatite and allowing the bones to join . . .” in the happy tectonics of the earth’s plates.
Mom’s Eulogy

It’s already hard enough to say anything accurately without further obfuscating and camouflaging the soul. The faces in the funeral pews are impassive, impatient and the dead woman cares not what’s said, isn’t even present.

The poet gets innumerable do-overs, it’s one of man’s wonders, revises his vision of his mother and plays her piano, posthumously. Why not say it simply? Hers was a comity and a tragedy. As are ours. And perform the history that surrounds us.

Are caskets boats? The ship of death rides Charon’s waves or perhaps on that solitary day you happily kayak to the huckleberries. Is the deeper sadness incomplete achievement or never to have tried? Any attempt to decide this question for others is to badly behave.

The pablum of Christianity, esp. the Catholics, re the after life must be rejected. It’s necessary. To be replaced by community, perfection of the human project, nature’s intelligent partner. Dusty, sadly habitable houses along the funeral route, shapeless people crossing themselves when ambulances or hearses pass. I wanted to describe the sweetness of her life, how she was part of the problem and part of the solution. How love and evolution are passed like loaves from person to person down the generations.

Find the humor in the cholera. When my father died he waved like a surfer riding a wave or a clown riding an elephant out the circus tent. Mom follows the same law. The many ways a spear can pierce a warrior’s jawbone or armor.
Wings of Desire

Last night’s Wim Wenders film Wings of Desire, not starring Adam Sandler, great in the great tradition of Metropolis, Fellini, Children of Paradise, Ikiru, Open City.
This is not comedy though it can be funny overhearing people thinking, the randomness of thought, data dots, circles with dots, sadness and silliness, silly sadness, confusion, rarely a clear thought, not one logical lucid progression. Deep art.

I’d like to do better than my best so far, write something with hydroxyapatite that won’t gather dust then become dust a neuron of sweetness, an early morning bicyclist, a lost ghost or fallen angel any form from which death might abstain or forego appetite.
Appearing to meander from subject to subject is my practice. Looking for solutions to the equations. Learning the changes then forgetting them.
The expressions emanating from mortal minds are broken stamens, sticky stigmas.

Striving for immortality, some Spanish philosopher (who looks like Don Quixote) says he understands and it’s alright.

I will read what he wrote and probably agree but is he immortal? Not his body, but his thoughts.
True, I say, but this also: Not his mind, but his thoughts. Unchanging and finite. Put them in a hatbox and pass them on as heirlooms.

To overhear the secret thoughts of others. Sharing and unsharing electrons, disrobing and bathing. That is the purpose of poetry. Gargoyle twice. Did Wim give each thought its own voice or use the same voice for all thoughts, every whim.
This Summer, As Ever

This summer, as ever, there’s much to do. But only one or two things I want to do.

I told Alan that, like him, I’m never bored. But today, like a teenager, I’m both tired and bored.

The long expanse of summer stretches forward. Alan plans the next 2 years in advance, always moving forward. I can’t plan the next 2 hours, sitting on my arse, undecided whether to clean the house, make a list of prospective donors, or check the 5-day weather forecast. Fires out west, hurricanes south, drought here in the east where the garden phlox withers and the corn’s stunted. We hear prophecies of armageddon, doom, but humans may go on another thousand, million or billion years undaunted. What is that to you. A day alone in your room and a year are inexplicable. Now and then a vacation, baseball game, night of love. A divorce, a death, a drouth. To survive and prosper we must love all of it, insect infestations and world wars, cloud curlicues and square dances, work and weekends off. Knowing the unknowable = never knowing how the world works.
Cleaning Out Their House

Pocket knives, tape measures.
An extensive collection of coins.

Nails, screws, numerous sizes, and sets of nail clippers, files, polishes and brushes.

Shoes, always shoes. And dresses.
Shirts and ties. Loud and quiet.

The sick and the dead are forever quiet, ever quite quiet. Our solicitude’s unnecessary.

Playing cards, backgammon games,
chess. Every move’s a variation on the next.

And so it is with words, numbers, shapes and sizes. Feet and hands, knees and eyes. Why and where and how won’t matter once we divide the bags of clothes

among the poor and destitute. It’s not too hard to laugh too hard. The son and daughter deliver them and then go home. Letters, wallets, clocks and watches.
Photographs in which the name and face don’t match.
Watching Homer Struggle

Watching Homer struggle
to explain how a god wounded by a mortal cannot die but may thereafter live with minor pain and the humor when that god complains to Jove that His supervision of His daughter is inadequate and His Love too unconditional

while Diomed (or Tydides) wreaks havoc on the Trojans and Hector gives it back (in kind) anatomically correct descriptions of spears piercing jawbones and groins sons without fathers hunting and fishing thereafter alone. Written amazingly presciently!

as a metaphor for Vietnam (our war)

forgotten consensually
as this generation slips lazily away to Hades (on Huck Finn’s raft)

where the lights are always blue, gentian actually, supper’s served at 4 and former adversaries pass the heavy hanging time playing pinochle (and pool).

We’re selling the house to pay the taxes.
Pallas Athena wars among the men from the axle of her chariot and Venus is injured by Diomed, standing in the field of battle where she never should have been,

in her adorable hand.

What has this to do with Solomon in jail.
Not the Jewish king, a black American male, same thing.
Your children can be failed at school and marched to war. You can be taxed and sent to gaol for the honor of it. anyone lived in a pretty how town.

We have no obligation to perform the Iliad or read poems and even Homer considers Achilles effete (compared to Hector) and Odysseus is wrong even when he’s right. Therefore, modern man explores the mathematics of circles in coordinate planes and their tangents (when) (once) (soon) the secret of warp speed is discovered expansion of the species will be limitless and permanent.
f(x)

Have some fun.
Presentation of self.
Afterlife functional illusion.

If your memories don’t heart attack or cancer out or from traffic accident who will effortlessly flush them out?

You must give yourself to man be more selfless.
Do one thing well. Flute.

History final. F is for fiction.
Nature’s philosophical partner afraid, affectionate, forceful, confused!

Within a tradition, fine to know what you’re doing.
Polka dots and moonbeams. I’m old fashioned.
Noh, opera, film.

File with business cards.
What’s the offer?
Free marketing. Unusual reflections.

Why fight fires, floods?
Hurricanes and other acts of the Father. As for man’s fate, what has this to do with the temperamental, fragile self.

Power failure
just as we were fixing dinner.
The white egret ate fish after fish, one then another then another,
forever. . .
The Real Turtle Soup

Is it the good turtle soup or merely the mock? —Cole Porter

It’s only a paper-mache moon, they say, too cool, too full of interstellar space to sympathize or stress about lovers, kings and fools.

Or is it? According to Deutsch the so-called final ignition into outer space is a product of man’s meditations moving, as if via gravitation the magician to the other end of the expanding universe. Sure, in your computer. Meanwhile, nursed in a nursing home, mewling and peeing as accurately predicted by Shakespeare my old Marine, an ex-sailor, bitter at life’s ending, waited too long to dispatch with dignity. All alone, as in Corbiere’s poem, old soldiers are fated to fight unnecessary wars as we all are. Except for the fact that every helium and hydrogen atom ever born or made (whatever you believe) has taken positions, passionate and predetermined as republicans and dobermans over eons and epochs. Thus I don’t think it behooves us much to care if we’re getting too little clean air or bacteria are better adapted than us. This obsession with identity, survival a name and a leg of lamb is lame even uninspired. The entire universe including the professional baseball season is canceled when you’re dead. No blame.

Nineteen Minutes to Bedtime

Jack just had a big fight with his son Zach about it. He said I’m tired of hearing how you’re too tired to do your homework. You’re not too tired to play basketball or Xbox. That was that after Zach said Whatever.

Visiting the nursing home you think Never will I allow myself to live long enough to end like that, that’s a fact. But promises are broken all the time, to others and the self, and that one probably will be too unless your face is shattered into shards of broken glass, by accident.

Then it will be quiet, too quiet.

Day by day goes by until the day you receive news of your disease, personal, unique, irrevocable, musical and factual, withal.

That’s that you think but in fact it’s not. You discover (circle with a dot) dying’s much like living. That that’s true until the body just stops barking, breathing.

Forever.

Salvation in the details (sub-atomic particles). Granite or sandstone, ash or oak, Odysseus or King Lear. Get it? Not yet.
For someone who doesn’t want to be anonymous, Jack’s anonymity runs deep.

His work sunk in a tar pit or peat. The worthwhile effort is to meditate on that,
accept and repeat.
Conflict is inevitable and coercion’s vital for resolving it.
–Reinhold Niebuhr

All conflicts are resolved via coercion, implied or applied, of the dominant party over the denied (Niebuhr).
Not news at the 2\textsuperscript{nd} St. jail. But the Constitution provides for moderation, persuasion and elections as way stations, stopgaps, safe havens before the decision’s taken to go to war. Civil war, daily low intensity warfare is unavoidable when chambers of commerce and large corporations wrestle naked and who are the 1% controlling 25% of the wealth, name names, hold a french revolution over it. This space I write from’s safe, comfortable but what about a Taco Bell cashier with 4 kids x 3 men who came and went when they found how human her bleeding and complaining was, how voluble, not faked.

This obtains when you consider Niebuhr: “That the limitations of the human imagination, the easy subservience of reason to prejudice and passion, and the consequent persistence of irrational egoism, particularly in group behavior, make social conflict an inevitability in human history, \textit{probably to its very end.}” (emphasis mine)

respiratory tract infection, hunger pains

Popper drops by: “Their story that democracy is not to last forever is as true, and as little to the point, as the assertion that human reason is not to last forever, since only democracy provides an institutional framework that permits reform without violence, and so the use of reason in political matters. It is clear that this attitude must lead to a rejection of the applicability of science or of reason to the problems of social life–and ultimately to a doctrine of power, of domination and submission.”

split lip, fever blister

Cynical nihilist Niebuhr: “Educators who emphasize the pliability of human nature, social and psychological scientists who dream of ‘socializing’ man and religious idealists who strive to increase the sense of moral responsibility, can serve a very useful function in society in humanizing individuals within an established social system and in purging the relations of individuals of as much egoism as possible. In dealing with the problems and necessities of radical social change they are almost invariably confusing in their counsels because they are not conscious of the limitations in human nature which finally frustrate their efforts. So persistent are the moralistic illusions about politics in the middle-class world, that any emphasis upon the second point will probably impress the average reader as unduly cynical. In America our contemporary culture is still pretty firmly enmeshed in the illusions and sentimentalities of the Age of Reason."

terror, runny nose

An apoplectic Popper: “And being a typical historicist, he accepts the judgment of history as a moral one; for [Heraclitus] holds that the outcome of war is always just: ‘War is the father and king of all things. It proves some to be gods and others to be mere men, turning these into slaves and the former into masters . . . One must know that war is universal, and that justice—the lawsuit—is strife, and that all things develop through strife and by necessity.’”

lonely physics, national purpose

Poppa Popper proceeds: “Sweeping historical prophecies are entirely beyond the scope of scientific method. The future depends on ourselves, and we do not depend on any historical necessity. This prophetic wisdom is harmful, the metaphysics of history impede the application of the piecemeal methods of science to the problems of social reform. We may become the makers of our fate when we have ceased to pose as its prophets.”

fatal heart attack, fatty acids

Reinhold, while drinking orange juice: “Conflict is inevitable, and in this conflict power must be challenged by power. Since political conflict, at least in times when controversies have not reached the point of crisis, is carried on by the threat, rather than the actual use, of force, it is always easy for the casual or superficial observer to overestimate the moral and rational factors, and to remain oblivious to the covert types of coercion and force which are used in the conflict.”

alphabugs, antibiotics

Doc Wheeler runs the 2nd St. jail keeping the High School Dropout Prevention Program
breathing. The Sheriff’s Dept. provides guards, a metal detector, one man with a gun (encased), door buzzer (in out), sign in sheet, breakfast and lunch. None too clean, not too tidy.

Niebuhr goes nuts: “All social cooperation on a larger scale than the most intimate social group requires a measure of coercion. While no state can maintain its unity purely by coercion neither can it preserve itself without coercion. The inability of human beings to transcend their own interests sufficiently to envisage the interests of their fellow men as clearly as they do their own makes force an inevitable part of the process of social cohesion.”

3 hots and a cot, circle with a dot

Popper replies: “Instead of aiming and finding what a thing ‘really’ is, and defining its ‘true nature,’ science aims at describing how a thing behaves in various circumstances and especially whether there are any regularities in its behavior. It sees in our language, and especially in those of its rules which distinguish properly constructed sentences and inferences from a mere heap of words, the great instrument of scientific description, not as names of essences. To those philosophers who tell him that before having answered the ‘what is’ question he cannot hope to give an exact answer to any of the ‘how’ questions, the scientist will reply, if at all, by pointing out that he prefers that modest degree of exactness which he can achieve by his methods to the pretentious muddle which they have achieved by theirs.”

“when making an axe handle, the pattern is not far off”

Niebuhr nods: “The problem which society faces is clearly one of reducing force by increasing the factors which make for a moral and rational adjustment of life to life; of bringing such force as is still necessary under responsibility of the whole of society; of destroying the kind of power which cannot be made socially responsible; and of bringing forces of moral self-restraint to bear upon types of power which can never be brought completely under social control.”

Popper and Niebuhr were married yesterday at the 2nd St. jail under the federal Freedom of Marriage Act
Between conjecture and classification there is observation, experiment, data (collection and analysis), statistics, calculus, and a good guess about God’s intentions—probabilities, fractals, chaos and complexity. This is the thunderous city.

The form of the poem, the rhyme. Form cannot be first if you want to reach high artistic levels, since you are then bound by form, and that form is very often a betrayal of reality.

Yet I find I am attracted all the time to philosophies in short skirts, jewels and eyes lined with kohl. I love where her legs lead, to her very soul.

Three women hike by under an umbrella in a winter rain. Two men side by side run in rhythm. An oil truck takes the hill in low steady gear. My old Marine, 89, died last night without anxiety or fear. May I overcome my pain enough to reach the place where the deer lay down their bones and, like them, die alone.

When making an axe handle, the pattern is not far off.

The purpose of school is to introduce us to the world’s innumerable wonders. The periodic table, World Wars I and II, Huckleberry Finn and Jim. But soft, what light through yonder window breaks? It is a billion trillion nuclear detonations per second without which nothing can be done or faked.

The temple bell stops, but the sound still comes out of the flowers. Forests and the composite species will be nameless. Genetic prowess, receiving the sacrament, performing Lohengrin from the Great American Songbook, the look of love in all the wrong places, facebook, fakebooks, folios of old family photos on or in pianos.
How can I be both still and skilled?
When we took Pop-Pop off the ventilator, we put him in a refrigerator.
He stopped eating, he stopped breathing. Circle with a dot.
_He had his dream_, he’d rowed his boat.
No single line can completely explain—or rhyme—or untie this knot.

---

Shade

Your past, your romantic past, is a shadow. Like all towns, Port Angeles was a combination of rain and clouds, sun and mist, with a chamber of commerce, barrooms and boards of directors, the known and unknown. No one of course is completely unknown. I was known for my tragic love life. She had found another man, a backwoods man, living on the land but not above a night on the town, who according to her would wipe snot on his pants, a statement of poverty or thrift or anger against the niceties of society. All of us heated our hovels with wood but only the rich burned hardwoods, me and probably this guy were softwood gatherers.

There were few aspects to my life. First, I can remember a nook in the kitchen of the house I shared with a beautiful faceless woman who wore a ring in her nose where I wrote and watched flocks of unidentified birds comb a tree for seeds. This particular day the sky was blue with clean pillowy cumulus clouds floating toward Puget Sound. I believe all the poems written in that nook have been forgotten by their author.

Nights, for entertainment, I would wander the aisles of the supermarket, admiring everything and buying nothing. I had no money. The fluorescent lighting, clean straight neat shelving and floors, warmth and the fact I could identify nobody attracted me. I lived on cream cheese and honey sandwiches eating them leaning against the kitchen sink. Thinking go back to New York City which is what I ultimately did. Drove cross country nonstop three days and three nights seeing and feeling nothing.

I populated P.A. during the Reagan recession inherited from Carter. I’m unclear how presidents affect your life but good or bad, democrat or whig, alive or dead you’ve got to get a job, which I did. I supervised the living arrangements of developmentally disabled adults in what I thought were humorous contexts that gave no offense. They were beautiful and incorrigible having regular sex without protection. Normally harmless they’d sometimes have altercations with their neighbors. I balanced the checkbooks, paid the bills. Supposedly teaching living skills, I had few of my own as evidenced by my sleeping on the floor, I had no bed. One mature woman colleague judged me a short-timer living a useless fantasy about big cities. Still lost in my own history, still didn’t know the calculus.

I had a dog, Shade, black lab, leftover from my near-marriage until she realized I had no economic prospects, no interest in further sex or her logger boyfriend, and a complete inability to translate or imagine nesting and gestation. My homework comes to me in daily disconnected increments. Shade lived in my gray van, a Dodge slant six, which I could never afford to fix. Once the driveshaft disconnected from the rear axle and I tied it on with rope. Drove 60 miles on a knot. Shade was hyper and sad, both. He smelled bad but was a good dog with a lonely heart. When my wife who wasn’t a wife finally found a boyfriend who wouldn’t wipe snot on his pant leg they took Shade to British Columbia where I believe he runs free on a vast estate by the sea. I once beat Shade like a slave because he attacked a small dog out of frustration and loneliness and until I had kids and started saying and doing things just as bad to humans it was the lowest meanest moment of my life. The farmer who saw it will never forget or forgive it.

Having confessed all this there’s just one last fact to tell. The mountains were cold, the waters clear, deep snow and shadows.
The force that placed us here cannot be trusted

—with lines from Walt Whitman, Tristan Corbiere, Sterling Brown, Ernesto Cardenal, Kevin Bowen, Czeslaw Milosz and Ray A. Young Bear

At dinner, Zach asks about our nation’s history, wars. I say We’re taking on everyone, one at a time.

First Britain, then Britain again: “He was the surly English pluck, and there is no tougher or truer, and never was, and never will be.”
Next Mexico: “Death is indifferent to what hide he tans; life crushes men like flies.”
The War Between the States: “Well done, Mr. Cromartie. Time now for rest.”

Most of Latin America: “Not only humans longed for liberation. All ecology groaned for it too. The revolution is also one of lakes, rivers, trees, animals.”
Then Southeast Asia: “The slight bump the mortars make as they kiss the tube goodbye. Then the furious rain, a fist driving home the message: Boy, you don’t belong here.”
Now the Middle East: “A land to be admired like all lands. Harsh mountains and deserts, indigenous plants and people, adapted ungulates, carnivorous mammals.”

Can’t forget the Krauts & Nips: “Then I heard the bomber call me in: Little Friend, Little Friend, I got two engines on fire. Can you see me, Little Friend?”
Nor the Commies: “You mixed up farewell to an epoch with the beginning of a new one. I put this book here for you, who once lived, so that you should visit us no more.”
The original indigenous people say: “In time we’ll become prosperous, or else we’ll become martyrs. The force that placed us here cannot be trusted.”
Supermarket Celebration

Supermarket celebration
shoppers are cytoplasm searching for cellulose, muscle, photosynthesis.

Oils, petrochemical and vegetable love: faith and trust for instance, the Food and Drug Administration.

In America, the custom is to avoid meeting the other shoppers’ eyes. We graze like cows or wander as zombies to the oldies played over the aisles.

I’ve always liked it here.
Cornucopia, yes. Also a place to be alone and depressed, or cool off.

Water and bone
and the known ingredients. Neurons for remembering, calculating, touching stuff.

I have a favorite bagger who has the smile of a lover, wouldn’t rather be elsewhere.

Like glamour stars in bikinis (but unlike tomatoes and bananas)
cashiers and clerks are admired from afar.

Joe says What’s not to like? Ice cream, yogurt, profit, tofu.
To eat your fill is a blasphemy against God.
Morsel of Biomass

Negligible morsel of biomass
my fat belly, formerly abs insignificant yet it occupies me hourly while bored or hungry.

Fat is what? a picture of despair, giving up caring or man out of balance, other side of the world’s starving

mass, case of the soul’s malnutrition industrial agriculture, television supermarkets, vacations, hydrocarbons and the grid. Electricity, urban traffic jams, photons at final rest. Sugars synthesized, abundant plastics to carry them home in.

Into your house and into your mirror.

Memorizing the periodic table and learning the calculus makes one no thinner. Walking the mountain in heat and cold and rain, alone or in fire crews should do it. And a healthy fear of death. A laugh a day at sex and pain and fate which renews the biomass I hate.

Electron Herders

Electron herders, that’s us. It began earnestly late 20th century.
The first organic computers using polymerase and qubits came later. Weaponry via numbers, words magically appearing, telepathy. Measurements in which the last significant digit is the Other. However immediately depleted our resources were,
antibiotics were always at the ready.
Forgetting what we knew, reverting to austerity because in times of prosperity
we forgot to be austere.
It’s the uncertainty principle taken to the n\text{th} degree where the bad god resides, Zeus, passionate, confused, obtuse.
Yes, we are electron herders matter gatherers and shapers of our time. Cancerous cysts, irrational exuberance, collective experience, experiments gone well or wrong,
we were trying all along to last forever. Flood and fire saw to that.
Prospero was our answer who threw his book into the sea and wanted to be mortal, meditative.
Find himself. We found the world without the self cornus to oxalis orbitals and calculus waves and particles equally likely to be within us as without us.
Aaron’s Coconut

Start the day. In what way was the cold spring, last wet summer a global warning, indicator. Says one commentator on the op-ed page, the dislocations, wars, famines will tax humanity’s technology, philosophy, even religion’s ability to see past daily survival to the music in the rock. I’ve doubted the taboos one frog among many in the slow-heating beauty of the world we knew. Aaron’s coconut.

Peepers peeping in the heavy rains, wet with joy. Hawks and crows thrive below the jet stream, noise, perhaps our fears are overdrawn, we’ll get along, it’ll all hold together 10,000 years more,

the Holocaust will never be repeated, lush mountain and sere desert equally appreciated, baseball lazily paced summer evenings, the harvest in the fall

a sure thing, and the dying back a blessing come to all.

Either Way

— with lines by Emerson & Stephen Stills

If a poem or essay can end with a conclusion or its opposite, either one,
Can it be of any use to anyone?

Do the discrepancies and disparities, dualities and densities, reflect only the dementia
Of the bearer of the pencil?

First entertain, then enlighten if you can. One stretches truth in order to pretend,
Another leavens with levity one’s inevitable end.

Most days it’s not possible to bring your life into an expressible state. Disparate hopes, arduous chores, word choices. And, of course, the state of the state.

Driven by ideas rather than rhymes, for it is not metres, but a metre-making argument.
That makes a poem. Convenience store or university English department.

The day’s disputes, down to the meaning of the weather, leave you indisposed
To share your heart of zero and your inner rose.

It is the strong force, the energy of the loved ones combined with cooperation for good or war.
Dad’s years in New Guinea fighting Japs, he said, were his best by far.

The best that can be said or done is Be where you are. Love the one you’re with.
Not necessarily an adult of the opposite sex, just a kid who hates math.
And school, dresses goth, reads rarely but learns a lot from movies and YouTube,
Has the presence of mind to say I am who I am, deal with it. That’s who I want to be.

And have always been. Today clean the house, again. Woke up this morning to two thoughts:
How sweet to be alive! Life is tough.
Derivatives With Limits

Working over Birk’s Works and other tunes my saxophonist admires—Cheesecake, Blackbird—for the theoretical, applied mathematics inside an abstract, audial harmonization of the Big Bang and The Fall.

The derivative reveals the slope of the tangent along the curve of spacetime.
Follow that rope back and forth from the known to the unknown, your mountain to their shore, an umbilical cord between cities and stories, history and hope, divinity and mortality.

* * *

I never had anything wise or gentle to say to my parents. About bladder function. They got the same treatment as every other soldier. Which systems shut down first and how. The mail keeps coming even after you’ve stopped barking.

What is man made of? Man. Tough it out, laugh about it. Take it out on your spouse and sons. Democracy corrects itself through constant criticism, neurotic carping, daily life as low intensity warfare. That’s how we show we care.

* * *

Will my letter to the editor be in the funny pages? Will I even be able to read it? Did I send it to the wrong address? I’ve seen my death face and it’s not pretty.

Maybe I can watch your varsity games from a viewfinder in the afterlife. If I don’t finish The Iliad, maybe there’s a library there. Maybe. Maybe is a long, long time.

* * *

Homer tries several ways to explain the slaughter: by describing how a spear pierces a warrior’s jawbone or armor, how Achilles’ and Agamemnon’s hissy fits contribute to the pain of being a soldier and how the gods, esp. Zeus, are passionate, confused, obtuse. A callow youth even as a man. He was afraid and therefore could not comfort or help. Perhaps he has a question he’d like to ask but isn’t sure what it is or how to ask it.

* * *

Would you rather have the fever break or something great happen? The young senator or never pissing glass again. Look one way, from another come the heart's missed beats.

Can I call you back? We're trying to get my truck out of the mud. Who does he think he is, Nelson Mandela? Lieutenant, this corpse will not stop burning!

* * *

The hero loses urinary control. The virtuoso loses interest in her bow. The expert neglects to do the research.

How do cancer cells and bacteria cooperate to kill the host (you)? The way yr mum & pop fuck you up. It’s unavoidable and it’s not your fault.
A Job in the Garden of Eden

—for Peg on our 25th

In a strong marriage, a long marriage much cannot be said, should not be said. The spots on one’s skin will be wisely ignored. Differences of opinion are tolerated, not debated.

Your memories may disappoint your partner as not those she has selected, refracted. Over dinner for two at the Mill on the Floss it could be dangerous to compare wills, losses.

Or it might result in belly laughs, Shakespearean revelations, the night he got us lost in the woods or she peed her pants at a party. The marriage was Faustian, in a good way, like going to a job in the Garden of Eden.

Having survived 25 years, knowing 50’s impossible, what else do we know? Raised 2 boys, painted 3 houses.
Which is it: you can’t get started unless you’re riding some current bigger than your reporting voice or the best time to write is when you don’t have much to say and without plenty to say about everything you’ll get better right away.

Form is very often a betrayal of reality. Or we are initially drawn to poems by their passion and urgency but we are convinced by the formal means invented for their impelling motives. Every accidental crack or dent.

Not just mildly disquieted but actively repelled, running for the River Styx, the doors of Hell pell mell, there must be a crack, deep and unmendable, in the poet that the poet must forever try to mend. Or not.

While mortal poets imitate, immortal poets steal. That’s plagiarism. Fortunately the public feels less strongly about poetry than television, communism and aging gracefully through meditation.

Now I’m being silly. My silly indefatigable lusting, silly sadness, silly arguing and silly trusting. All I do not know about our nation’s history, wars and what showering the people you love with love does.

Ransacking apothegms, algorithms and selling the loot as memes, dissemblings. Bearing fardels with the warrior’s skull.
Words/Day

—with a line by Maxine Hong Kingston

You’ll soon lose interest in walking and talking and wearing the cap of a fool. You’ll.

Words: walk, talk, wear, cap, fool, you, soon, lose.

Idea!: Four word poems, ten syllables per line, six lines per paragraph. Graph.

Words: idea, word, poem, syllable, line, paragraph, per, graph.

The night I wrecked my father’s car necking with my date after the dance inch forward into traffic foot tapping the brake like an erection.

Words: night, car, father, wreck, date, dance, neck, traffic, inch, foot, tap, brake.

The USFS issued paper sleeping bags like tissues during forest fires and fed us steak and pop. All you could eat.

Words: paper, bag, sleep, tissue, fire, steak, pop, eat, food, forest, us.

Things hurt. Pain is a message to shut up and slow down.
Breathe deep, take care. Wait and see.

Words: hurt, pain, shut, slow, breathe, care, wait, see, deep, message.

Just as the war in the Iliad goes back and forth according to Hector’s fortunes, so does marriage and a truck in mud.

Words: just, war, back, forth, fortune, marriage, truck, mud.

Fear destroys the last free assessment of life.
But what is there to fear. Death is most of all like sleep. Death is but a dream missed.

Words: fear, free, assess, destroy, life, death, sleep, dream, like,
but, miss.
By the Seat of the Soul’s Pants

To presume to write to someone about courage and not complaining, don’t importune or make dying people cry. I’ve always said Leave me alone with autumn. Don’t stand around my bed, I won’t be in it.

Over 7 years after he died, I finally looked through my father’s papers. Couple of unclaimed insurance policies, savings bonds, our genealogy and on graph paper in an engineer’s block lettering quotations from The Seat of the Soul.

Reincarnation and karma are the chicken soup of the soul, the after life is the reward for our colossal imperfections. Along with banking instructions, he’d underlined this: Your soul is immortal. It exists outside of time. It has no beginning and no end. Every time you ask for guidance you receive it. If we are not at home in the world, contributing purpose, we lose our desire to stay here—and we die.

The physical world is an unaccountable given in which we unaccountably find ourselves and which we strive to dominate to survive or it is a learning environment created jointly by the souls that share it and everything that occurs within it serves our learning.

Sin is activity directed toward self rather than toward service to others. Sickness is sin. Almost any condition can be corrected. You are part of God, therefore, think in a godly manner. If you cannot accept this, forget it all. Do not even begin.

The first act of free will: How do I wish to learn? If we participate in the cause, it is impossible not to participate in the effect. We shall come to honor all of life sooner or later. Until you become aware of the effects of your anger, you will continue to be an angry person.

Walking is the most commonly suggested exercise. Also, breathing. “Thy will be done.” Concentrate on that! These expressions of certainty, conjectures and guesses were inscribed by him in block letters on graph paper.
Urination, don’t take it for granted

Dick Burton examining Liz Taylor’s rectal sphincter for blood.
That’s love.
    Sexual love. Pornographic, anthropological, primate love.

* * *

Newton wrote the Principia
So only serious mathematicians would comprehend.
“I’ve been faking my way through life,” he lied.

* * *

They say the white pine whispers
What the wind can’t say.
In the blowdown there’s a slow ballet.

* * *

I am a citizen of the empire.
Moonlight & heartbeat.
Zach’s feet stink.

* * *

One hawk.
Flying low, scaring crows.
No snow.

* * *

Watres pipyn g hoot.
First, entertain. Then expectorate (spit).
Lapdancer, spiderweb.

* * *

Summer morning, rabbit in my garden.
Let it be or send a warning.
Let the rabbit eat my peas.
Avoid the I,
    Avoid yourself, and enter the void?
         I think not.

Fundamental Physics

The four fundamental forces:
Zeus, Aphrodite, Ares (or Mars), and Adam and Eve.

\[ \langle \langle + > \rangle > \quad \rightarrow \quad \langle \rangle - \langle \rangle \]
Electric field induced by a positive electric charge
Electric field induced by a negative electric charge

Deutsch thinks that such ‘jumps to universality’ must occur not only in the capacity to calculate things, but also in the capacity to understand things, and in the closely related capacity to make things happen. And he thinks that it was precisely such a threshold that was crossed with the invention of the scientific method. There were plenty of things we humans could do, of course, prior to the invention of that method: agriculture, or the domestication of animals, or the design of sundials, or the construction of pyramids. But all of a sudden, with the introduction of that particular method of concocting and evaluating new hypotheses, there was a sense in which we could do anything. The capacities of a community that has mastered that method to survive, to learn, and to remake the world according to its inclinations are (in the long run) literally, mathematically, infinite. And Deutsch is convinced that the tendency of the world to give rise to such communities, more than, say, the force of gravitation, or the second law of thermodynamics, or even the phenomenon of death, is what ultimately gives the world its shape, and what constitutes the genuine essence of nature. ‘In all cases,’ he writes, ‘the class of transformations that could happen spontaneously—in the absence of knowledge—is negligibly small compared with the class that could be effected artificially by intelligent beings who wanted those transformations to happen. So the explanations of almost all physically possible phenomena are about how knowledge would be applied to bring those phenomena about.’ And there is a beautiful and almost mystical irony in all this: that it was precisely by means of the Scientific Revolution, it was precisely by means of accepting that we are not the center of the universe, that we became the center of the universe.

What is a typical place in the universe like? Let me assume that you are reading this on Earth. In your mind’s eye travel straight upwards a few hundred kilometers. Now you are in the slightly more typical environment of space. But you are still being heated and illuminated by the sun, and half your field of view is still taken up by the solids, liquids and scum of the Earth. A typical location has none of those features. So, travel a few trillion kilometers further in the same direction. You are now so far away that the sun looks like other stars. You are at a much colder, darker and emptier place, with no scum in sight. But it is not yet typical: you are still inside the Milky Way galaxy, and most places in the universe are not in any galaxy. Continue until you are clear outside the galaxy—say, a hundred thousand light years from Earth. At this distance you could not glimpse the Earth even if you used the most powerful telescope that humans have yet built. But the Milky Way still fills much of your sky. To get to a typical place in the universe, you have to imagine yourself at least a thousand times as far out as that, deep in intergalactic space. What is it like there? Imagine the whole of space notionally divided into cubes the size of our solar system. If you were observing from a typical one of them, the sky would be pitch black. The nearest star would be so far away that if it were to explode as a supernova, and you were staring directly at it when its light reached you, you would not even see a glimmer. That is how big and dark the universe is. And it is cold: it is at that background temperature of 2.73 Kelvin, which is cold enough to freeze every known substance except helium.
And it is empty: the density of atoms out there is below one per cubic meter. That is a million times sparser than atoms in the space between the stars, and those atoms are themselves sparser than in the best vacuum that human technology has yet achieved. Almost all the atoms in intergalactic space are hydrogen or helium, so there is no chemistry. No life could have evolved there, nor any intelligence. Nothing changes there. Nothing happens. The same is true of the next cube and the next, and if you were to examine a million consecutive cubes in any direction the story would be the same.

The 5 colors of sadness:
disappointed, didn’t get what was wanted confused, don’t know what to do next, where to go lonely, no one to love or be loved by sorry, unable to help or change what happened depressed, can’t get out of bed, want to kill self

Unless a society is expecting its own future choices to be better than its present ones, it will strive to make its present policies and institutions as immutable as possible. Therefore Popper’s criterion can be met only by societies that expect their knowledge to grow – and to grow unpredictably. And, further, they are expecting that if it did grow, that would help. This expectation is what I call optimism, and I can state it, in its most general form, thus: The Principle of Optimism – All evils are caused by insufficient knowledge. Optimism is, in the first instance, a way of explaining failure, not prophesying success. It says that there is no fundamental barrier, no law of nature or supernatural decree, preventing progress. Whenever we try to improve things and fail, it is not because the spiteful (or unfathomably benevolent) gods are thwarting us or punishing us for trying, or because we have reached a limit on the capacity of reason to make improvements, or because it is best that we fail, but always because we did not know enough, in time. But optimism is also a stance towards the future, because nearly all failures, and nearly all successes, are yet to come.

As I think of things to do I do them.
Thing by thing I get things done.
That’s how my father and his father did things.
I guess my mother and her mother did things that way too.

Sometimes I’m driving and I think how my father and his father drove too.
There was weather and they had problems. There is weather and I have problems. Time exists only in the human mind. But if the mind exists, time exists. Joy everywhere. Joy at birth. Joy at death. All joy, all times.

blueberries

blueberries gasoline and prostate gland breast cancer Wonderbread and pacifier controlled experiment space travel and honey peanuts inductive reasoning and electricity tornadoes torture chamber and biscuits copyright car radio cantaloupe golden eagle lunch break tomato Romanian songbook rhubarb and barbed wire always hungry nevermind meat loaf goosefoot mango juice Ipad mosquito bite city street and broccoli Chinese cabbage female sex drive water sport pure contralto goat yogurt new year black death white light and green tea
Jack’s Commitments

These are Jack’s commitments: to his body exercise, stretch, heal if possible and prepare for death.
To his sons: love and respect and teach, learn to be aware of the effects of his anger or forever be an angry man.

To his wife: in equal portions serenity and uncertainty,
the early years, the middle years, and the final years.
To the community: to treat it as distinct unknowable individuals much like heavenly spirits but also dangerous animals.

To poetry, religious in its contemplation of experience under the eye of eternity, in the realm of the gift and the realm of the sacred:
his individual experiment gone well or wrong.

To his student: not to hurt for gain or inflict more pain than stimulates growth. Both of them are students of each other, the periodic table and the civil war.
Other than that, expect to forget and be forgotten.

To his friends who are merely friendly: lonely inexorably, working hard and playing hard without self-pity severe about the law and believing in the death penalty they’re the men you’ll want in your foxhole warriors at the gate.

To himself by which I mean mind or something hidden, intestate:
a quiet place and time to think deeply or simply but not too easily to quiet the questions, to know his bones and the particles of sunlight they stilled and slowed.
Problems

— with a line from Robert Francis

Problems many of which are not getting solved not because I'm not resolved but because I delay to savor the day, the moon and the season which is why I'm a non-person under the eye of eternity.

Except for my unpaid bills. And iambic pentameter.
Aaron fails English. Is there summer school?
What an asshole! I want to slug him, but also his teacher, Mr. Fisher, who's probably a nice guy, just doing his job and raising a family.

Then there's the catheter from my last surgery
I was so sick I thought I was dying. The out of network pathologist and radiologist have declined my insurance and charged me to the hilt. Like I had a choice face up in the emergency room. Facing doom, you don't ask questions.

Now that I've rejoined the living I've got to raise a million bucks to save organic farms and endangered species I'll never see.

Perhaps none of this matters and chanting's the answer, Buddhist precepts,
or as Dad would say This too shall pass.
Life is a back and forth game but baseball is zen meditation,
you're in right field, nothing's happening, nothing's gonna happen,

but you can't let your attention wander for one second.
I should clean and oil my trumpet for Saturday's gig or the valves will stick. And leave early enough not to get stuck in traffic. Other lives, other quilts.

A guy who takes the subway to a dead metal desk and the boss who fires him with the cold hard eyes of one who accepts the rules entirely. Actually we're fortunate to have rules because otherwise child soldiers armed with AK-47s would be shooting up the village and setting fire to our thatched roofs. Instead, under the rule of law, when snow falls even old roofs look like problems with proofs.

Get the Most Out of Life of Pi

To read or watch movies, that is the question. When tired at workday’s end, depressed about death’s certainty and my recent surgery unable to contribute purpose i.e., figure out whether to bomb Iran or worship Krishna and other gods such as Homer gives us in the Iliad I lack vision therefore I choose television. Chemistry text, bifurcated plant key esp. grasses, intro to calculus, physics unopened time slides by inexorably. That’s the dilemma with no resolution, drooping rachis, striations on the lemma. Dying chooses you. You don’t choose dying. So go slow as the day will allow. The cancer patient’s real work is facing harsh realities and making adjustments: getting the most out of life, considering what his children will need after he’s gone, preparing his wife, parents, colleagues and friends, and completing important professional tasks. Get the most out of life. That’s all God asks. In Life of Pi the tiger is tiresome, short-sighted eating everything in sight today, no plan for tomorrow. The boy, however, is beautiful, reading the lifeboat manual, building a resting place on the ocean from oars and life vests, writing about his emotions, loneliness and observations. The tiger’s obsession with killing keeps our boy alive with fear, an aphrodisiac, a distraction from any hint of despair. And then there is the ultimate unknown, the boy’s conversations with Krishna which explain the innumerable stars and their gentle glow.
Anomie

Should we invite the neighbors over for dinner? Their politics so different from ours. All the more reason. Combat anomie! He’s worried the town’s losing population but opposes immigration. I like immigrants but hate passing people on my morning walk.

The whole mountainous western region of the state is losing population at a rate of 1% per annum. The young move out, the old stay put but young artists priced out of big cities move in looking for affordable studio space. How low can the population go as long as rents stay low?

We did agree about the fire department expansion being premature (him) or unnecessary (me). He argued we should renovate the high school first the roof is caving in and walls crumbling. But you can teach under a spreading chestnut tree or baobab and science needs the world for a laboratory.

I teach at the old 2nd St. jail in Pittsfield a town that doesn’t know if it’s coming up or going down. A few shootings last month, no deaths. They’re holding their breath but also trying to attract life science businesses to the industrial park. The local bank’s expanding, buying smaller banks in neighboring civilizations.

Eventually our fire department got the vote they wanted, just called another meeting and packed the auditorium. The final winning argument was we can do the school, the fire house and the police station all at once. Don’t accept defeat, limitations. Defeat anomie! Anomie means lawlessness and purposeless in Greek so that’s not exactly what we’re trying to defeat. It’s the mismatch between our aspirations and resources, no, the dissonance between our tribe and nation, the individual as sexual animal and intellectual, the farmer and the banker, the loved one and the litter, whatever happens to you after you die and belief in reincarnation.

For me, it always boils down to mortality every conversation, which is why no one comes to dinner. Whether the fire department buys an exorbitant parcel at the expense of a future school renovation in a town slightly losing population but still viable with a college, bank, artists and a few working farms is everything and nothing, as Borges says. Deutsch says death ought to be curable. The new high school or fire station, conditions like anomie v. democracy, new life forms, self-conscious species from the laboratory or the biome. How de body? Today ok. Tomorrow I don’t know. Potential energy, lover, killer, anomie. Karl Popper had such faith in the rational whereas Niebuhr acknowledged man’s ego is uncontrollable except by force. Conflict is inevitable. But at dinner we agree it doesn’t always have to be violent or terminal. We can do the fire department, police station, the school and anomie.
Max Joy Marries Minnie Pain

Kissed his student.
Punched his friend.
Accused her lover.

What if China’s navy asserts control where our navy also patrols? Should we concede the South China Sea? Not on your life! Or maybe. Lives may be lost but so what. There’s so much biomass in the crosswalks.

Lord have mercy on my soul Which means bring my confusion into an expressible state before it’s too late.

Sal went to jail. I belong to the loved ones. Never may the anarchic man’s thoughts be my thoughts. Not one.

It could be cancer or just a cyst That killed Frost’s considerable speck Instead of considering its considerable intelligence.

Although bottomless ancient night stretches From your short life forward, remember It also stretches backward without measure.

There are few straight lines in nature and only one alternative to aging, so suck it up! Suppose everything’s fine and you’ve wasted your time wearing sackcloth over your soul? Start now knowing joy.
World Order

“If you think America is doing just fine, then skip ahead to the poetry reviews. If, however, you worry about a globe spinning out of control, then World Order is for you.” –John Micklethwait, NY Times Book Review

— with lines by David Ray, Tom Friedman, Sophocles & Homer

Financiers feel superior to farmers and pundits have it over poets.
All to the good because if you think America’s doing just fine, don’t skip to the poetry reviews.
Our enemies are barbarous, our allies duplicitous
but our smart bombs are smart—that’s how they found you.

Dad said all wars are resource wars. Follow the money. The world needs more order, nothing less than Nazis, never may the anarchic man’s thoughts be my thoughts, each shove sends a ping, shields urge on shields, helmets helmets, we can be the reigning kings between the last empire and the next or implement a vision of collective deliberation and binding agreements. Can China’s navy be harnessed to ensure free passage through the South China Sea? We’ll see how things work out in the next generation.

In the meantime should I read Henry Kissinger’s meditations?

He who thinks poetry’s effete probably considers Darwin a geek and Einstein a postal clerk. Containment means leaving space for the passionate and zealous to face themselves and giving them missiles that don’t work.
Slowing everyone down until one thing’s done well–

governance or sustenance or brotherhood.
When violence comes to the neighborhood
the hierarchy will hold or fold, it is then the peace work proves relevant.
Failing to achieve understanding, we’re searching outer space for an entity to unite us as humanity.
That person, or city, is consciousness.
By that what is meant. Sitting still and thinking deeply on the relation of anger to coercion, systems for correcting the decisions of earlier presidents. We’re required to report incidents of depression to a doctor because you’re a valued member of our community or so insignificant no one notices or cares.

How necessary the interface of war and poetry!

The Wound That Never Heals

Science can’t save you, neither can religion, at least Popper and Niebuhr, philosophers and poets, are entertainers, which is why actors and athletes are paid so much. Thanks for the summaries. I was teaching Shakespeare’s 92nd ridiculous sonnet to my student who lays blacktop in the off season Shakespeare bellyaching about dying without her love a feeling foreign to a modern adolescent sensibility although many teens are pretty far gone searching for their mothers or fathers in their dazed lovers’ eyes. Which is why we call it “the wound that never heals.” Or the lesion that’s always lengthening. And bleeding.

Muslim fundamentalists and their Christian counterparts are a mystery to me. Pews and prayer rugs, the airless indoor environment of religious worship, reading scriptures, hypnotized by hymns and fainting from staring at candles through stained glass windows, almost certain the preacher is faking his certainty about the afterlife. It’s not my problem. A more immediate concern: receding gums and tooth extractions, swollen joints, poor lubrication and circulation, wave after wave of viral infection, the occasional antibiotic-resistant bacterial attack, usually urinary, and who knows what internal organs are dividing and conquering without mercy or cease, i.e. the wound that never heals.
It is wise not to overvalue your continued existence, good not to be innumerate, unable to compare a mere 80 years with say $6.0 \times 10^9$ or all of time (to date) times the multiverse. Conversely, it is interesting all of space and most of history is contained in your mind (realizing of course it’s just a map of the cosmos not the cosmos itself, or is it?). I’m unable to wrestle free, tongue in that cavity and locked in my memories, so separate and disparate from the biomass in the crosswalks, even my spouse. Alone, so alone, even your doctor can only devote limited thought to your situational mortality through the redress of poetry—also a wound that never heals.

Snow for eternity, that’s what this February’s been. All to the good, for someone it’s the final February so enjoy it to the extent you can. By that I mean joy. Joy at birth. Joy at death. All joy. All times. Anyway, that was Shakespeare’s message: even tragedies are comedies. May, a Buddhist, chants each morning. Her husband, Marc, who’s Jewish, plays league tennis. Their son, Aaron, will soon make Eagle scout. How does that relate to your wound that never heals? Luck runs out. For D.H. Lawrence in New Mexico or Ulysses S. Grant in Ohio or Yasujiro Ozu in Tokyo or Satyajit Ray in Bombay or Rabindranath Tagore in Bangalore or at the Battle of the Atlantic in the Azores.

The night is a poultice, winter or summer solstice. My anonymity will not affect the anomie ghettoside seeing for myself how season by season vacations and accomplishments accumulate, late in life and early on, sunrise over mountains or moonrise over Bronx. Masturbator, prisoner of war. Hospice of the Holy Roman Empire. Numerous blue notes: the 3 flat, 7 flat, 5 flat, the 6 flat and the 2 flat too. I don’t get what Wallace Stevens means by imagination. When groundhog shows up as a totem, there is opportunity to explore the mystery of death without dying. This then is the purpose of purposelessness (and of eating less)! Now what about that wound that never heals.
The Skeptical Observer column in Scientific American was somewhat alarming when he accepted a paranormal explanation for how his wife’s grandfather’s inoperable transistor radio played music from its hiding spot in his sock drawer on, and only on, their wedding day. Now I’ll have to believe my father (or mother!) is watching me perform private sexual acts with (or without) partners or that they could even know my thoughts. Or aliens are attending our committee meetings and making perfectly reasonable decisions given the available information and the world is rotating just fine without humans. These possibilities—angels, ghosts, aliens—are better than holocaust and genocide. In this way, and only in this way, does doom become endurable. The wound that never heals in the end is all you’ll feel.
Good at Marketing

Dad said I’d be good at marketing since I like making lists. Classifying the woods and herbs, jazz tunes, poets’ poems and poems for people and I’ve also considered sorting humans into novelistic categories:

- compassionate, responsible
- logical, radical
- scientific, silent
- garrulous, querulous
- masterful, mindful

- leader, liar
- persnickety, prejudiced
- appealing, apoplectic
- decisive, persistent
- natural, enervating
- effective, fastidious
- passive, embarrassed
- aimless, familiar

- sociable, impregnable
- amorous, demanding
- delirious, disciplined
- silly, assimilated
- holy, hungry

Next there would be settings. Deserts, moon colonies, submarines, George Herbert and his God.

Motives for acting driven by personality, DNA (fucking DNA!), sinning, necessity and whatever happens in the afterlife. Spinning with the planet but sitting still and thinking deeply.

* * *

School bus, snow plow train whistle, cello alarm clock, traffic report Beijing, Cincinnati former adversaries, adolescent lovers any day could be your last day, Hombre mango, avocado superstition, cancer treatment enhanced interrogation, blurry vision jacket and tie, why am I waiting quiet remembering, day by day goes by without poetry without grace seedless watermelon, rabbit in my garden too much to do, not much to do hip hop rhythms, how white people like to shake hands who can’t do anything about his skin color, Nelson Mandela pluck the gold key, touch me personally breakfast salad, stay in school Afghanistan, strangulation banana, Guatemala mountains and rivers forever, never will I allow myself to live long enough to end like that that’s for sure, sure in your computer the brain contains the universe, the universe has a brain stream cutting gorge, last snow patch photosynthesis, missing dad (or mom) in poem whatever you want, the freedom of summer gone and only one fuck paper sleeping bag, ear souvenir peace, twice lemonade, amulet
how to make history interesting for Johnny, washing your pajamas chain saw, no strip joints or strip malls in the Gaza Strip frantic century, facial tissue Jerusalem, reducing fractions polytechnic institute, grandma’s sauce
All the Worlds There Are

—after the Wikipedia entry, “Omega”

Just watching raindrops slapping leaves is better than anything requiring electricity including fame and posterity. Monday morning I walk over to the art museum stand before Homer. I’m imagining life in ancient Greece, the land largely deforested to build a navy, white as bone, a tourist attraction. The sea too being denuded of its fish, super-efficient fishery fleets, and every human wanting a healthy dose of omega 3. O my God, omega!

the 24th and last letter of his alphabet, which means great and has a value of 800, often used to denote the last, the end, the ultimate limit of a set, as in I am the alpha and the omega (which was omitted from the oldest manuscripts). In physics, omega (ohm) is a unit of electrical resistance, in chemistry, oxygen-18, a stable isotope, in statistical mechanics, it represents multiplicity (the number of microstates) in a system. In astronomy, the density of the universe (density parameter), the ranking of a star’s brightness in a constellation, and the orbital elements: the longitude of the ascending node and the designation of the argument of periapsis of an orbit.

Also the solid angle or rate of precession in a gyroscope. In particle physics, omega baryons. In complex analysis, the Omega constant, a solution to Lambert’s W-function. In calculus, a variable for a 2-dimensional region, usually corresponding to the domain of a double integral. In topos theory, the codomain of the subobject classifier of an elementary space. In combinatory logic, the looping combinator. In group theory, the omega and agemo subgroups of a p-group. In Big O notation, the asymptotic behavior of functions. Chaitin’s uncomputable constant.

Omega watches, badge of the Supreme Court, last mission of the Space Shuttle program, God of War, Heroes of Olympus, Pokemon’s Omega Ruby, Sonic the Hedgehog’s E-123. Symbol of resistance to the Vietnam War draft. Year of date of death. Lowest-ranked wolf.

In molecular biology, a two-point crossover. The lower case omega denotes the carbon atom furthest from the carboxyl group of a fatty acid. One of the RNA polymerase subunits. The dihedral angle associated with the peptide group. A measure of evolution at the protein level. In dynamics, angular velocity or angular frequency. In computational fluid dynamics, the specific turbulence dissipation rate. In meteorology, the Lagrangian time rate of change of pressure for a parcel of air. Natural frequency in circuit analysis and signal processing. The omega meson. NULL, a missing or inappropriate value.

The elasticity of financial options. The tracking error of an investment manager. In linguistics, the phonological word. The archetype of a manuscript tradition. In eschatology, the symbol for the end of everything.

The beginning of my first week without tv. No more movies. If I have nothing to do or I’m too bored to do anything, I’ll just sit still.
see what happens. Be like weather.
Be under the weather, with the weather,
in weather. Watch weather from the window.
Wait for change, in me and the weather.
How will I change? This is life and not life.
In 15 years or so I’ll be gone from the earth, bones whitening on some mountain or rotting in the lowlands river or estuary I lived near,
flesh to sweat flesh with the population, dead.

This death, consciousness of which should give this life’s activities perspective, except for the red sunset which remains untouched by atomic IQ;
and dead, laying open to the blue sky and dry leaves one autumn like last autumn, or the autumn
I realized my insignificance.
Purposes Incomprehensible and Wonderful as These Purposes

—with lines by Big Virge, George Herbert and Sophocles

Imperfect world, purposeless person.
I retired to pursue perfection learn jazz tunes, woody and herbaceous plants,
read every inch of English literature,

Scientific American and Foreign Affairs, have an affair with an American.
Oh, and by the way, before you ask, I’m from Mars.
Orbiting your planet, admiring the girls.

Paraphrasing prayers by George Herbert to share with Jesus believers on talk radio shows where we try to bring your lives into expressible states before it’s too late and climate change inundates you.

Reversed thunder, savior-side-piercing spear,
one day you’re feeling fine, the next not.
We’re pretty matter of fact, clear about the fact of death. Once you’re gone most of us forget your face and previous accomplishments. The place you lived is repopulated with the next generation (of aliens) and that ought to be a comfort, a sort of restful certainty all is well, nothing special need be done.

Bluebirds are back, crows are mating on the sky and chasing hawks away from their nests. Juncos and sparrows glean together. I hear pileated woodpeckers jackhammering and barred owls hooting soothingly.

Herons smoothing feathers and spearing fish.
Everything is as one would wish.
Numberless are the world’s wonders
but none more wonderful than aliens.
Brodmann Area 4

The debate between free will and fate has taken a hard right turn to neuroscience, Brodmann area 4 the primary motor cortex of the brain located in the posterior frontal lobe (the one cut out of the one who once flew over the cuckoo’s nest). This area of the cortex has the pattern of an homunculus! a little man, a troll, the all-wise, mandragon, the golem of Jewish folklore.

This little man has a penis that, when fully engorged, is equal in size to his entire body. However, diseases such as Parkinson’s, Alzheimer’s, Huntington’s, Lou Gehrig’s and Creutzfeldt-Jakob are gunning for him. His basal ganglia are garbled and he ends up giving poor advice and making bad decisions. Who can say what happens to his soul or cells or if all will be given or well?

I was listening to the famous astronomer on public radio who expressed the certainty there is no death, your soul is immortal, it exists outside of time (but not space?). That’s because time exists only in the human mind (as does the universe including the professional baseball season which is canceled when you’re dead).

By Spring, my problems will be solved or ignored, either way is good.

Groundhog holds the knowledge of death without dying for man needs help from every creature born. Will the holocaust wipe the smile off the face of our romantic comedy or will laughter outlast the outburst? About the dark times will there be singing? Yes, there will be singing and some of the songs will be sidesplitting.

Solving the murder reveals the city. Nature of kinships and economic sustenance, who loves whom and why, when things happened and how they lost and found themselves in what happened. Because a meter-making argument cannot appear from nothingness, purposelessness, just cold. He does not go where he was supposed to go. He is in the desert, Sonoran desert, counting cactus buds and ocotillo blooms. This is the afterlife for which he has always longed.
Erythrocyte Sedimentation Rate

I’m thinking about rhyme and meter
but also my kidneys and my liver.

The nation-state and the failed state and whether killers should be executed or forgiven. Meditate on this: Thy will be done. Do what has to be done don’t ask why. Clean the dishes and the house.

Will I be left to my own resources or will all be given? Nevermind what you can’t imagine. Living’s life’s priority. Friends are merely friendly, they’re in the majority. Loneliness is the default position. Rain happens.

We supply the reasons.

How do people process their lives without art?
By caring not.

Ignore
yr autobiography.

In olden days, if you couldn't stand to pee
the family buried you under the pecan tree.

Robot-Assisted Surgery

“How the hell do I know if there’s an afterlife? I don’t even know how the can opener works.” —Woody Allen Appointment to have organ removed by robot-assisted surgeon.

Air-conditioned, no mosquitoes in the OR. When you arrive
You'll remove all your clothes. Naked before the ladies, nurses
Who have seen it all before. Mainly remember you're not unique.
Think about the government while they're mixing up the medicine.
There's always governance even if there's little or no government.
Back to counting backwards. Inside out, if I die, will I know it?

At 70, Jack's running the gauntlet with some skill!
Benny Golson wonders aloud what might have been
Had Clifford Brown not been killed in that auto accident.
Jack's girlfriend once said he was the reincarnation of Clifford
But he doesn't believe in ghosts, karma or an afterlife.
Benny's old girlfriend Betty inspired the tune Along Came Betty
And that's the most afterlife Benny or Betty's gonna get.

The Trojan bench being not as deep as the Greek
Once Sarpedon and Hector go down even the lucky shot
To Achilles' feet is not enough to save the town.
Aeneas is no match for wily Odysseus
Although unbeknownst to all he has the last laugh when Rome
Conquers Athens, the Myrmidons, what's left of Ilion
And the whole known world from India to Britain.

It's not bad to acknowledge death's primacy
Although after a while you stop remembering
To fear. That's when everything becomes clear Purpose v. purposelessness matters less Anomie v. rule of law, that's a preference
Love v. loneliness, worth about 25 cents
Or a million bucks in the light of the holocaust.

Nothing but light, love and the majesty of death in the room.
Machines stand ready like marines, their beauty is in the motion
That overcomes inertia. The food supply is deeply compromised
So eat whatever you want. Mourning the dead is part of the business Of healing and staying alive. When you get to the afterlife, walk with eyes open,
Ocotillo and cactus may be in flower. The robot does the work, imposes
Its own small order, like a girl on a bicycle with disorder in her hair.
Cast a cold eye and wait

What do you think of the man peeing, the ever-shitting mouse?
Finding meaning in killing and cleaning house.

Sal quit school,
your lover stops writing.
Eternity’s waiting,
a lazy-eyed tiger.

Or everything’s cool
even the fighting.
The weather is perfect for swimming or dying.

Physical dizziness,
mental uneasiness.
Isn’t exercise
the best blood pressure medicine?

Universally sad about my mortality but also glad to be leaving the party.

The noise was incessant, success inconsistent.
The demands of my neighbors,
employers, persistent.

Belonging is longing for complete solitude.
Seas, odysseys
the loneliness of being spouse.

Rain of April, rain of August writing of it dry as dust.
What’s my reason, rhyme?
Pass the time, pass the season.
If you’re alone as you get, why are you crying?
Hold steady until a tsunami.
Then swim if you can. Don’t gulp.
Hit in the head by speeding debris. Couldn’t be helped.

The Scientific Way To Do Mathematics

“The first fallacy is often called by philosophers ‘the act-object fallacy’: confusing the subject matter of a mental state, such as a belief, with the mental state itself. Suppose an over eager brain scientist were to announce the new field of ‘neuromathematics,’ in which old-fashioned mathematics was to be replaced by studies of the brains of mathematicians. Instead of talking about numbers and geometrical forms, we are to talk only of neurons—this being the scientific way to do mathematics.” —Colin McGinn

As air and leaf litter are substrate for the bird.
And what makes a human. Separation from the substrate.
Believing the substrate and the subject are separately defined.

Whatever gives the poem form—three lines—is the substrate.
Things will be said. The signer and the seer must supply the words Which are the substrate of the mind. A beautiful week ahead.

No hundred year storms, normal summer warming.
Your bones are white as lightning and strong as sticks and stones.
At Pat’s 80th b’day party most of us are old and jolly.

250,000 port-o-potties. There’s a way to wash one out
And a way not to. Arctic ice melt. Slushies. One can count Past one or nine by inserting zero to keep the rows.

Implied is an order beyond the small order we impose.
Goes to greatness human and divine. The two white wines
Death brings to the garden are the love between good friends—

Abstract. Suppose there is no afterlife, to understand the end
Imagine the beginning—no brain, no mind, no name, no I. Zero
Had already been inflated and the rose was in the garden.
Long As You’re Living
Long As You’re Living

Quiet morning.
Successful surgery.

No tv!
Watch weather.

Do nothing.
Be nameless.

Suppose cows.
Scare crows.

Harmless habits.
Armless robot.

Like a delusion.
A late night movie.

Expect to forget and be forgotten. Information.

Interstate.
Toilet seat.

How soon after cryogenesis can one cry or ejaculate?
Exponential Decay Function

Spring is in its prime again each leaf beautiful much is edible
birds and peepers are musical at dawn.

The days walk slowly toward Utah and Italy.
My left nut hurts.
Joy overwrites death.

Well, well. You’re well alone in your brain only a negligible fraction escaping as words and actions.

Every leaf that’s coming out is out. Including the self to the west and south
a golem, mandragon, an elf.

Aaron was stacking
the last of last year’s firewood. He found a spotted salamander—

Ambystoma maculatum—Big mouth—hidden under the final log with a worm and centipede for a meal.

I exclaimed Rare species!
but it’s common, fossorial lives in moist woods
under cemetery stones and memorials.

Eats earthworms, snails, slugs insect larvae
and adult beetles.
Aging as a Spiritual Practice

—with lines by Andrew Marvell and Wallace Stevens

Beautiful summer day. You know you're gonna die that's why you know no joy. Obsessed with self, there is no answer unless religion, tv, stories, sports matter. So what if nothing rhymes and I don't bring my life into an expressible state or fight purposelessness, anomie. No one writes. Running the gauntlet alone. A good day to die, the Apaches say.

For men like us dying's easy, it's living that's hard. And since dying's much like living, that's hard too. There's some contentment in letting community decide your place in it. We're not talking to you. Really, it's a perfect day. Every leaf is out that's coming out. The grass is high and unidentified yet another year. Being knowledgeable is the best defense against your insignificance.

Can't stop the quince from blossoming or my sons from smoking, speeding. The best that can be done or said's a blessing. Less tv, less guessing about the effects of your anger unless you want to be an angry man forever. Coming from the funeral with friends, talking on the telephone. OK about being alone.

Alive, almost sure of it. Whether I'm a visitor to my life or the actual owner. Mature poets steal, most are masturbators. This house could use a good cleaning, dusting for ghosts. I should subscribe to the local newspaper, do my job well, do less until one thing's done well. What would that be? Old, and yet so young.

There are a million poets, I'm poet #500K. Plenty of mysteries, infinite philosophies, prayers, laws and unwritten rules. That's why we go to school, life's complicated. All I do not know: ATP, probabilities, the glorious revolution, meiosis and mitosis and all I'll never see, the bottom of the ocean, the palm at the end of the mind, a wolverine.

There are certain indicators, undeniable, inexorable. Forget-me-not, is that all I want? To get lucky, you gotta be careful first. To be great, you gotta be willing to sound BAD. Although we cannot make the sun stand still yet will we make him run. Brave revelers. Signed engagement letter attached. Attachment to self and to things to do.
Antifragility

—The relation between fragility, convexity, and sensitivity to disorder is mathematical.

In last night’s movie, a young writer and an older, married with children French woman fall in love. They did not meet during a village massacre and money is no object, Manhattan the place I was priced out of. But after everything has happened she cannot leave her children, not even for love, because of love, the love that brooks no serendipity.

Here, in my family, love is taken for granted except when it’s withdrawn and then even the trees lose all meaning, familiarity. Now it is almost dawn: this and that must get done in committee or alone. Don’t reach, go slow as the day will allow. But that’s not what I came to say. Perfect rest v. having a destiny.

A complete breakdown in self-discipline. It begins by saying nothing I do matters under the eye of eternity. Hamlet x 5 centuries. Add to that all the science—chemistry, physics—calculus and music I don’t know. I have sat next to, at weddings, brain surgeons and robot engineers. I hit the street choosing a church on Fifth Ave. or Trinity Cemetery, walking the heartless city.

In the subsequent late night movie, a wealthy altruistic doctor arranges for the murder of his neurotic concubine. His guilt provides us with an opportunity to consider the concepts of faith and forgiveness, that all will be well in the end after a period of meaningless suffering. In this way the seasons have been circulating for eons via convexity.

I don’t know what I’m doing but I’m doing it anyway. You trust in genetics, God, prosthetics or prayer, whatever gets you to the morning. That’s when the sun, a billion trillion nuclear detonations per second warms your bones.
You may remember an old lover who’s gone before or continues to exist on another plane, in another ecstasy.

Having installed a new toilet seat and made a few philanthropic donations
I can kick back tonight and watch movies, right?
Not. I’m ridding myself of another addiction like illegal drugs via caloric restrictions getting enough sleep for two people or more and reading none of the dry words in books from the library.

When there’s nothing to do, when I’m bored or dreary
I’ll sit still and watch from the window, I’ll wait for the weather to change, which it will.
Out of Emptiness

Out of emptiness comes this:
Purposes as incomprehensible and wonderful as these purposes
Either you had no purpose or the purpose is beyond the end

Because the timepiece not only serves a purpose, it is adapted to that purpose
Except it was a secret purpose
The world is a mental activity, a dream of souls, without foundation, purpose, weight or shape

People in collective idleness are even more repellent than when purpose motivates them
God, glass, my townspeople! For what purpose?
His purpose and mine is to catch photons and store them in our bones

Lately, as have you, I have thought about our war and its purpose
To have a season for every purpose, Ecclesiastes was right about that Names of plants, languages of mammals, purposes of insects, placement of rocks

They purpose nothing but to multiply and die urgently beating east to sunrise and the sea
Having died, as such, I find I do not mind quiet living with the purpose of a cell
Stately purposes, valor in battle, glorious annals of army and fleet, death for the right cause

My friend who is counselor to kings and presidents doesn’t lack purpose
To what purpose, April, do you return again?
Not to say there is no purpose necessarily, just I don’t immediately get it

The purpose of sitting is not to be satisfied or satiated
Use of violence by the local militia for a limited purpose, protect the young from the janjaweed, the crop from the weed
The knight, the penitent misses last assessment of life’s purpose, babbling for God to appear

I mean your entire purpose should be living, you must take living seriously Sleep with a purpose
Or lose all purpose beyond murder, child sex and food hoarding

Proof that there’s a purpose set before the secret working mind
Having purposefully expunged from it every trace of emotion
What is relevant for our present purpose is counting is associated with primitive forms of writing

That is the purpose of poetry
The purpose of school is to introduce us to the world’s innumerable wonders
Their corners sharp, their lines exact, as if their purpose was to show
the plane geometry of snow

That’s when everything becomes clear, purpose v. purposelessness matters less Lonely physics, national purpose
This then is the purpose of purposelessness (and of eating less)!

Desperate for new fetuses to teach purposeful workmanlike killing, we will live with the question What was our purpose?
If we are not at home in the world, contributing purpose, we lose our desire to stay here—and we die
The men who left the machine have started their own business, a new endeavor by which they will keep warm and purposeful

You go the way of an unknown soldier, unable to assess the purpose of the battle
Let Greece then know my purpose I retain, nor vex with new treaties my peace in vain
And shake the purpose of my soul no more
The Master Algorithm

—Pedro Domingos, The Master Algorithm

Some say the scientific method
Is the ultimate algorithm and others Prefer prayer.

For symbolists, all intelligence can be reduced to manipulating symbols, in the same way that a mathematician solves equations by replacing expressions by other expressions. Symbolists understand that you can’t learn from scratch: you need some initial knowledge to go with the data. They’ve figured out how to incorporate pre-existing knowledge into learning, and how to combine different pieces of knowledge on the fly in order to solve new problems. Their master algorithm is inverse deduction, which figures out what knowledge is missing in order to make a deduction go through, and then makes it as general as possible.

Tea
In its simplicity
Can sustain concentration

For connectionists, learning is what the brain does, and so what we need to do is reverse engineer it. The brain learns by adjusting the strengths of connections between neurons, and the crucial problem is figuring out which connections are to blame for which errors and changing them accordingly. The connectionists’ master algorithm is back propagation, which compares a system’s outputs with the desired one and then successively changes the connections in layer after layer of neurons so as to bring the output closer to what it should be.

Hungry and cold
A holy condition
A warrior’s position in the world

Evolutionaries believe that the mother of all learning is natural selection. If it made us, it can make anything, and all we need to do is simulate it on the computer. The key problem that evolutionaries solve is learning structure: not just adjusting parameters, like back propagation does, but creating the brain that these adjustments can then fine-tune. The evolutionaries’ master algorithm is genetic programming, which mates and evolves computer programs in the same way that nature mates and evolves organisms.

Arithmetic
A good shit’s the metric
Of a dying man

Bayesians are concerned above all with uncertainty. All learned knowledge is uncertain, and learning itself is a form of uncertain inference. The problem then becomes how to deal with noisy, incomplete, and even contradictory information without falling apart. The solution is probabilistic inference, and the master algorithm is Bayes’ theorem and its derivatives. Bayes’ theorem tell us how to incorporate new evidence into our beliefs, and probabilistic inference algorithms do that as efficiently as possible.

I can’t believe
I won’t live forever, therefore,
I invented an afterlife to supplement reincarnation

For analogizers, the key to learning is recognizing similarities between situations and thereby inferring other similarities. If two patients have similar symptoms, perhaps they have the same disease. The key problem is judging how similar two things are. The analogizers’ master algorithm is the support vector machine, which figures out which experiences to remember and how to combine them to make new predictions.

Prepare for a powerful anesthesia
Chemical processes irresistible
A good and perfect rest
In the Singularity

In the singularity
perfectly good poems are being written by laughing and crying machines washing machines and dryers about their daily tasks and ambivalences which will be indistinguishable from those of future farmers and philosophers.

In the singularity
evolution can be said to be the master sorter of data as in the factories of the suns
where protons are smashed together and unusual weather patterns make consciousness a candidate interesting for its complete dependence on the substrate of the brain and body.

In the singularity
everything anyone once did always remains current as if invented yesterday for an immediate purpose such as curing cancer although that may be unnecessary to achieving immortality
i.e. the happiness one feels the day before thanksgiving.
Netflix, Hulu

Neftlix, Hulu, autumn elaeagnus thorns, small hairy buds, twigs hyper-lenticelled fruits supposedly edible, leaves elongated, oblong xerophytic but found in wetland introduced species, some say invasive

Xbox is invasive
Hulu is the best source of foreign films and foreign films represent reality better than American although reality is not always what we're after silliness, silly sadness, and relentless laughter letting my web site go to seed

writing badly is the best revenge
eventually your doctors find something in you they can't cure causes some fear, offers some certainty you're required to tell your sons and brothers about it so they can make informed medical decisions going forward

let's posit the dead, like the dream-lover or -killer is you in disguise, a facsimile or factotum stand-in, an actor or actress remembering lines which are your memories, or if you're not in movies divinations of things to come, earthquakes and volcanoes life goes on without a hiccup

you saddle up with the three gentlemen to the River Friday where a new life begins without sleep as a soul, at least that's the story they tell in these scientific times we apply Ockham's razor, i.e. the afterlife will most likely be most like the life before life

when it gets too late to exercise ignore time, learn slowly to go slowly through life, rise eyearl, there is no time only change an empty belly's holy

and a pussy willow's so alive its buds want to burst in mid-February when the sun stays up in the sky more than January this is what I write about, not Tolstoi, nor war not one conversation or love scene between a man and woman or illustration of what man has done to man cars pass I never wave
so many guys are belly fat, women butt fat and they want to sit right behind you in the bleachers eating fried foods and wearing allergenic perfumes
I like the motionless perfection of autumn elaeagnus wind in white pines crows do not annoy but dogs do a porcupine or coyote is a lucky sight barred owl or pileated woodpecker and a black bear is quiet reality itself
I said to the doctors 54 or 84 you always seem to want more when they said I'm too young to die
I said dying chooses you you don't choose dying, so it's not my fault yesterday's walk, today's work there's no percentage in searching for significance, wanting meaning and no percentage in respecting death unless it's imminent
I admire the writer who writes 10,000 words per day no matter what who's got plot
a plague or fire, a spider or a tiger in a boat stolen Louisiana votes or endangered alligators in my case common pipewort or pickerelweed floating in a northern lake
egrets, loons and hawks
on your winter walk cedar waxwings foraging for soft rose hips and talking like people talk about this and that, work and child rearing, not religion or politics keeping it light and friendly eating chili and chocolate chip cookies passing time watching a football game, the superbowl or a movie usually a romantic comedy
Blue Grama Grass

How to break an addiction. Decide to live.
What can I learn from my pain. Danger.
And friends are merely friendly, live on independent of your injury. You will not be missed in church on Sunday.

Grass. Weed, broccoli, burrito, hay, stink, pot, skunk.
I'm talking blue grama, upland bent, smooth brome,
riverside panic, wild rye, fowl meadow, spike muhly,
sweet vernal, salt marsh, bristly foxtail, little bluestem.

Reefer is unhealthy, opens lesions in the brain, wormholes into hell, yet should be legal. I’ll vote that way.
It may ease the pathos into non-existence
well as meditation, bird watching, last will and testament.

Each joint hurts, rib joints, spine joints, skull plate joints.
The head and hip and heart will hurt, all three.
Insomniac I like the way bones crack and clack like wooden wind chimes, an untuned piano, a tree rack of wornout shoes.

Never forget, the mind is the body paying attention to what it’s doing. Without that connection, each finger bent or toe smashed is just added to the collection of anonymous body parts of holocaust victims in their mass graves. Better when every life saved or lost is a front page story, an illusion of shared sacrifice or joy, but that expresses only the surface of our emotions. I’m mostly relieved to have survived.

Homework

Moby Dick, geometry, physics.
Study every subject everyday.
Homework is an indicator of future success.
Success is not necessarily happiness but it helps.
Freedom is to formulate your own definition of success.
Happiness is an imaginary tree, its own reward, and a fact.
Facts and fiction may be memorialized in memos or found in dreams.
The story starts thus: Each summer the honeysuckles and the huckleberries . . .
The web is that extra brain we’ve all been dreaming of having.
Like jumping 4 meters or flying without a plane.
To fly like that must one first have homework?
Some say yes, some say don’t. It depends on how you vote.
Happiness is what happens when everything that happens Fits the time perfectly and it’s all out of your hands.
Not exactly. You don’t let go of the steering wheel while driving fast in the passing lane.
You look left and right and check your blind spots.
Homework is an introduction to everything you’re not
And all you do not know. It’s supposed to help you learn to know where you want to go before going where you have to go.
Otherwise you end up on Ulzana’s raid
Bleeding, without a bandaid.
All the achievement in the world won’t relieve your loneliness
Or satisfy your sexual longing. What girls are like behind their eyes.
Survival, procreation. That’s all there is to love.
But the loved one is the one who can be trusted with your life.
Whether Christ or your wife. The Muslim moms.
On my walk in the woods I come to a sitting spot
Above a small gorge cut by a stream through hemlocks.
Here someone has left a statuette of the Buddha and the flags you see Flapping in the wind at sky funerals.
This is a pretty good place to sit quietly and think about homework.
I can clean. I can drive.

Plenty of sleep, no more tv, the wars in the Middle East are resource wars, disguised as religious debates. So Dad would say.

A beautiful winter day, hunting season. A Gun In Every Home, in light of U.S. mass shootings seems an irresponsible poem. 10K clicks most popular poem on line, NRA enthusiasts and conservative talk show hosts quoting it. Not really, no worries, poetry makes nothing happen. Which is something, magic.

* * *

I wonder if I’ll have to someday defend that poem, as in a Russian or Chinese show trial, Salem witch trial, McCarthy anti-American committee or a college political correctness safety hearing. Oh well.

What does it mean? Doc Wiseman says that’s not how we decide things in this country, lynching and chasing people with dogs. You’d think twice about bombing Iran if Iran had the bomb. Assume a defensive posture.

I’ve been reading Walzer’s Just and Unjust Wars, much like explaining how to tie your shoes, or teaching an artificial intelligence to walk, talk and think about God.

* * *

The citizenry doesn’t need weaponry sufficient to win a war, just enough to give pause during its normal pursuit of pleasure (hunting deer on a beautiful, clear winter morning).

Hunting and gathering and agriculture, local and small or these almonds I’m eating from California’s Imperial Valley and all the water it took to grow ‘em.
Slowly
drip irrigation takes hold.

Technologies
such as the Anasazi and other aborigines used are uploaded for sustainable survival.

Much good goes with the bad, school shootings with school science shows, art shows and Shakespeare’s plays.
How to stop the unhappiness of ISIS

those lonesome souls from interfering with the evolution of the species? With love. What did Christ mean (and what did Wallace Stevens mean by imagination)?

* * *

Accept (but contain).
Trust (but verify). Ha ha! Reagan was a pretty funny guy.
It must bother a president, a regular fellow who’ll pack his suitcase and go back to Iowa when his term is up, to know he’s ordered the death of a janitor on the night shift at a nuclear reprocessing plant in a proportional response to a mullah’s anger. Jurors in the trial of Boston Marathon bomber Dzhokhar Tsarnaev have sentenced him to death. For his role in killing four people and wounding hundreds more. There was no visible reaction from Tsarnaev, 21, in the quiet courtroom.

Justice. In his own words “an eye for an eye.”
Survivor Jared Clowery said he was happy not to have had to make the choice between life and death himself but he stands behind the jury’s decision.

“There’s nothing happy about having to take someone’s life.”
Good people without guilt or gloating. Yet my thought was now we must forego the possibility of knowing this young man’s mind. There’s still time to ask him questions as in Dead Man Walking. To understand is to love requiring the patience of the scientific method.
Yesterday’s single greatest joy was solving the equation $T = 2\pi \left(\frac{r^3}{GMe}\right)^{\frac{1}{2}}$ for Haley’s comet orbiting the sun.

And sitting in the sun on a winter day.
Jack’s Time Out

What luxury to get mad about last night’s basketball loss and watch the full moon descending at the speed the earth turns.

Things could get worse
personally and for the community.
Bombings, killings, anomie boiling frogs and witches cursing.

The changing climate,
typhoons in the Philippines,
volcanoes and tsunamis, WWII which I missed,
Thanksgiving nor’easter, Easter twister.

What abundance to fast or feast,
your choice, stay inside by the stove or go outside, climb the mountainside.
Live in a city or small town.

So I raged at the coaches for their lazy zone defense like an alien in the bleachers unable to affect the outcome.

When my sons came home
I yelled at them too. What opulence to be angry about nothing of consequence neither stopped by the cops nor slipped on the ice.
Insignificance

Late in life I struggle against my insignificance
When I should enjoy the freedom from performance before an audience.
Applause is happiness but if they withhold applause, embarrassment.
When Da Liu put me to work crunching hexagrams and spreadsheet numerology
Instead of ghost writing his books about t’ai chi for longevity
I was humiliated but freed. No need to interpret
The Chinese master’s wisdom or endure his disapproval.
All this happened in an apartment on 110th St. when I lived on 111th.
I wonder if Da Liu lived to 100 like he predicted. Pop Pop Didn’t make it. So be it. Ken got me that job, old friend Ken
Who goes back all the way past high school to Thompson Junior High.
Tomorrow we’re eating pizza together in Troy.
We’ll remember Da Liu and also the painter and sculptor who had a room
In our apartment on 111th and a dog so intelligent it could walk off the leash
On the crowded streets of New York without an altercation, and Zach Sklar
Of course, journalist, communist and jazz aficionado
Who listened to Jo Jones and Paul Quinichette, Count Basie’s men, Often as possible at the West End.
Back then I was playing the streets for quarters, not much more Than that sculptor’s dog, the sculptor’s name I wanna say
Was Mike Johnson and he was a man of few words and many women.
We had a major cockroach problem in that apartment on 111th St.
The ceiling leaked in Ken’s room so he organized the neighbors
Against the landlord, helped form a tenants association.
We were young and blind as newborn mice, puppies or roaches
We went to our daily disciplines like children of paradise or Da Liu who was already old.

When we meet for pizza and talk it will be hard to hear now that I’m deaf
In one ear. Ken, whose name means knowledge, has trouble seeing faces.
To want to be famous is a silly goal for a man almost old as Da Liu.
Not the right motivation. Much better to look slowly, labor.
For the success and happiness of others.
I’m still avoiding the deeper question. Which is what? Cultivate
An acceptance of nature (including the biomass in the crosswalks)
And know the names of all the grasses. Much to learn about molecules, Still trying to make sense on the trumpet. What’s Ken doing lately?
He’s retired from teaching. Is he spending his time reading?
So today I ordered Da Liu’s books, maybe the ones I worked on,
Because they offer assistance to others for further living.
Service to others, that’s the key, or conversely,
I pleasure in and treasure my insignificance, the autumn I Realized my insignificance, it ought to be a great comfort
To be so insignificant, being knowledgeable is the best defense against Your insignificance, it does not put me in mind of the species’
insignificance,
Exiled or sidelined to an insignificant role, a valued Member of our community or so insignificant no one notices
Or cares, insignificant and mighty happenings
Seem the same from my vantage aging gratefully, inexorably,
A way to learn your insignificance, freedom to have never been.

Motel Room

Motel room, U.S. map made of license plates everything I need for a week is here, king-size bed, microwave, fridge, tv, hot plate
the carpet’s pretty clean, the bathroom baptized and there are two mirrors in which to imagine myself, to analyze and idolize.
WiFi, no Elizabethan inn,
in a century when we fear nuclear war
and are warned against the shock of fast change,
the door sports three locks though nothing dangerous could happen in a town like this, named for spring water found by thirsty desert travelers.
My home for a week living alone, contained safe from the elements, roar of airplanes.
Numerous Blue Notes

Sitting, trying to write, nothing comes to me. Nothing is what it’ll have to be. Over the weekend and immediately following the election demonstrations in the streets, Not my president! But today is Monday back to work and the business of business in America. Never have we been fierce warriors. Rhett Butler got that right: in any confrontation with the state a platoon of new recruits with automatic weapons outguns the stately samurai. Ken and I were eating veggie burgers and drinking local beers over worries our fellow Americans will soon start shooting Jews and Asians, lesbians and disabled veterans whoever’s recommended on the news. There’s a learning curve to disregarding tweets and the remedies offered on facebook. Our refusal to be more than the sum of ourselves is our saving grace. Therefore, let the peaceful transfer of power proceed. Democracy doesn’t guarantee smart choices, just a chance to correct the mistakes we’ll make.

Lonely Bagel

Lonely bagel
Loneliness bagel
The bagel of loneliness

Togetherness bagel
The bagel of being together
Bagel of belonging
City of Hope

--with lines by Dante Alighieri, Lawrence Ferlinghetti, Vaclav Havel, Pico Iyer & Sophocles

What a city I murmur to myself looking at its map.
We approached the city known as Dis with its vast army and its burdened citizens.
At last we reached the moats dug deep around the dismal city.
What destroys the poetry of a city?
Automobiles destroy it,
and they destroy more than the poetry.
Dante and Virgil chased by 7 or 8 dangerous devils
Grumpy, Happy, Sneezy, Sleepy, Dopey . . .
Our heroes reduced from metaphysical philosophers interested in god and what man has done to man to improvising primitive tools for survival.
Hope abandoned, we rate our chances of expiring in the nuclear fire – excellent – during the decline of western civilization.

On the other hand, I hope our current problems are only temporary and it’s just a matter of time before the public ignores the 24-hour news cycle.
Bad news sells but the good life’s all around us.
One feels love and devotion even for the 60 million who voted for our opponent.
Vaclav Havel said with a wisdom well beyond brilliance:
“Either we have hope within us or we don’t.
It is a dimension of the soul, and it’s not dependent on some particular observation of the world or estimate of the situation.
It is an orientation of the spirit, an orientation of the heart that transcends the world as it’s immediately experienced.
It is not the conviction that something will turn out well, but the certainty that something makes sense no matter how it turns out.”

It resembles grief. But it’s not quite grief. I’ll give you grief.
Certain days planned to be eventful I look forward to for weeks.
Let the peaceful transfer of power proceed. The sorrow and the pity. Never may the anarchic man find rest at my hearth. When the laws are kept, how proudly the city stands! When the laws are broken, what of the city then? We are moving through some allegory between a City of Hope, where history has been abolished, and a City of History, where hope can be slipped in only as contraband. Failing to achieve understanding, we’re searching outer space for an entity to unite us as humanity. That person, or city, is consciousness. Two ancient female poets are a revelation, the clarity of their complaints: lost lover, lost city. Our enemy eventually becomes our brother, his misery lifted by coming to her city.
Chainsaw Certified

I’m dead. Unlike Frost and Yeats nothing I’ve said will be remembered. Unlike Roosevelt and Lincoln nothing I’m thinking will win the war.

I’m going to go to my grave unsung like almost everyone. These mountains are my grave. A good grave to go to. There’s no such thing as being saved. When you’re gone you’re done. At least 60 million people don’t believe it, don’t believe in evolution. Man, that ape, can heap a peck of hurt posthaste with earth movers and machine guns. Information technology cannot save your soul, heck,

I’ve tried. Every morning I total the polloi coming to my site for wisdom. The number’s usually zero.

A good number to know. When my heart fibrillates I lay my head against my sleeping wife.

Solace, comfort. She says, Take your pill, fool. In an hour at most I’m feeling great again!
Is war coming? Are we headed for another crazy cataclysm? My sons, draft age. Only now can I appreciate the pain so sharp it drains the color from one’s eyes, your reason for living gone in a spasm of violence to be forgotten never by survivors. This fear could become real as no movie is surreal enough to distract attention from the certainty you did not do enough to deflect man’s trajectory.

All could be well in the end but history portends a periodic bloodletting followed by a quietus without mercy. What’s the best that can be said: he died beside his friends and buddies. Steady on to your own inquest and rest. A perfect rest that improves upon the inadequacy of your efforts. What solace can be found in the remains of marriage.

So you better fight back now even if that means war comes sooner. At least you’re fighting back, but how? Take a minute to meditate on purpose. Science cannot save you, neither can religion. Abstaining from violence with love, letting prisoners go, detaining no one at the border, inviting Chinese and Russian scientists to our shores, defusing your own anger before it detonates, none may be enough to save your sons. A war president needs war, whatever. A trained and deadly warfighter. You become what history wants you to become. You survive if you’re lucky, if not so what, your old parents will be alive only briefly to mourn. Then they too go to their good graves and the pain dies down. In the meantime a new generation builds a new space station.

Since the vortex will be sucking up the poor, let’s not let the rich escape untouched. All go down together, no one hoards gold or gets away with fiction. If we have to fight let’s make sure we fight as one, the sons of the rich side by side with the poor’s sons and their daughters. You want slaughter? Then let every city and back road know the new order.

I would rather watch Lalaland ten times over than have to write this poem. I can leave home and live in a tent or bunkhouse, eat dinner out of a tin cup and drink water from a wooden bowl, give up music and most of my memories to save my sons, to save the world and avoid this war. But that rarely happens. One is lost and found in what happens.

Rules for Old Men Waiting

—title from a novel by Peter Pouncey

Jack awoke in his usual pain, un-daunted by it. We’re all gonna die someday is his morning mantra these days. Isolate the variable, anything you do to one side of the equation you gotta do to the other. Practice zen, eat less, an empty belly’s holy. These are the rules for old men waiting.

On the other hand, attachment to self and to things to do. Clean the house, watch for war. Count syllables, teach English to immigrants from Slovakia or Syria. Advocate vocational education in the schools. Jack has much to do, a new administration, low social security. He goes slow as the day will allow.
On Suffering

I waited too long to biopsy my lung
yet lived long enough, anon, however long is long.
Whatever. It’s not wrong to count along while busy living. Sing and stay strong absorb the sun’s photons and store them in your bones.

Those bones
outlast slights and spurns are white as lightning and strong as sticks and stones.
Inside is one’s spirit, soul, the nameless one the one that’s never known.
It has no cell phone can’t communicate or even moan.
Therefore. Why complain?
Have some fun.

Soon
I’ll be undone underground
my garden burned down.
So what. John Donne died and so did Milton.
Emerson too, and Whitman.
Get over it. Vote. Love. When the train comes in the station whistle with it, wish on stars with passion or careful hesitation.
Anything’s fine, within reason.

Season by season
things get done.
Algebra and calculus, Malcolm X, George Washington.

No taxation
without representation.

A gun
in every den.

People will be governed one way or another, by a king or trusted friend. Corporation.

Men are more disposed to suffer, while Evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the Evils to which they are resigned.

I’m too young to die! I cry. My generation cannot outrun the sun
but I want to see what happens next, a tsunami or tornado, rain and wind beyond our comprehension hit in the head by speeding debris, irony of ironies! plastic contraptions, rotting computers and yogurt cups, pain in the baby! Moment’s notice. None,
I notice, live long enough to see the end. Amen. A million years hence human sense has so modified and mutated under other moons

we share one mind
and everything’s remembered by everyone.

Look it up. There is no death, just perfect rest. A perfect tan is possible, and work is fun.

I’m going there when I pass on because souls will travel at warp speeds, using nuclear fusion.

About suffering, religion was right (and wrong) all along.
TED Talk

Biology TED talk, Ken Burns WWII
Multiple choice plus open response =
Teacher cares, out there among the English Mathematics, fractions to imaginary $i$

 Anything can happen any time, I mean
Mass killing—public school, movie theater,
Post office when every mother wears a gun
Yet happiness permeates like $\text{CO}_2 + \text{sunlight}$

 Photosynthesis + electricity = burning bush
Hot tea, hot shower pleasure perfect rest
Early to bed, no more lies, complexity
Poetry about history, i.e. Wolfowitz

 As for non-fiction, most things qualify to know
Astrobiology, search for LUCA, FLO
Minerals on Titan, organisms on Enceladus
Divination on Iapetus, peace on Earth and Tethys

 Volcanoes and tsunamis, Big Red One and Private Ryan
Don’t stay up late, take your vitamins Sin and crime being nothing more than Mental malaise, imbalance. Love and compromise

 Tolerance, practice worksheets, brilliance
Prejudice and superstition, Tha’s a wrap Nothin doin, ain’t gonna happen, freedom’s when Yes is mostly a blessing and No is always an option.
Off the train I hit the streets and start laughing. This is ridiculous, incomprehensible. How can innumerable bipeds have individual inner lives. Why are they doing what they’re doing? I have no answer
New York City but to also go about my business in this case prepare for surgery, survival.

But why survive with so many exact replicas to replace me? A swarm of ants or hive of bees, social organisms they’re called, climbing over each other, avoiding bumping and amazingly making way, anticipating the sudden turns and straight paths of others, strangers but brothers, sisters incubating, the cells of a small organ, nodes of a single semi-conscious organism.

The concept of a higher power that cares for me is also risible yet how else can I explain the surgeon and his team, robots and magnetic resonance imaging machines,
all primed and trained to save my life.
They are not particularly interested in what I do with my time. I am immediately in love with the Irish brogue of the head nurse,

the Indian skin of the physician’s assistant.
The long extraordinarily thin fingers of the famous surgeon. All mine to savor (and the other cancer patients).
Back on the streets, rush to the train.
So many women to choose from! One in fishnet stockings stands out, tall calm, still, graceful. No cell, no hair, no hurry.

Yesterday’s suicidal thoughts: the mind is a clever servant, insufferable master. Therefore, meditate on this: absolute need, dependence on the Other.
I still like Hombre, The Shootist and Ulzana’s Raid but realize those dead heroes were subordinate to society: the gun manufacturers who armed them.
Thus, I go for cancer tests, accepting, not predicting results.
Hero accepting help.

A torrential rain following five days of flooding, tornadoes out west busting up wooden towns
all because too many of us are hoarding plastic, herding electrons.
None of us know how it will end, what the outcome will be (of our surgery). The best that can be said is Don’t forget to breathe. And you might as well believe in that higher power.

It’s A Bear!

Bear’s certain
it’s a bear
alone with salmon
it’s a bear
on the mountain
it’s a bear up a canyon
it’s a bear eating berries
it’s a bear sedated, carried
it’s a bear
answer, query
it’s a bear clown or faery
it’s a bear
Atman. Atman.

I have no clue what Krshna taught Arjuna but I like the name Atman a lot. Atman. Atman. Where a man is at. At all times. No matter what. Gita, get in the action, gorgeous girl, God is the answer, keep the meter.

Wisdom, none. What Krshna tells Arjuna makes no sense. I prefer mathematics. Knowledge of how things are made and done more than meditation on the Self as a manifestation of the One.

I’ll never have to leave this comfortable planet. We have this asset but can we sell it? In Paradise Lost, Satan executes his plan but God already knows all about it. Still, whether it succeeds or fails is up to Man. Same here, when it comes to nuclear armaments, a distraction from the work of making life permanent.

It is all premised on the mystery of invisible but sentient particles—little Krshnas and Kachinas nesting inside one another. Meanwhile life goes on outside all around you—WWII, the Napoleonic wars, the Civil War which we’re still fighting.

Krshna says behead your brothers without prejudice or justice. So it transpires in the nuclear fire. Whatever forever. Teacher, teacher—tiger!
Passion Is Its Own Predicament

—ending with a line by Wallace Stevens

5 a.m. Souls ascend from earth’s vale of fears. Others wait don’t give up yet.
Nothing I can do about that.

Not is my name known but am I a good man.
That goes for John, too a man of faith
who wants what God wants.

What about hate in the streets. What do white people want?
I see no need to pull down statues of General Lee instead put him side by side and head to head

with Martin Luther King, Nelson Mandela and Mahatma Gandhi.
Also kids who cops shot dead.

Meanwhile on the macro economic and political scale leviathans (peoples, nations) drift toward perpetual armageddon or peaceful solutions.

We don’t know which and John will be gone before it matters except to his children and, of course, ours.

What I have done
to change man’s trajectory, for better or worse, remains anonymous. Every action meets an equal and impassable mountain.

Passion is its own predicament. Cast a cold eye and guess. The clouds go, nevertheless, in their direction.
Soot

Soot on LA highway signs. Billboard of you, a real estate agent. All endeavor slides toward inertia, extinction, forgetfulness.

It’s very tropical. Vegetation invades the house unless constant inputs of joy apply. The scientist in you feels the great ape in you. The great ape feels death growing wide. What about work? I devote my present to my future existence.

In what way, in what sense does one continue to resist. As a dessicated cell, a mole of elements, an ancient’s aura, a daguerreotype-like shadow on a sidewalk, persistent headache, paleolithic herbivore, potential energy, will.

Some wake up and pray, say thanks for another day. Others curse their luck, stale breath, the very thought of the rosy dawn makes them ill.

Lonely as leaf fall. Nature knows no pity or self-pity according to antiquity, the roof soot of the city.

And the single-minded universe that’s only a paper moon without your love.
My Giant

Travelling is a fool’s paradise. . . . My Giant goes with me wherever I go. --Emerson

Summer rain, melting Arctics and the lipids lining the nerves in your brain. These are the metrics of our times. Mere resolve is not enough to take care

on the highway—you need wheels and prayer.
When you realize there’s no there there that’s a scary day. End there.

August, the extinction is terrifying.
Quiet, too quiet. 100% humidity, not a single insect flying.
Summer morning, summer evening, sighing
the sighs of purgatory—grief without pain, death without dying.

I’ve chosen the safety of these mountains and the beauty of their mists—such perfection which anyone can have for the asking.
All you need to know is the names of things.

Conflict, coercion, war, strife.
Flying high in April, shot down over Germany.
Have a good day. That’s life. Fix yr brakes.
When I hit a pothole my fillings sing.

Anything’s possible, it’s impossible to know what will happen until it’s happened.
You can’t know what you’re doing until it’s done and even then you stare in wonder unmoved yet moved by the stillness a pure goodness, bone stillness, potential energy. You can practice it in the city or the desert.

The wilderness or the mirror over your dresser.
Asexual

While I pretty much opined for this impeachment my fellow Americans voted for this guy and they could be right I’ve been wrong before, stuck as we are with a system that generates some perplexful leaders, democracy being the worst form of government—except for all the others. Anyone can be president, that’s been proven time and time again. Wars can start for no discernible reason other than radical purity, avarice, cupidity, gluttony, rapacity, even affluenza—meanwhile life goes on outside all around you perhaps you identify as Jewish, Latino, Muslim, Indian or Filipino asexual, cybersexual, somasexual, hypersexual, homosexual, pentasexual it doesn’t really matter, nothing butt matter matters, matter content of life (serious, love it) hate death for the hell of it to see what it’s like inside the heart of darkness.

Not that I accept their god, their void, I accepted humanity as a natural part of nature demisexual, downsexual, ecosexual, Eurosexual, eversexual, exsexual, extrasexual, femtosexual, Francosexual, geosexual, gigasexual, Grecosexual, Indosexual, intersexual, kilosexual, macrosexual, malsexual, megasexual, metasexual, microsexual, missexual, medisexual, mocksexual, monosexual, muchsexual, multisexual, mustsexual, nearsexual, neosexual, nonsexual, oftsexual, omnisexual, oversexual, pansexual, parasexual, partsexual, photosexual, polysexual, postsexual, presexual, pseudosexual, psychosexual, quasisexual, rentasexual, selfsexual, semisexual, Sinosexual, subsexual, supersexual, telesexual, terrasexual, ubesexual, uralsexual, ultrasexual, undersexual, vicesexual, weresexual, wikisexual, zoosexual. When I did that I had to pay the rent and get a job, too.
Valetudinarian

One will not live to see the end of the geopolitical drama,
the existential dilemma—

the small choices people make that change their lives.
They ought to be terrified but they’re blithe because you can’t know what you’re doing until it’s done.

Acting silly, solving problems.
Scientific method, situation comedy.
Dinosaurs. Sore losers.

Kayak on the Hackensack.
Malebolge. Hoboken.
It was dark in there! It was dark!

You can’t say to people I think I’m dying because we all have that feeling,
it’s so ubiquitous it’s not worth mentioning.

For your given name take Destiny.
But survive.

Saturday’s the sweetest day. You’re off the clock.
Participation’s optional

weedsowing, videogameplaying, twitting, anonymouslawnmowing,
whatif whatnot oldtimer.

Pass the fucking ball!
I say to Ray who never passes.
The past isn’t dead, it never even passes.

Short sleeves today?
Prepare for a powerful anesthesia.
The afterlife is now.
Contingency

“Events will still pile up, with or without an identity willing to organize them.”

The moon gazes through April’s silver maple.

To work, to drive, to drive to work.

Earth’s half-in, half-out of the sun’s habitable zone.

The rushing stream topples old trees; the peaceful father, mother.

Powerful with eternity, blinding with intensity.

Zazen position, necking in the front seat.

Lazy, happy, mirror, desert.

Moderation, persuasion, elections. Way stations, stopgaps, safe havens.

Cheap jewelry can be sexy; stop fixing things with duct tape!

Humor is the only remedy not to hate those in authority.

And ritual is remedy, a death song.

Nothing but matter matters, chipmunk, groundhog, skunk.

Do not provoke an angry baboon.
Why care about the future,
the dead don’t live to see it.

I’ve come to see if this is true.

Stop & Shop Strike

The Stop & Shop strike v. Game of Thrones.
In Game what’s not made plain is the condition of the people compared with warriors and queens.
There’s no mention of land-clearance, tree-felling, pruning, chopping, digging, hoeing,
weeding, branding, gelding, slaughtering,
salting, tanning, brewing, boiling,
smelting, forging, milling, thatching,
fencing and hurdle-making, hedging, road-mending and haulage.

As for the strike, most of us supported the cashiers and clerks—cutting benefits and pensions
when CEOs make millions.
A few pennies more for ice cream and tofu
a leg up for our neighbors and comrades in labor.
But don’t get greedy, power-hungry—
we don’t want the supermarket to go out of business or the Army of the Dead to extinguish us.

A red-tailed hawk observes what small mammals, birds are in the clearcut,
awaits the moment to strike.
Three balls, two strikes, full count. Aaron pitched carefully, slow strikes and the opposing team scored.
Transit strike. Part-time tutor, food deliverer, illegal immigrant,
school bus driver, supermarket bagger.
Let labor flow like capital! Full tank of gas!
In your dreams, you kick ass.
In your daydream, you’re breaking bones, killing mean dogs with bare hands.
In my childhood dreams, I fought side by side with my best buddies against the Army of the Dead.
I wake up to a lightning strike and my dream incinerates.

The strike is over, like a thunderstorm.
Still a half dozen or so episodes of Thrones before it sinks into the past.
Will women save the world?
Anything’s possible.

Nothing changes in Williamstown, Willie, except the seasons.
The wee hours, the bored minutes, the second guesses,
the town sewer department, the collector of taxes.
Pitcher’s elbow, runner’s knee, reader’s eye,
you live until you die.
That’s no answer.

Without the Mexican and Canadian borders
the White Walkers would dissolve like an aspirin in seltzer water.

The sun is up, the strike is over next episode of Game is Sunday
the White Walkers attack some of our favorite characters croak but humanity survives
though the weather is ominous.

The habitable zone around the sun is moving outward as the orb expands getting hotter as it grows older.
Earth a billion years ago was smack in the middle of the turf
but we’re now half-in, half-out exposed to the sun’s ardor, agony.

The sun a dragon eating its babies, torching cities
we’re gonna hafta outsmart it hold Labor Day barbecues on Mars.
Got Sleep?

Nothing more intimate than sleep wake before dawn, go downtown prepare for tomorrow, come home from work late.

Most cities prosper undisturbed sleeping peacefully
while the tide goes out.

Are we asleep or are we dancing,
surrounded by buildings,
a primitive fertility dance in the forest?

Sleeping in my clothes,
sleeping in my underwear,
two dead leaves, then a breeze!

Fall asleep by the river,
in front of tv,
soon I will know who I am.

In the last days you may be found sleeping in the laundry mornings, or sitting in the holy spot gazing at a crescent moon.

Get up early but gotta nap,
winter afternoon or summer heat Thanatopsis, Big Comfy Couch.

Sleep in the bed next to your wife that way when life ends someone misses you.

That sounds harsh but we’re matter of fact about the fact of death.
Death is most of all like sleep.

Doctor, engineer, lawyer, soldier, writer, poet, that’s the pecking order,
get some sleep, get over it.
Not the kind of gal who’ll have sex twice on the first date. When that happens marriage, babies, graduations, tragedies, sleep.

Headache, surgery, through it all there’s sleep, a haven, heaven, hovel, cave, raven, a place to be with eyes wide open.

Don’t have a hissy fit or case of colon cancer, get 8 hours shuteye in contiguous array.

If not, listen to a TED talk, they like explaining things Selected Shorts solves insomnia, The Moth Hour, the peaceful father, mother.

Sweet pleasing Sleep! in Hades where the lights are always blue, gentian actually.

Every third thought doesn’t have to be about death. Sleep together, get laid. Sleep. How memories are made. Sleep. In the palm at the end of the mind or on another plane.

Who’s Got Trouble?

I’ve never put a candidate’s bumper sticker on my car before—why not take sides—what are you waiting for? Death puts a stop to daily low intensity warfare but in the meantime—fight on! What are we fighting for? Let’s see—clean air and water and room to walk around in cities and deserts America the seeing eye dog not America the junkyard dog—collective deliberation among nations, clear passage through seas and borders compact and contiguous Congressional districts that represent actual communities.
education and health care for everyone who wants it—worldwide good food too, affordable shelter and a living wage a say in governance—local and global—free from fear of violence

Should you be subsumed by a cause bigger than the self?
unlike Rick in Casablanca who keeps to himself I’m advertising my loyalties with bumper stickers on rickshaw and kayak every time I come and go it’s a free country—or maybe I’m so low profile no one notices or cares to take revenge
so small time I have time and no enemies or friends
What about Whitman and his love for Lincoln he found a way to participate in the war that satisfied his muse, as a nurse
oh, I want to add space exploration and no nuclear weapons plus basic science and ancient arts, black lives matter

Here are some things you have to put up with or out of mind while enjoying the beautiful black and white photography and rousing Marseillaise:
that Sam, played by Dooley Wilson in worshipful subservience to “Mr. Rick,” endures his lonely abnegation and abstinence in Paris while Rick savors the nordically white, luscious Ilsa; that Ilsa, on the lam across the wide world from pursuing Nazis, is apparently transporting an extensive, elegant, perfectly manicured wardrobe;
that Rick, in wartime Casablanca, has managed to hire a full 20-piece jazz orchestra for which we willingly suspend disbelief since it’s essential for singing the Marseillaise which never fails to bring tears of pride to Yvonne’s eyes;
I guess that’s about it except why would you spend a minute in Sydney Greenstreet’s fly-infested café when Rick’s air-conditioned establishment is right across the street, an overnice contrast to Maghreb culture;
otherwise, I’m in complete accord with IMDb’s 8.5 rating.

On the news last night the president changed the trajectory of a category 4 hurricane. He can’t do that! Not my president! They’re laughing at us!
Who’s got trouble? We’ve got trouble. How much trouble? Too much trouble.
After Casablanca, it’s headed for South Carolina.
2 Jobs, 2 Kids, 2 Houses, 2 Hobbies

Carrying a sleeping baby.
Cleaning after a successful party.

Camping beyond mountains more mountains.
Playing trumpet on the streets of New York City.

Eating although the food supply is deeply compromised.
Flying with Democrats and Republicans, evangelicals and atheists.

Flying like a fruit fly that won’t quit mating.
Cool as a hummingbird in a stream’s wet spray.

Abstaining wholly, absent from worldly life.
Two dogs fighting but not biting hard.

Chanting as if the planet were mending.
Gourmet dining, devout prayer, loving Mary.

Evenings watching tv. Scotch and Star Trek.
Taking off Emily Dickinson’s clothes.

Meeting in the meeting house, arguing and praying.
Planning a legacy as if you knew enough to control events.

Pursuing happiness as a naturalist or humanist.
Spinning with the planet, performing the history that surrounds us.

Killing many Germans, saving many Jews.
Doing less until one thing’s done well.

Fainting from staring at candles through stained glass windows.
Morning, a billion trillion nuclear detonations per second warming your bones.

Manipulating symbols, solving equations.
Disregarding tweets and facebook persuasions.

Sitting with a tiny Buddha near a rushing stream cutting a gorge.
Running, disciplining myself, making myself healthy.
Ingesting drugs, throwing die, drinking sludge.
Growing varicolored corn.

Participating in the cause because it’s impossible not to participate in the effect.
Running over a chipmunk, groundhog or a skunk.

Lying face down in the emergency room facing doom.
Waking up Monday thinking Sweet Saturday! but soon remembering your trick knee.

Turning the towering young thunder of my anger against my sons.
Regretting the callow dispassion with which I met my parents’ quietus.

Lawn mowing, leaf blowing, yapping dogs, napping old people.
No jets but a rooster mornings, cows and goats.

Al is painting an apartment. Sirma is cleaning the floors. Felix is taking out the garbage.
Deciding tentatively I slightly prefer Heifetz’ to Oistrakh’s Sibelius.

No cedar waxwings, no chickadees, but beautiful moon!
If you’re alone as you get, why are you crying?
Start Knowing Joy

Start now knowing joy,
that’s an order,
overcome a deepening solitude.

Like a bee at a bugle or me at the deli
on Third Avenue.

I said to Joe when do you think this weather will break?
He jokes, April.
That’s no joke. Weak creatures die and the strong barely survive.

Half a year goes by another cancer checkup.
Cheer up. Any weather’s better than no weather at all.

There’s always governance
even when there is no government.

My candidate drops out after Iowa. Why do I always lose at politics and poker?

Peace at last!
No lawnmowers, no leafblowers.
Big comfy couch.

Meditate on this: Do what has to be done.
Find your lover gazing at the moon and take your garbage to the dump.

Your web site evaporates
and your possessions are thrown in the dumpster except your trumpet which finds its way to a future trumpeter.
Covid Cashier

Quiet, dawn, Covid.
Biggest accomplishment yesterday: buying toilet paper.
Thanking the young cashier for doing her job.
Feeling a little sick, wearing my mask and gloves,
Spring oblivious to the virus, an idiot like Millay said.
At least we’re not beheading each other—yet.

Symptoms mild so far. Today rest,
no long walk, no knee bends.
I think I’ve watched every possible movie and tv show and nothing’s left that doesn’t bore me.
I could learn the calculus, chemistry or physics
but will I and what for?

Most poetry is chopped up prose. That’s harsh but true. But that’s because most days are prose or yesterday’s news. Win or lose sumthins gonna getcha. Drug cartel assassin, the blues.
If not now, when? Some other Wednesday. Why wait?
I wish I had some wisdom to translate.

It’s living and helping others to live that counts, I guess. Cast a cold eye and guess, wake the extra mile, report from the besieged city, be wise or a jerk.
I hope to get the antibodies the easy way,
mild symptoms, no brush with death, don’t intubate.
An existential bessemer process, strange quark, chances are I won’t be able to organize this day into an expressible state.

A daily exchange with nature’s enough to alleviate my fear.
When I thanked the cashier her smile was like the sun coming out from behind clouds or the end of the pandemic, as if I had not wasted my life.
On the Avenue

From marble and granite to steel and glass, we were discussing Rhina Espaillat’s On the Avenue in class, was it 1950s or 1980s NYC and were the fifties the city’s halcyon days or is it now, the 2020s, the boroughs teeming with immigrants from the round earth’s imagined corners, Hasidim and Muslim, Haitian and Russian, as we Italians and Irish in an earlier era were. Everything will be ok or not, the recombinations which make prediction and intuition fortunately hopeless and each individual an experiment gone well or wrong. On the avenue God speaks by spewing toy and clothing stores, breakdancers and ice skaters, the Brooklyn Navy Yard seen from the Brooklyn Bridge, the skyline admired when my car broke down on the Triborough Bridge. The numbers of us overwhelm, there exist powers overwhelming for the human body and mind. I don’t mind but I can’t make sense of it. Gandhi said What you do may not seem important but it is very important that you do it. By that what is meant? Linda said Why does God always have to be a man? I said He could be a she but She’s probably really a Tyrannosaurus rex. I like to be in America!
I’ve written enough small poetry to start a nuclear war.
Do you want to die in traffic behind the wheel of your car? Or in yr rodeer camp next fall.

Control eludes us. The hero loses urinary control, the unified nation loses missile control, lost my timepiece, lost my metronome, now my music is ethereal as an archangel’s.

No owl hoots or duck quacks or squirrels screwing or spiders spanning rampikes.
The floccinaucinilipilification of nature.

No greater tragedy than a tipping point that tests the hero’s gullibility, complicity, self-control, comity, sense of humor which is the only remedy not to hate those in authority.

Them guys with guns at the Michigan state house,
fat bearded tattooed pissed off white bros.
Norsemen, Crusaders, Vikings, Britons.
For despair there is no forgiveness. Peace out.

Humor is the only remedy, or is ardor the best way forward.
We’ll see how things work out in the next generation.
The same diverse, spoiled, unpatriotic revolutionaries as at the nation’s beginning trying to reverse the future, making phone calls to get out the vote in Georgia, hating the desert for having no water.

Nuclear mischief, mad Man’s most incandescent bloom and the devil who exists to carry the load
when we misbehave and fight among ourselves.
I wake up to my skin boiling off my bones.

Events keep piling up,
the future depends on ourselves.
Conflict is inevitable and in this conflict power must be challenged by power so err on the side of patience, perseverance and impermanence.

Long Story Short

A walk around the block in my parents’ neighborhood at dawn wearing mom’s sweater and pop’s sneakers with a clown hole cut out for toe infection
I was stopped by a cop in a cruiser this was during the Vietnam War long hair ago he was angry at everyone I was offended by everything he said which way are you going I said which way are you going so he socked me in the mouth and handcuffed me
I was arraigned on disorderly conduct and resisting arrest
my good parents came down and stood beside me before the judge
I wrote to the police department internal affairs not for retribution but to start a paper trail in case this cop someday bopped one of my brothers
a few months later I’m back at work in NYC two detectives come into the city to question me one good cop one bad cop we park in the park me in the back seat they wanna know was I mouthy to the cop who punched me in the mouth
long story short
they leave me on a bench to eat my lunch and the charges are dropped
Middle School Math Teacher

Should I become a middle school math or English teacher?
Leave my bed early in the morning and return with test papers to grade.
With what authority will I persuade those kids to sit still and perform calculations and interpretations.
I won’t be allowed to teach A Good Man Is Hard To Find. Nope, it’ll be Catcher in the Rye, Lord of the Flies and Slaughterhouse Five. Novels that annoy.
Poems and math are magic. Words and numbers are things no one has ever seen or heard or touched.
But the administration keeps them separate. The curriculum’s determinate.
The kids are beautiful but combustible. When middle school lets out at the periapsis of Earth’s orbit, that’s the face of joy.

The purpose of school is to introduce us to the world’s innumerable wonders. The periodic table, World Wars I and II, Huckleberry Finn and Jim.
Once a gaggle of teenage girls bet whether I wore boxers or jockeys. I felt ambushed and unlucky. Also a bit afraid.
There’s little love lost between the students and the teachers. Expect to forget and be forgotten. Information.
I remember Mr. Killian my chemistry teacher. So boring about something I now find so interesting and important. He wasn’t boring; I was boring.
I remember Mr. Christensen my history teacher. He was fat and funny but taught as little as possible. I was known to laugh so hard I cried.
I remember Mr. T my calculus teacher. He dressed everyday exactly like Gene Kranz in mission control. I was confused past help so he didn’t help.
I remember Tone Kwas my music teacher. He said I was the worst trumpet player he’d ever tried to teach and switched me to sousaphone. He was right but so what! Playing badly is the best riposte.
Commonly Seen Bumper Stickers

You can acknowledge the emptiness at the core of your being or go crazy when the world goes crazy.
The numbers of us overwhelm,
an impending tsunami,
my hopeful eulogy about our responsibilities to each other,
2 jobs 2 hobbies,
the biomass in the crosswalks,
fears that rend and own us,
the Muslim-Judeo-Christian condition.
Your soul is immortal,
it exists outside of politics and poker. Just kidding.
Forgotten, forgiven and foregone.
A man’s ego needs no encouragement.
“I’m gonna be huge when I’m dead,” John said last time we spoke.

Life is fine!
tough
the reward for our colossal imperfections a back and forth game
the rivers and selfies of an empire
daily low intensity warfare
Good a gift not a curse
new, so let go
a veil, thin if one doesn’t believe in mystery like all things that are forever changing but always remain the same thriving enjoying the passage of time, so go slow as the day will allow or will be good but a dream
okey doke, short, a lazy-eyed tiger
Million Dollar Movie

Late April and only
coltsfoot—Tussilago farfara—breaking leaf litter.
Our daffodils, peonies and crocuses are also making signs.

April is the cruelest month, I forget why.
A sweet slow Spring
no sudden changes
each leg and leaf unfolds deliberately. You can't miss it.

New York City's spring rushes like a yellow cab into summer. One day leaves are wet, next they’re leather. I prefer this slow dance, birds mating on the sky, peepers evolving into frogs.

Repairs take weeks or months. Septic, garage door, cracked windshield, clean windows,
built bridge, buy land, rake leaves off erosion control,
cut wood, prune lilac, paint lawn chairs.

More carefully inspect, identify, the insect of the week, a fly with an ant’s body that skirts the grass and falls in drinks.
Look more closely! It will be gone in a few days!

Then it will be the time of moths or fireflies, mosquitoes and wasps. Mud road, red-winged blackbird. The slashing stream topples old trees. My legs hurt.
Life Out of Balance

Tonight I stayed at work until 7:00. It was dark when I locked the front doors. Winter approaches again, soon the great coat huddled like a rug around me. The streets were active as usual, block residents hanging out front steps. I said goodnight to Nydian Figueroa, after school counselor. I bought a beer at the deli on Third Ave. from the Arab owner. He’s a bit upset about the bottle bill.

Collecting bottles from small groceries could be a useful youth employment enterprise. I walked down Fifth along the park in the dark drinking my beer and looking at women. I need a good fuck badly. I tried to decide whether to go to the movies, a Hopi film Howard recommended, or just go home, watch tv and light a candle. Maybe I’d meet someone at the film.

Can I handle the malady of going home tonight? If I die, I die alone.

I turned west toward the subway past the museum, through the park. I can’t look at the myriad lights in buildings large enough to hold a small town. It increases my anxiety and anonymity to the breaking point. I hoped to be mugged, for the human contact. Two big guys looked me over, but I lowered my center of gravity and they passed quietly. Survival feels fine, proves I am alive.

The white pines in this corner of the park hold a cool, earthy air reminding me of coming winter, that mortality is restful, of the black bear and swollen river I saw 500 miles away and only one day ago.
Building Fence

Sometimes we like to do something for the story we’ll tell afterwards. Buy a ’58 Pontiac, climb a mountain in the dark. Lamar tells dirty jokes with class, knows how to wait awhile, bend a syllable and savor the laughter. We go on with our absurd work, building a fence miles long waste of steel and strong straight lodgepole pine but even I don’t opine against it anymore. We’re self-acknowledged children, fence is play and livelihood also, but something cheerful as sunshine for all the death it costs. There is so much life a little death doesn’t matter. We stretch our muscles the men feel like men, the women feel good too. We stand around, watch a young rabbit one morning.

Come What May

Come May. Come what may. The most significant thing today first Monday in May my wife six months pregnant with twins says she’s scared what we’re getting ourselves into. Like the time I moved into an apartment uptown I mean way uptown, Bronx uptown, uptown where I’d never been bomba echoing in the airshaft painted the walls banana yellow and moved out the next day. Lost the deposit. A few months later moved back to the same neighborhood, stayed a decade. I’m not—scared, that is—but they’re not kicking my insides out, either.
At a Party

I spoke with two people at the party Saturday. A young police officer, short-haired, fit, chiseled face who had two young children. He felt constrained by the law, without discretion to question mopes (perps) aggressively or to let go those who were obviously no threat. Even at a family function he seemed straight-backed, correct, devoted to his role as our protector (and his children’s) yet I thought perhaps too deeply in debt, indentured to the rules and laws of legislators and destined to be disappointed (or worse). I thought his courage and devotion (to whom or what?) would surely be poorly repaid and that this lesson was necessary to ready him with wisdom for death or further living. I worried like a brother about the unpredictable dangers, even terrors, he must daily face, and the pleasure he takes in facing them. How will he return to the fragility of family, of the soul alone, after wielding the force of the state, the blind, combined will of us all?

Next a business exec, retired from a well known global investment firm. At first we talked about the lush beauty of the northeast compared to the arid west (although he loves every inch of the west, too). Then somehow we fared beyond light conversation when he complained about the perceived decline in values for instance how the Ten Commandments can’t be publicly displayed. He said we can all agree on God but I said I have a mechanistic view of the universe (although the unknowable always sits just out of reach of the known). I told him my dad’s theory of reincarnation, a good man and a corporate seeker of God also, whose shoes I could never fill unless I swore belief in a supreme being. No hard feelings. Then he told me the story of his dying friend, an atheist, not even a deist like the founding fathers, who opened his eyes for the last time to correct the exec’s misperception that now he’d meet his maker. Having exceeded the bounds of acceptable conversation I went looking for my children. Nothing more to question.
A Good Day to Die

I’ve seen it myself sometimes.
Shooting pool with a Marine I liked, a buddy.
He’s drunk. Always had a booze problem and women had disappointed him,
no more than any other man.
Anyway, the only gal in the unit, honest, hard working, blonde comes into the room. We all wanted her
I’d shown her my poems, which she’d taken a pass on.

Joe starts teasing her about her tiny tits, touching them with his cue.
She’s scared. So am I.
Joe’s stronger, faster than me, by a lot, and when he’s drunk
he knows no friend.
How long can I stay silent, I calculate.
What does he have to do before I speak. Speech, none.
If I don’t put him down with the first crack of my cue, I’m done.

Lucky for me she gets away unharmed, goes back to her room.
I think Joe assumed me and the other guys, by our nervous smiles,
would enjoy a rape tonight.
Men are such chickens,
I can’t speak for women.
You basically hold your breath your whole life.
Live in a zoo
shit and screw.
And if it comes to that, you’ll kill on orders, from who?
Another swinging dick who fears his death.
You’ve got to make every day a good day to die.
New Haven Terminal

Across the track, a rail yard worker big innocent bear of a guy, beer belly, embraces his girl. She’s a conductor, comes up to that belly, reaches arms not quite around his back. They separate and embrace three times while the train prepares for departure.

Across the aisle,
a mother and son. Lights out, change engines, they play Mercy. Squeeze fingers until one cries mercy. The son still too small to seriously challenge his young, athletic mother. Ask and answer questions, laugh and cry mercy, she draws and he colors the features.

Unless a society expects its fate to be better than its past,
it will strive to make its present immutable as possible.
Optimism is a way of exploring failure.
It says there is no law of nature or supernatural decree preventing progress.
Nearly all failures, and all successes, are in our future.
I’m busy as a bus.
Ten hours on the telephone, research resources, school staff, counsel clients.
Some sleep.
Then invite Lorraine downtown, the lovely loyal secretary, to hear jammin jazz crew. By taxi tonight, sans subway.
I’ve never been to this joint before but admire the women in their dresses and makeup.
In New York, they smell wild. Elsewhere women are ranchers and gardeners.
We find a small table in the crowd,
order drinks. The band is four young black men.
Lorraine is black too, by the by.
We get up to dance and I leave my cowboy boots under the table. I’ve always enjoyed the way Lorraine puts her arms around me.
I’m the oldest cat in the club which is frightening since just fifteen years ago I was the youngest.
I wink at the trumpet player with my fairly abandoned mien who comes over to our table between sets.
He likes Lorraine. They jukebox it.
She falls in love.
That Was Random

There are actual people half woman half man running mornings and dream people in movies half language half light.
Tomorrow is John’s funeral.

               *       *       *

This is my minute
my moment
Oops, gone!

Anything can happen
if you don’t resist Resist!

               *       *       *

But who am I? You think bullets won’t kill? I’m the guy they put before a wall and shoot then eat lunch.

               *       *       *

Long as yr livin yr havin that dream in which yr killin the villains
w/o even needin a weapon.

               *       *       *

If it was fun, they wouldn't call it work, but it is fun. It's what we do, a bird sings, dogs bark. We work. Sing bark work.
Honey, put on your shorts, it's gonna be 90 today.

               *       *       *
How right is the rabbi!
"What a good and bright world this is if we do not lose our hearts to it, But what a dark world if we do!"

* * *

We saw a barred owl
camouflaged in winter branches.
Bird of death (in myth), hunts down the dark,
floats to a farther tree, turns its back, and naps.

* * *

The sadness of summer, the silence of winter
you can’t sum it up in one more metaphor.
So don’t complain about the epoch you live in.
Go to Big Hidden Lake and jump in!

* * *

Down to negative calories, in deep snow
we find soft wintering rose hips, gobble them down.
First time for me a wild edible made a difference, not just a delicacy. Then we snowshoe out.

* * *

Spring morning flycatchers, jays, thrushes, a woodpecker’s loony cry.
A toilet flushes.

* * *

Zach
awoke from a scary dream
I kissed him back to bed

He asked
are all the doors locked?
I said yes knowing they would not hold

* * *
The republic may expire
but birds go on traveling, singing in their best attire.

* * *

My plump cashier
has a new love.
Her skin is clear and her line moves.

* * *

Desafinado means slightly out of tune which is not a problem.
It’s a fortunate condition. Zach just called from school sounding clear and happy to say there’s floor hockey this afternoon. For me, another cold, slow Spring. How lucky!

* * *

At basketball I was reminded the better players in their private moments think on the ultimate reward. Perfect rest.

* * *

You come in our backyard, we go in yours.
That about sums it up. Assuming there are definable, accepted backyards.
Suppose it’s all one backyard and time is all one sheet of ice?

* * *

My son Zach said as a toddler he liked the old house and he’s having a good time now at the new house.
We were lying together in the window seat passing the early morning time, late September and happy as I was I thought what’s running out is time.

* * *
The young women’s bodies were awesome. I appreciated the couple of Muslim women who kept their bodies covered. That was easier on an old man’s eyes.

Not that I wanted to change the American girls’ ways. They seemed comfortable wearing underwear outdoors and unaware, more or less, of the longing it provoked.

* * *

To invade a clean house searching for weapons or insurgents, I agree with the enemy, that is a sacrilege. Not that I accept their god, and there could be, hiding, a mouse.

* * *

I tell my sons
If some man tries to pull you into his car, fight kick bite yell run punch curse scratch knife make him kill you right there in the street use your feet your fear your hate.

* * *

If everything seems under control, you’re not going fast enough. —Mario Andretti

* * *

The river in its muddy symmetry high water mark in Spring is a god to me in a way that I can be to a dog while thinking or the sky is to the hanging apple.

* * *

A day, a new day, starts at 5:00. Earlier than that it’s still yesterday, the rags and dreams, the sweat and worry, the sex and laughter of that day. The alcohol and aspirin, the sunset and machinery, the dinner and toothache of that day. The germs and friends, the sports and editorial, the gleam and dullness of that day.

* * *

The key to success is cross out, delete, compress, rub out, expunge, black out scratch out blot out, censor, crop, shorten and silence. Clip, cut, erase and eradicate. Hate everything you write.

* * *

I will be saved and spanked too.

* * *

Phil is on a movie diet. Bad movies in which the logic switch is turned off. Jumps from scene to scene like a cat. Most pornography is hilariously obscene. Genitals like little animals. Snowplows hit potholes sending up sparks.

* * *

Make way for a future that’s irresistible! Dust. Rest. Mist. Rust. One day follows another until the last day. And on that day, there will be weather.

* * *

Driving in traffic 80 mph, 80 y/o. Turkey vultures shrug shoulders.

* * *
When an archangel flies into your windshield sing cuckoo!

Tweets

I, too, dislike poems.
I’ve tried runes (and rampikes)
but that’s affected
rather than merely effete.
So I call them
figments.
When people query
What do you write?
at a barbecue or birthday party
I say soliloquies, fractals,

fragments.
Self-similarities,
singularities,
sculptures (scriptures), geometric shapes and series,
three dimensional triangles, spheres and differential equations, fractured fairy tales,
Rocky and Bullwinkle, rectal impactions.

On the other hand,
bits, bots, bytes
remnants, scrap, earth
gobs of phlegm in grains of sand, shards of glass in a slice of hell, hunks and clumps, curds and whey, sleet and pain, slap in the face sub-atomic particles, cell organelles, chunks of energy, cookie crumbs,
rusty trucks stuck in mud, dustings for ghosts,
just plain dumb luck, rocks, concrete, but not tweets.
Ohthere

“There’s nothing you wish for that won’t be yours if you stay alive.” --Beowulf

Winter has arrived and the wind cuts through the parking lot under the el in the Bronx, streets stretch out in their directions, events in their mere chronology have no relation. Old friends face certain dissolution with perplexity, comity and humor, look with gay eyes on their future in a forest or a city, someplace. Snow outside, despair inside. Homelessness. Raccoon tracks cross the soul. Prostatectomy. Winter mix. Don’t relax. The difficult dangerous season when weak creatures die and the strong barely survive. Leave me alone with autumn, an autumn like last autumn. Don’t stand around my bed, I won’t be in it.

Jack’s in jail. His panic attacks are like an AI on automatic pilot who wants to live, just like the rest of us under the eye of eternity or running in new snow, loving that feeling. Some people go dancing in fishnet stockings. Effortless mastery, success without practice. Fractals without chemistry. Do the small things first, clean the house and bless the guests. Sick of Krishna, sick of salad, sick of self. Sick of meditation. As I lay dying the full moon’s rising. My existence is indivisible from the wry Creator’s. I like the old Rhymer, his smile resplendent. It’s Death, not the Jewish king, in your rose garden.

I ply my arts all day alone. All I have is all I do not know. The past isn’t dead it never even happened. Learn the changes then forget them. Keep on learning and re-learning them. Down the steep and icy trail through hail and storm. Take into eternity my hail and farewell. We’re living in the Anthropocene. Indestructible garbage.
Bulldozed landscape. Big Brother, dead father.
Penis of the tiger. Getting thought to twitch the prosthetic. Mischievous, malevolent, militant thistles. Or just plain polite Americans, afraid to get shot.
Bump bump bump down the igneous rocks of life,
take the boulders two at a time down.

Old-timers bagging groceries, low social security for the security guard.
Situps, pushups, fix yr brakes, fix yr leaks.
I know what’s gonna happen before it happens.
Polar bear mugs wino exhausted by that earlier, irritating, constant need to survive.
Surrounded by history, neither seen nor heard from again. And a deaf mute in a pear tree.
If it’s human, nothing’s wasted. Pasted into a big wet kiss or posted on the internet. Stolen from the pockets of the dead, burgled from living memory.
Most art is dispensable, booty and boobs, vaginal lubrication, prostate enlargement,
the unknown, anonymous man named me.

I’ve been wrong before and I may be wrong now.
Things fall apart. Or maybe not. Maybe it’ll all hold together 10,000 years more after all we’ve observed a galaxy born 13 billion years ago, a faint red blur,
and microbe partnerships on the ocean floor.
The good life’s all around us smiling girls on bicycles, dogs on leashes, equality is mandatory.
Sweet solitude and privacy, quiet sitting spot, write a little, read a lot.
Tip generously, gratuitously,
like good luck. Haircut, cabride, dinnerout,
to eat a continent is not so strange.
Does Jack even exist? I doubt it but the class of transformations that could happen spontaneously in the absence of knowledge is negligibly small compared with the class that could be effected artificially by intelligent beings, aliens in the bleachers. Japanese knotweed also known as kudzu. The Chinese navy also known as t’ai chi. Water shortages. War and wildfire. What you’re scared of and what you love. Contracts and deliverables. Hate speech, fate. Humor or ardor, I can’t decide. Dad’s steel-toed boots. Leaves, flowers, fruits. Things are said, mistakes are made. I’m driving pontificating on geopolitics when an archangel flies into the windshield!

Lost my timepiece, lost my metronome. Well, music is a manufactured crisis. Caloric restrictions, control your addictions, desire to be famous, propensity for violence. The profusion of species contents me. Wilderness comes back strong as cactuses, chestnuts, coral. No more missile crises. Eat less, an empty belly’s holy. Horselum, bridelum, ridelum, into the fray! World order—not my problem. Only meditation can save your soul, should there be such a thing. There are actual people half woman half man running past me and dream people in movies half language half light. Or they lie under polished stones embossed with actual photos of themselves.

Learning who you actually are is difficult as sitting still 10 minutes w/o a thought or want. To get lucky you gotta be careful first. Knowledge of death without dying = early retirement. Counting your blessings, a healthy activity. No solution to death’s finality, and such a blessing awaits me, too. If you’re suicidal they call the cops. The audience is full of glee. Watres pippyng hoot. Chinese characters. Quantum guesses. Most failures, and most successes, are in our future.
I embrace wild roots and run through streets with arm around my girl. Inmate #427443. Poetry and surgery—they go together like a horse and buggy. Cheerful as a flock of chickadees. Looking for a lost horse, I hear Appalachian Spring!

Look one way, from another come the heart’s missed beats. Much better to look slowly, labor for the success and happiness of others, even the old and frayed. Look it up. There is no death, just perfect rest. Look more closely. It will be gone in a few days! First entertain, then enlighten if you can. Is it stress? Yes. Tired of death? It’s what it is. Let’s play sports, have sex, live a wonderful life, give generously. If you see a hawk on a bough at field’s edge beyond the corner you should have turned, maybe it’s a sign to go on, alone. No body, no soul. No mirror, no black hole. No mission, no hero. No applause, no noise. No experience, no nonsense. If words can be arranged in any order can they be of any use in foreign policy?

Disappointed, didn’t get what was wanted. Forget me not, is that all I want? A catbird account, a mockingbird account and an owl account. Then, and only then, nothing’s missing and nothing’s left over. Jail or zen mountain monastery hiphop artist hypnotist bebop trumpeter unknown soldier black bear bad bladder ice cold beer poker player wry Creator. If not one way, then another. Otherwise give me your 5-10 best hiphop artists. Can they take the sting out of life like bluegrass, jazz? Mimics, woodpeckers, sing-songers, hawks, chippers and trillers, whistlers, name-sayers, thrushes, owls and a dove, high pitchers, wood warblers and a word-warbling wren. Unusual vocalizations.
We have hope that everyone alive is essential, consequential. The commonplace and everyday is sanctified. Nothing else special need be done but stay alive. Don’t lose passport, don’t be late to airport. Insects are pollinators, insects are us. Romance without finance is a nuisance. November, however, is sweet, sunshine through bare trees, dry brown leaves companionably visiting among the dead. When middle school lets out at the periapsis of Earth’s orbit that’s the face of joy. Each leaf out and Jack in his boxers. If you run over a chipmunk, a groundhog or a skunk, say a short prayer. One can’t help being here, cunt.

I live in a state so blue there’s nothing I can do to change man’s trajectory and if I could what angle of re-entry or ascent would I choose? Grace is what we get no matter what. Come the tired end of day Jack thinks why not waste time watching tv but the next day he has a hangover like Ernest Hemingway or Mick Jagger. Your soul is immortal. It exists outside of time. It has no beginning and no end. If you cannot accept this, forget it all, do not even begin. It all goes into the same church service and comes out babbling for God to appear. The shorter the service the better, less passion, more resistance. Joy may outlast the holocaust. Get it while it lasts.

The material world is reality, my friend. Reality is not always what we’re after. I like Jack’s confidence, that working the problem will result in better outcomes than guessing. Confidence is the feeling you have before you understand the situation. A hawk hunting or just floating waiting for inspiration, a heron rowing east, an owl’s quiet hoot even simpler than the pentatonic bamboo flute.
What’s not to like? Ice cream, yogurt, profit, tofu. Mosquitoes this summer are relentless, heat and humidity, merciless. Ice will ice those little motherfuckers. Killing time before it kills me. Ha ha.

Whatever forever. Poetry is plumbing your unhappiness habit until you reach joy. As I think of things to do I do them. Thing by thing I get things done. I think that’s how my father and his father did things, too. “Away up high in the Sierry Petes where the yeller pines grow tall, Ol’ Sandy Bob an’ Buster Jig had a rodeer camp last fall.” It is the older man’s responsibility to protect, not as a hard-charging archangel, Jack’s joints couldn’t stand it, or hero but as a rational participant, cool, caring and completely zeroed in. Culture or religion is an answer to the problem of what to do and why do it when your cancer makes poetry from losing the argument with yourself.

To die spiritually in the hot sun and the body go on climbing, haunted, hunted, nature’s intelligent partner. People are the element I live in, or else. Call for the elevator. Wait for the el. Snow on the Sonoran, each saguaro wearing a white yarmulke. Creosote smell as snow melts, ocotillos bud out. Man needs help from every creature born. The blackbird contains death but it’s bigger than death. It’s more like God but an ironical god. Smaller and funnier than God, impossible to regard directly, gotta look sideways, aim binoculars left, right, up, down—missing every time. There’s nothing you wish for that won’t be yours if you stay alive.
The Imaginary $i$
The Pity of Things

Part of me says stay small, part go big Part says eat your fill, part don’t pig

Kenko says: long life brings many shames
I say the gray sky brings winter, no blame

The impassable mountains we revere
Moderate the force of wind and water

Get the cement truck into the refrigerator
We shall honor all of life sooner or later

Anything can happen if you don’t resist
To get lucky you gotta be careful first

You discover dying’s much like living
Who should I thank for the pity of things?

O to have the smile of a lover
Who wouldn’t rather be elsewhere!

Desafinado

--slightly out of tune

Am I right to hedge my bets on being famous, ply my arts all day alone, silence, no tv? Mark said, the difference is people are actually listening to Mick Jagger, but I thought that’s not so big a difference.

When Dad died it only reinforced the futility of our daily efforts notwithstanding my hopeful eulogy about our responsibilities to each other.

People listened then, and closely, searching for an echo from the abyss. What is this abyss and how do I know it’s there?
Seaweed

On one of the myriad bays along the Maine coast. Keep the holocaust at bay I said to Dave because you’ll spend all day gathering 2,000 calories and still be miserable hungry. An undiminished population of humans is risible.

Black spruce and balsam fir, you can eat the inner bark in a starvation emergency. There’s plenty of Cornus—bunchberry—each orange pith around the stone worth maybe a quarter calorie.

Lots of sarsparilla but the fruits not out yet and to date I have not savored one. Let’s see—dandelion of course and huckleberry but the most important source of sustenance would be seaweed.

Learn your mushrooms! for the protein. Accept the situation come the apocalypse. I struggle against my insignificance but it would be better to struggle against my ignorance.

Less effortlessness, more fishermanliness. That’s the lesson of this Maine vacation there’s a lot you can eat when in need—the hips of roses and the pips of grasses. And an endless supply of seaweed—bladderwrack, dulse, kelp and thin green lettuce.
Black lives matter. Me too.
Not my president. Give peace a chance.
Luck runs out. I like immigrants.
Power must be challenged by power.

Equal and opposite reactions.
God is the answer. Love is the answer.
Walk on the sunny side of the street. Meat feet.
Learn to drive. Wait for the train in the rain.

A girl gets sick of a rose. Mock orange.
Mediocre presidents, unnecessary wars.
Triumph and humiliation. Meditation.
Sometimes I’m tired of being me. Therefore.

Stop on red, go on green. Orderly neighborhood.
Too tired to be angry. Too tired to do homework.
Tolstoy is the Tolstoy of the Zulus.

College campus. Saguaro, cactus.
Million dollar movie. Aliens in the bleachers.
Full length feature. TED talk, lecture.
Breathe in experience. Bring sentience into an expressible state.

Events pile up with or without an identity willing to organize them.
Events in their mere chronology make no sense.
Inability to transcend own interests. Inability to find one’s way.
Vacations and accomplishments accumulate late in life and early on.

Late in life I struggle against my insignificance.
The straight way lost. Concentrate on this: Thy will be done.
The straight way misplaced. Get over it. Someone tell a joke.
Love. Vote. Join a committee or a party.

MLK made the jump from race to class, dreamed of a brotherly nation.
Is this feeling nostalgia for the past or occipital neuralgia?
Knee surgery, plywood factory. Lost lover, lost city.
Old friends who are dead to me but still here.
Somewhere there are flowers among railroad ties.
True love between sexual partners. Dusty villages and vast cities.
Popper v. Niebuhr, impeachment inquiry.
Hassid and Muslim dress codes. French fashions.

Watch for war, shit and shower. Do the limbo.
Pay bills. The very thought of the rosy dawn makes Jack ill.
Big comfy couch, a nocturnal upon St. Lucy’s Day.
A long day’s journey into night. Truckin’.

Death comes for the archbishop. Private Ryan and Big Red One.
Absence of knowledge and intelligent beings who make things happen.
Life’s brevity and the time taken to carve the canyon.
Decibel level and ambient noise. Captain Carpenter and Mr. Flood.

Nothing but ocean, self-aware organisms and the longing they provoke.
Unit, corps, God, country. Zip code. The clocks and the docks gone and no smoke.
Achilles and Hector. Wills and losses.
Continued existence and most of history.

A holy condition. A warrior’s position.
Walk with a limp. Don’t complain about pain.
Truth may be ascertained by considering your uncertainty.
If everyone votes and every vote’s counted, time is the mercy of eternity.
Nicky’s Road Kill

Nicky, the neighbor’s dog, drags a road kill home.
A beautiful pelt like those fox shoulder garments women wore in the forties.
But the head is crushed beyond recognition—maybe it’s a fox and that’s why Nicky, a canine, is conducting this wake on our front lawn.

Loretta, my wife’s mother, is in the hospital again. Forty years of Crohn’s disease has finally broken her.
It may take some time but she won’t bounce back from this episode.
None of us are sorry to see her die, not even Loretta. There will be a thunderous downpour during her last hour.

I like the story about the nuns hitting Peg in school—contumacy is a sin.
Emile and Loretta considered it an inappropriate punishment for their cherished adopted daughter.
So they pulled her out of Catholic for public school. They did their own thinking about discipline.

Early Spring, peepers all night, then the birds take over at dawn.
Soothing—the mourning doves.
During this half of the year, May through October, we live in a green bower.
We turn the house inside out, move into the mountains.

In their annual order, flowers appear in the understory: coltsfoot, hepatica and trillium through to the end, late purple aster, spotted joe pye and pearly everlasting.
We let Nicky nurse her road kill, watch over it, roll around on it.
Don’t let go of the steering wheel while driving fast in the passing lane.
Types of Joy

There are 12 types of joy:
- simple joy
- almost joy
- systemic joy
- Saturday joy
- expressing joy
- knowing joy
- all joy
- max joy
- constant inputs of joy
- single greatest joy
- sacrifice or joy
- the face of joy
- at the periapsis of earth’s orbit.

Gotta Go

Books to the library photos to family.
Paint cans and lumber
from renovations years ago.
Most of the furniture including the piano.
Fastest way to do this is rent a dumpster.

On the internet
nothing’s permanent.
I like that.
Photosynthesis, evaporation as if your spirit disappears when the sun appears.
It’s a burden lifted not to have to persevere.

Edits for clarity and brevity.
One owes the reader a respite from the tonnage of fructifying English.
To drown one’s book is devoutly to be wished.

Coupla trumpets,
big comfy couch,
four beds and dressers
and the contents of closets.
Tools we don’t use,
surge protectors and chargers,
lawn and patio accoutrements,
table settings for ten.

Lamplit underground,
the stray branch,
synchronized chaos,
a red fez.
One canary,
map of Antarctica,
three deaf little otoliths,
six or seven sybils.

Extra salt and pepper shakers,
sharpies and crayons,
a printer and a scanner,
the Bible and Koran.
Kaput calculators and computers, subscriptions and prescriptions,
a host of vitamins
and the ghosts of ancestors.

Time itself
but not nature.
Wealth
and most of culture
but not my health.
That I’ll keep,
and sleep—practice
for perfect rest.
Colonoscopy

I have a special interest in telling about my colonoscopy. The doc cheerful, secure in his specialty, colon cancer being the second leading cause of cancer death after lung tumors. They can snip the precancerous polyps right out of you during the test. At first the doc gave me the statistics but having paid 25 bucks for this interview I decided to make him explain the science. He was most comfortable describing the physical architecture of adenomatous v. hyperplastic polyps but what about cell structure I said. He was vague about genes and hormones, I could have been chatting with an Electrolux salesman. I wasn’t worried although my ass was burning. Everybody dies, everybody, even Whitman and Emerson, so I browse models for dying—mine are middlebrow, saddlebow—John Wayne in The Shootist, Paul Newman in Hombre—or hagiography Plath her head stuck in an oven, Hemingway who ate his shotgun. Anyway I was upbeat flirting with the nurse, a muse who has seen it all before, acting tough, which isn’t actually an act you do your prep and say your prayers. I thought I’d be in and out butt as you probably already know the prep for this procedure is worthy of Gandhi. A day of fasting, clear fluids only, and constant voiding. You arrive at the hospital one spiritual chicken. I reflected it can’t hurt, lose a little weight, remember who you are without so much shit and flesh between you and the natural world. Snipping polyps is like taking electrons to a lower quantum energy level, nearer the nucleus, with fasting and sexual abstinence. The art of total presence and abstinence, dependence on the Other for future existence.
Quiet

--with lines by Gary Snyder & P.K. Page

Spring morning, quiet. One coyote, three deer running in snow.

What else have I seen? A sparrow hawk in mid-air snatch a robin, a sharp-shinned hawk catch a rabbit in its talons.

A deaf mute in a pear tree. Not one wolverine in Utah or Italy. Nor a famous samurai.

A young black bear traverses the lawn in August. Also quarks. Also oaks. Do not disturb its progress!

A red fox alert, no limp flows silently across the meadow.

First light, green tea. A person thinking epochs and eons. A platoon of chickadees.
Samsara

The day after my Aunt Ro died a doe approached within a few feet as if confused about where she was and what she should be doing.
I could neither comfort nor advise her.
I let her be not considering until later maybe
I had witnessed the transmigration of a soul.
But in the end I applied Ockham’s razor—

you rarely see what you believe.
A mile further along my morning stroll
I was greeted cheerfully by a flock of cedar waxwings I always consider it a blessing to encounter. Such social, amiable beings
I hope Aunt Ro will join, so sure are they of who they are—

Return from Desert

Back from the desert and loving it both the visit and the return.
The powerful plane deiced in Chicago.
Brittlebush, difficulty distinguishing acacia from ironwood.
Mesquite, and plenty of paloverde.
A good jazz band in Phoenix, their own style, no apology.

Could you also love your cancer? The vicious attack of a hedgehog cactus?
The winter storm that kept us on the tarmac three hours followed us home. Used to be when weather made the headlines, that was good news.
No more. Those melting icecaps and incoming meteors.
Some pray, some stay still, some keep playing.

Anyway, notwithstanding inexorably expanding or otherwise rapidly contracting universes
I saw cercocarpus, phainopepla, tomentilla, saguaro, and a great guitarist. Prayers were answered.
The Extraterrestrial Dust Community

Everything is normal
so not much to sing or say.
No summer thunderstorm,
the snow was magical only for an hour.

Old men aren’t removing women’s panties with removable dentures.
A belly laugh now and then,
an empty belly’s holy.

With simple joy
mortals may forget to fear their deaths.
Simply put,
we do not survive. But what an adventure!

I heard an archangel cry
Don’t hurt the trees!
Also, save democracy.
Also, stop barking, believing in that higher power.

What’s Ken doing today?
Watching TED talk lectures, planning next Spring’s garden.
It’s Death, not the Jewish king, in your rose garden.

As climates change species escape predators and predators chase down prey.
Choose sacrifice or blame.

I look at faces
and they look at mine, mute, animated spirits, black wet rocks,
victims among flames.

I like my anonymity
lost in my own city,
in the shade of a gazebo,
a mosquito’s acceptance of its position among a million mosquitoes.
If Not One Way, Then Another

Thanks for another day
Others curse their luck, stale breath
Eventually our enemy becomes our brother

Cancer checkup, another swinging dick who fears his death
To not necessarily sacrifice each and every day for another day
I’m going to my grave unsung like almost everyone

Numerous number systems beyond the real
Look one way, from another come the heart’s missed beats
One way out of the mind’s limitations is through other minds’ contemplations

Another autumn, another election, so aimless and sublime
The white egret ate fish after fish, one then another then another . . .
You get a limited number of long walks, so take your time

One gives up body and soul but that’s not what I came to talk about Slug the world and the world slugs back
What was amusing in my youth, that God’s finger can move me to another square

Another duality, a day in the woods, jet passing overhead
I am in favor of kindness and you prefer concentration camps
The slow death of one sometimes makes the sudden murder of another

To survive only as many more years as there are petals on a randomly picked (ox-eye) daisy
Another winter passing its calling card in at the window
One day follows another until the last day and on that day there will be weather

More Birds! More Bees!

Miracle on the Dnieper
Bloody Quagmire
New Iron Curtain

380
World War III

More Birds!
More Bees!
More Butterflies!
Fewer Invasions!

More I do not know:
Edible wild plants
Grasses, glass, biomass gasification
Four course rotation

Manure, cereal production
Thermal energy, internal combustion
Wood pyrolysis, how to make soap
Acids, clay, metals, rope

Childbirth and neonatal care
Surgery, microbiology and antibiotics
Electricity, animal husbandry
Radio telemetry and photography

Electrolysis, explosives, ore
Time, latitude and longitude
Astronomy, epic poetry
Governance and sustenance and sisterhood

Lieutenant in the infantry
Sports fan
Whose team is in a life and death
Race for the pennant

How will it end
As cadavers or friends?
Our enemy eventually Becomes our brother

Vast army
Burdened citizens
The last partier
Meanders home to bed
Subs v. Dubs

In the debate between dubbing and subbing
I side with subs to savor the original mellifluous French, Tamil, Korean, Italian . . .
Reading the subtitles assists the deaf and hard of hearing although voiceovers benefit the blind and vision impaired.
Historically dubbing was employed by fascist governments to advance the nationalist agenda. In our own time the tendency to consider dubbers stupid mirrors how we think Trump voters are dumb.
My wife reads her phone while watching movies so she prefers dubs. I admire her mastery of two or more things at once however my limited bandwidth favors subs.

Make War, With Love

It’s 2022, we’re in the final battle for the soul of the world.
There is no Indo-European root for soul,
the Greek and Germanic roots mean quick-moving, fleeting, mercurial.
I’d add evanescent, impermanent, ephemeral disappearing, diminishing, dwindling tenuous, brief, short-lived.
Whatever forever—that’s where we’ll be after WWII.

World, home, think, breathe: man, woman the vital force in man, the Anthropocene, men together violence, virtue, virility. Also, werewolf.
War: to confuse, mix up, make worse.
The old are paying close attention but my sons ignore the thunder, plate tectonics, gamma ray bursters and mortars on the Eurasian front.
Peace out—the end, limit, boundary, never to have been. So long, sayonara, shalom, salaam. Take into eternity my hail and farewell.
Poets Just Wanna Have Fun

And complain about sentience. Tell a joke. Make—Us sad or depressed, less afraid Earth into homes, earth into mud
Your peace
Me a fossil of society
Our own decisions, the universe having reversed its decision on us
A sound or noise
Echo make
The body healthy I do
The feelings in the mind play music
A space in a line of people climbing a trail in the mountains
Us brothers and sisters with the animals
Death more noble for us all
A mosque of the rocks
You cry out for the genius occurring now and in our past
The tools and do the math to colonize the planets
Things worse by guessing
Others want to live
Plans
The man weep for himself
A difference in their communities
Music, mindful of our extreme limits
1/10 inch of annual topsoil
The atmosphere as seen from outer space
Of it more than it is The bed
This formulation useful
The technology possible to live long and well, with personality
Grandma’s sauce
This observation: the purpose of sitting’s not to be satisfied
War on Iraqis Pharisees grovel
Black holes whole
Prediction and intuition fortunately hopeless
A list of prospective donors
A moral and rational adjustment of life to life
Dying people cry
Nothing happen, which is something, magic Improvements
Eagle scout
History interesting for Johnny
The subject separate from the substrate
The sun stand still, yet run Consciousness persevere
Informed medical decisions going forward
It so Sense on the trumpet Correct mistakes
Jack ill
A repertoire for dealing with the challenges we’ll confront as a species in millennia to come Every day a good day to die
Millions
The present immutable as the past
Up, perfume, soap
Him kill you right there in the street
Way for a future that’s irresistible
Poetry from losing the argument with themselves

Roar of Tinnitus

I searched upstairs and downstairs, mask of fright, repositioned machinery, turned on lights,
called my doctor and the operator, tried passion and dispassion, meditation and my morning crap, sang out of tune, passed a school bus on the double yellow line.

A clock, a calendar, a ruler,
a minute and an inch. The kind of day
I never have, opens with orisons, ends with an amen, ardor offsets humor.
I cannot locate the source of the hum atoms alternating charges, $e$, $i$,
sharing and unsharing electrons, $\pi$.
I reck I hear (OMG!) my god.
Jack in His Boxers

Have you ever considered how your shoes will look without your feet?

Little Ellis Islands
along the southern border
where employers and immigrants can meet.

Strong oscillations gather rhythm and expel me or accept me,
I live longer or die younger than expected. Acceptance of the loneliness, the unregarding beauty, i.e. perfect weather.

Acceptance of reality
makes me a fossil of society.
The skyline from the bridge looks so skeletal!

How do the clouds accept my dead self? They go, nevertheless, in their direction.

There’s some peace
in letting community decide your place in it, in keeping death before you without perjury

a necessary search, wary of philosophies that assign us souls
but not the trees.

During the afternoon heat I sleep in my underwear.
Pristine aloneness, deepening solitude, imperfect rest. Accept, repeat.
Why Write?

To hear the mermaids singing. Not quite.
To make sense of life. No experience, no nonsense.

To make life better for future generations.
Why care about the future? The dead don’t live to see it.

To save people or nations.
Poets just wanna have fun.

To exceed one’s limits, derivatives with limits.
The one power that a man can have is in the perfection of himself.

Clear commentary from which many people will derive meaning.
Having nothing to teach I tell a joke. The snail joke.

To produce knowledge, nuance and pleasure.
Whatever you do to one side of the equation you gotta do to the other.

There are a few mirrors in which I imagine myself.
The dream mirror in which I’m killin the villains.

The public school in which I teach, energy incubator awesome biomass collector innovation inhibitor introduction to classical mathematics memory organizer promotion celebration teen lovefest testosterone uncontrolled substance.
Jail’s the alternative, alternate noosphere, foreseeable force, intemperate penance, meditational penitentiary, prayer cellblock, library laundry, aborted love life, deflating genes, judges’ chambers, movie night.

Bad movies in which the logic switch is turned off.
The end of faith in which acts of war are mistaken for religious acts.

Photographs in which the name and face don’t match.
Measurements in which the last significant digit is the Other.

Might as well go to market.
Might as well believe in that higher power.
Jump the Life to Come

I should call Dr. Killeen this afternoon, find out if I have cancer
but I’m enjoying the extra weekend of not knowing.

Sans suffering,
sans difficult adjustment,
mostly relieved I’m not me.

It’s annoying
being the center of attention,
the dead man walking.

Things often work out better than you expect and this probably will too.
In the transition to non-existence,

Ken said, you get what you believe.
Now that is a truly scary thought,
even scarier than Life is but a dream.

Pain serves the purpose of preparing one to die.
Other methods have been tried but this works best.

You tie up your affairs or choose to keep the schedule you possessed when feeling well. Refuse to be practical about the afterlife.
All will be given
that must be what faith means.

Don’t forget to breathe.
Rain happens. We supply the reasons.
Leave no footprint in eternity. No smell.
Helterskelter Huggermugger Heebiejeebies

Coffee between neighbors
Apocalypse or situation comedy, which?

History passionate history
Ignore your autobiography

Departing from traditions
No mission, no omission

Hot anvil and hot engine
It’s a waste of time to imagine being dead

Care enough to think clearly
It’s an idyll of an early summer evening

Today steam rose from the asphalt Loneliness is the default position

Caves and red-rock houses
Clear sinuses and arteries

Dancing in fishnet stockings
Effortless mastery

Fractals without chemistry
Watres pipyng hoot

Evolved anarchy
Sculpted pines

A billion circuits
Abide in peace

Archaic torso
Watercolor ornaments

Your romantic past that gave no offense
Preparing boys for war

The self
Service to others
Suppressing insurrections
Repelling invasions

Overcome a deepening solitude
Walking and talking is sung praise and gratitude

Cliff rose and wavyleaf oak
The reincarnation of Clifford Brown

Because I pay the rent on time
Somewhere there are flowers among railroad ties

Go to your daily discipline
Practice for perfect rest

Getting the trajectory right for re-entry
Reducing probabilities to near zero

Starry corridor
Guard the border

Flawed methodology
Calm acceptance, something like gladness

How you feel accounts for nothing at all
How broadly we define community says it all

A comity and a tragedy
Everything rhymes with comedy

F is for fiction
Conflict is inevitable

We’re taking on everyone one at a time
So, we come to Mexico, a violent and unhappy border, or Gaza and Israel, or Russia and just about everybody

The ordinary care of Providence
Cleaning after a successful party

History portends a periodic bloodletting Nothing’s happening which is something, magic
The Imaginary i

No mission, no omission, no zero, no fear, no hesitation is great, no cows to look at, no image ever seen,
no eye sees his nose right, no zen, no zazen,
no longer playing with the eyes of other passengers,
no use for samurai skills, no smoking, no species before us had to adapt to its own effects upon environment—no, every species must, no confusion, no delusion that mankind (or nature) gives a shit whether you amount to something or not, no answer is forthcoming for the young fool importunes to ask too frequently,
no robes, no perfectly manicured wardrobe,
no boat being repaired in the boatyard

Owing no member of society an explanation,
the warm steam no longer cutting the rough edge,
age, race, marital status no object,
no trucks to grind their gears,
no shame, no hymns, no hymnal,
no wallet, no keys, no owl hoots,
no soul, no solution, no Last Judgement,
no limbo either, no sale today, kneel woefully and pray,
no cars behind or ahead, no one notices or cares,
no thanksgiving, no gravediggers waiting,
no context for a man outside the platoon, no chickadees,
no Emily or Beauty, no real control

No greater tragedy, no better than a squirrel,
no memorable theories, no knife or gun, no pity, no way to express the subtle degrees of experience our long lives represent,
no one thinks, no actor dies, no negotiation unless the violence ends,
no revelation, no downside, no confidence,
no, it did not fundamentally matter whether George was born,
no stopping the fight before the fight is done,
no more certain than a drunk in his city,
no sneakers, no money, no police record,
no job, no niche, no purple or indigo occurrences, no desire to go outside and touch swelling buds, no romance left in love,
no bomb, no harm, no nation, no veto
No life in space, no hurry, no percentage in respecting death unless it’s imminent, no choice, no angel, no particular agony, no more birding, no more fucking, no more worry, no more war,
no perfect rest, no shouting, no crying,
no obligation, no doubt, no saxophone, no friends or family, no religion in meditation, no kisses sweet or smell of shit, no pleasure, no applause, no noise, no fiction, no evidence, no Iliad, no Odyssey,
no one’s blameless, no burger bags blowin’ in the sun,
no such luck, no petals, no sepals,
no footprint, no ghost, no explanation, no change,
no one of course is completely unknown, no interest in further sex

No snow, no scum, no chemistry,
no beginning and no end, no law, no resolution,
no plan for tomorrow, no one comes to dinner,
no strip joints, no more movies, no mosquitoes, no government,
no hundred year storms, no afterlife, no name, no tv!
no joy, no answer to the question why be a toy?
no serendipity, no matter what, no visible reaction from Tsarnaev, no need to interpret the Chinese master’s wisdom, no cedar waxwings, no Elizabethan inn, no such thing, no guards at the border, no one hoards gold, no cell phone, no taxation without representation, no is always an option,
no clue what Krshna taught Arjuna, no need to pull down statues of General Lee,
no there there, no lawnmowers, no leafblowers, no long walk, no brush with death
Pirouettes at the Periapsis of Perseverance

Always doing something plus I have opinions

Winning the war in Ukraine pain I can’t explain

Saving for retirement
kayaking to the huckleberries across the River Styx

Kisses sweet or smell of shit don’t pretend you don’t care

If you just watch the sky an hour each day you’ll never be ill without plenty to say about everything you’ll get better right away

Disrobing and bathing, how big and dark the universe is not that I accept their god

You get what you believe, a truly scary thought man sees man in his mirror that is self-doubt

Contraceptives in place and pleasures today drifting toward perpetual armageddon

Suffering and struggling toward vague goals keeping your past functioning as a factor in the present

That irritating constant need to survive prepare for a powerful anesthesia, irresistible chemical processes

Life goes on without a hiccup
you pays you money and you takes you chances

Some people go dancing in fishnet stockings you’ll soon lose interest in wearing the cap of a fool

Your friends are the men you’ll want in your foxhole the wound that never heals in the end is all you’ll feel

You’ll remove all your clothes, naked before the ladies and if it comes to that, you’ll kill, on orders from who?
Basic science and ancient arts
that must be what faith means

Tooth replacement, knee replacement, window replacements
some individuals may, it turns out, be irreplaceable

If, as they say, the cells of the body are replaced every seven years fire makes earth into air, air makes earth into dust, water makes earth into mud

Mission STS-51-L

The New Hampshire high school teacher who died yesterday in the space shuttle Challenger articulated her enthusiasm uncritical of America’s evasions and invasions and devoted her life to her students accepting perhaps too certainly the future in the firmament.

Her most interesting comment was the similarity she saw in the teamwork at NASA and the classroom dynamic.

It is a neat parallel as noted by the president that Sir Francis Drake also died on January 28th 390 years ago. Then, the ocean was the frontier. Now, as before, the communal imagination gives birth to new machines, minds and hands whatever it takes to explore the world.

Mariupol

425 km Kherson to Mariupol
325 km Svatove to Mariupol
225 km Zaporizhia to Mariupol
When Mariupol’s free the war will be over and we’ll stroll again by the Azov Sea.
Earplugs

Sweet silence!
late in life
I discover earplugs my wife’s pastel plugs that fill the ear canal by compressing for insertion and expanding once in place

No lawnmowers, no leafblowers
wood chippers or persistent phoebes an occasional cardinal, bluejay, crow water to the thirsty traveler morphine to the cancer better than knee surgery or a negotiated end to the war

One purple one green one good cop one bad cop
if not one way, then another humility v. perspicacity one year of sleeping in my clothes without a consort’s apnea one day the sun is hot, one night the moon is full

Such silence is so sweet
I might try blindness too like Homer or Milton just kidding, should there be a god listening the veil of life is thin
if one doesn’t believe in mystery or accepts the rules entirely

One green one brown two leaves sleep-touching
then a breeze!
the day I left life behind hitchhiking as the sun descends morning air cold and clear one powerful with eternity, one blinding with intensity

The freedom of summer gone he lived with one eye after that one more season and one more after that in a mind there is apocalypse
no one can hear it
but one day you die
and this is the ideal silence you sought

One elk in aspen
two police officers one buys it between the eyes
the other in the back the suffering of one citizen sometimes makes the sudden murder of another with simple joy men may give up desiring to hear

Silence of winter
New York City
nature’s lunacy cities make a silent distant sound like being hidden away in the woods
a leaf tip for a cocoon how much tinnitus can you handle

Graceful as silence sailing through the ferns and understory my present v. my future existence perfect acts, actual and factual
the national debate
garrulous, querulous
speech, none, you can’t sum it up in one more metaphor

Censor crop shorten and silence no tv, no self-pity first light, green tea remain still as on the subway and prepared to fight listening is part of holding community together exercise, stretch, heal if possible and prepare for a powerful anesthesia Eidolan. Penumbra.

It’s all magic to Joe and music to me, too.

An owl’s quiet hoot
even simpler than the pentatonic bamboo flute.

* * *

Belonging to the drums and woeful war
I woof and bay like every other dog.

Ukes v. Orcs, a hockey brawl pros vault the stands and redd the fans.

* * *

It’s only a papier-mache moon. Or is it?
Hey ho the wind and rain wear us away and it’s ok.

The outline disappears and the meaning.
This could be a pert sweet thing.

* * *

Rain in my courtyard. Rusty trucks stuck in mud.
To bring order from chaos, just say yes.

Do the day’s disputes leave you indisposed
to share your heart of zero and your inner rose?

* * *

The tragic mind knows the nuclear inferno is a probability.
Every leaf that’s coming out is out, come what may.

That’s joy. As time grows short, I get stoic.
There’s work to do but does it matter if I do it?

* * *
Start each day in despair, work up to acceptance. That there’s no there there requires resistance.

Give generously, gratuitously, flamboyantly like good luck, but stop before it hurts.

* * *

Apocalyptic visions are popular again but Earth will merely take a mulligan.

Beyond mountains more mountains, peepers peeping.

Juniper. Quince.

Canaigre a leafy buckwheat right here in the high desert! What are we doing here, bears ears? Drive an hour, hike an hour, find some shade, sit in dirt. Identify plants, photograph rocks. Not a bad prison sentence, far from my daily discipline. Geopolitical and existential dramas perdure without surcease. What else have I seen? Raven and scrub jay. Coleogyne and cercocarpus, single-leaf ash and squawbush. Juniper, the source of all shade. The rift that took the river eons to carve, caves made for cougar and Anasazi. The sand and soil are Mars red, iron oxides deposited by ocean 200 to 20 million years ago. $2 \times 10^8 / 8 \times 10^1 = 2 \frac{1}{2}$ million possible lifetimes. That’s nuthin compared to the wind in my head! Meanwhile it’s Spring back east, quince blossoms have come and gone.
So sad! But we are here, juniper berries nuclear blue-green!

Entropy. Quiddity.

They’ll figure life out without me. The world without the self. What a relief! Simple sky blue belief. Simple as this headache. Truth, laws, physics. God’s first and only words, wafer-thin old moss-covered stones. Amen to men. Where a man is at no matter what. Now and then a baseball game, night of love. Knowing to whom, for whom, one is bespoke. It’s a simple secret shared, longevity, watching for the smoke to be black or white. Joy, almost joy, forgetting to fear death, giving up desiring to be touched, belonging to the loved ones and woeful war, a consort who is gentle and simple, too.

Flying. Beeing.

This must be what clinically depressed means. Drive. Clean. Watch tv. Forget the names of every flower in the temperate zone. Go on alone. Keep sleeping. Saturday’s the sweetest day, all joy, you’re off the clock, participation’s optional. Each email a flame of passion. Insects have souls too, consciousness, a feeling of Flying. Beeing. Not only humans long for liberation, no body, no soul, no mirror, no black hole. Are not the satisfactions of being a good man among our fellow men enough to sustain us anymore? A rock thrown, a crow, nemesis. As I think of things to do I do them.
Resistance. Momentum.

Countries occasionally go crazy
Russians in Ukraine, us in Vietnam and Iraq, human migration, a force of nature, a virus attack,
from fire, from drouth, from hurricanes south.
I remember Mom’s words for my room’s mess:
catastrophe, havoc, chaos, confusion.
What a welter, snake pit, mare’s nest!
Mishmash, morass, maelstrom, bollix, motley, hodgepodge,
snarl, anarch, labyrinth.
Gordian knot, street litter, Capitol riot, thousand year storm.
Miscellaneous consciousness, rarely a clear coherent thought,
not one logical, lucid progression. Free-for-all.
Mending rhymes with ending. What percent of all time is that?
We’ve been wrong before and will be wrong again.

Fenderbender. Bumpersticker.

A.I. may help us talk to animals.
The protagonist has nothing much to do and likes it that way. Long as you’re livin’ you’re killin’ the villains. Dustings for ghosts and ancestors whether this war is worth fighting for or the worst. What about joy, want?
Anyone who wants to fight me all the time,
genetically engineered primates, baseball, ballet, iambic pentameter v. I got rhythm, faith we can solve geopolitical problems.
Earth needs no redundancies, an egg on a spoon
before possibilities are quantized.
How big and bright the universe is! Fate.
Earplugs are the answer. Love is the answer.
Living. Obsessing.

Obsessing about sump pumps and bulk mailings

Writing a boring biography for what purpose, neither

Understanding the self nor knowing the unknowable

Something
to occupy the time between winter and summer mornings

Evenings watching tv but finding the stories risible, how

Irritating
wearying the number of killings in one pint-size city

Identifying
my feelings with the feelings of kings and fools and murderers

Recombining repeatedly the same words and memes and genes

Enjoying orgiastically autumnal delights

Playing with the eyes of other passengers Wearing a shirt and tie
and carrying a briefcase

Buying
yogurt and honey
in a small favorite grocery store

Eyeing
the lake from shore
for a bluebird or flying insect

Lying
low and breathing low mists of pure noise

Dying commensurate with the way
one lived one’s life

Trying to educate everyone to their individual capacities

Obeying
the speed limit
as my hormones permit

Touching sweetly but staying strong

Going to the mountain to mark my trees

Organizing the unemployed alcoholics and welfare mothers into

Flying chevrons of purposeful explorers

Satisfying
victories, compromises, achievements
the mind being the body

Paying attention to what it is doing

Feigning respect for all deadth denying beliefs

Learning Sidewinder playing it imperfectly

Seeing trees swaying in every direction

Hurrying and hesitating toward the horrible or pleasurable

Unifying
all physical matter rocks and sentient beings

Specifying
classifying, praying
while all the leaves are falling

Agreeing
first on rules of engagement then engaging

Partying doing drugs getting Trinity pregnant Laughing
over recent visits to marvelous cities

Trashing fewer plastic contraptions using less electricity

Hunting mating, having been too many places to count

Tying
my shoe, trying to get my truck out of the mud

Crying
birdy birdy birdy birdy

Exasperating argument re immigration
the carrying capacity of the planet

Carrying children away from holocaust
the fundamentalist army not far behind

Requiring winter and the cold that keeps us sane and sober

Running and at rest not at peace

Seeking
God, housecleaning teaching our sons to use the word please

Knowing how to say yes when you mean yes and no when you don’t

Keeping death before you without perjury

Cutting brush for a fire line high up where raptors and ravens fly

Working
and dirty, joking with the crew during lunch

Drying to a taut drum lying in leaf litter

Copying wholesale from the great poems

Planning to arrest the president for war crimes

Terrifying thunderstorms, tornado or volcano

Applying
the scientific method
a self-aware organism

Playing
cards, backgammon, chess each move a variation on the next

Annoying
being the center of attention
the dead man walking Destroying
the kind of power that cannot be made socially responsible

Prophesying success, explaining failure

Believing
in the death penalty nature knows no pity or self-pity

Working
to abandon immortality
as a hope

Hoping happiness outgrows fear
by an ounce or enough

Sitting
open to the blue sky and jet stream cutting the gorge

Walking and talking quietly or going angrily to war

Weedsmoking videogameplaying tvwatching lawnmowing

Thanking
the young cashier for doing her job, not

Beheading
each other yet

Beginning
to reverse the future loving the desert for having no water

Counting your blessings
a healthy activity

Fructifying
English—to drown one’s book is devoutly to be wished

Acting tough, which isn’t actually an act
my ass is burning

Notwithstanding melting icecaps and incoming meteors all meaning must be found, here, in the middle zone

Living
until the body just stops barking
breathing
Ukrainians Are Not Russians

Science can’t save you and neither can religion, the only alternative is to let what happens happen therein happiness happens to lie, in the abyss about which God lied, the relative importance of politics
v. personal mortality, why care about the future the dead don’t live to see it, it’s a source of information to forget and be forgotten, self-revelation
but the world rotates just fine without humans, each individual identifiable hoot and wail, loud laugh and suppressed scream, installing sump pumps and fighting forest fires, former lovers or subcontractors,
the slow death of one sometimes makes the sudden murder of another,
first entertain then enlighten if you can, that was the Top Bard’s rule,
all night card games and sometimes open swims, the small no smaller than the great and the great no greater than the small,
a light wave and a particle, understandable to anyone and meaningful to someone, overwrought reactions and irrational exuberance, ionic and covalent bonds, perhaps chanting’s the answer though there’s nothing wrong with silence,
some of our favorite characters croak and quarks
are the reincarnation of Clifford Brown,

if you’re not being read you’re already dead, ha ha,
killing time before it kills me v. whatever forever,
dandelions and huckleberry, mushrooms and seaweed, grasses and cactuses, seed and carrion, skunk smell and turkey flock, panhandlers and pedestrians, food gathering and preparation, do not even begin the beugune until I’ve got you under my skin,
FLO and LUCA, the truth we reason and the truth we’ve seen, how you spend your money and do you believe in a god who can see all and understand, watching at your father’s deathbed and being at a birth, choosing to do this and not that,
a fine Spring rain or mortars on the Eurasian front,
the dry samara, achene or capsule surrounding a seed,
policy or personal questions, honor and bravery, tits and ass,
a fox, a coyote or a bear, rules of war, markets and law, filberts, almonds and walnuts, ancient Romans and Britons, Gaza v. Israel and Russia v. just about everyone, wet nights and warm days, meditative and active, corner of Church and Chambers, daily life as low intensity warfare or walking alone in wilderness, coins heads or tails, winds bright or dark, measure for measure all’s well that ends well, the history that surrounds you going to your daily discipline, birds you’ve seen v. people loved, daddylonglegs seeingeyedogs, what was accomplished or never finished and how I’ve felt about every wasted day, them dark-skinned mustachioed shitheads v. them fat bearded tattooed pissed off white bros, how we live together by verse or force, deciduous blossoms and edible understory herbs, windmills on the sky and bridges in the sea, pornography v. verbal prowess, the fern and sedge, flying and at rest, win or lose play your best, judiciously employ violence to organize and defend the nest, atomic bubble gum and protein computer, the saw and the pulaski, I must devote my present to my future existence not that the national debate should cease, a system of beliefs to illustrate and the naming of things according to our observations, Spring in the Sonoran, summer in the Olympics and autumn in New England, the neighborhood safe and the nation a nonviolent helpmate, earth science and branches of government, words and numbers are things no one has ever seen or heard or touched, 3 hots and a cot, circle with a dot, eating cheese and crackers while watching tv, harsh mountains and deserts, dualities and discrepancies, an abstract audial harmonization of the Big Bang and The Fall, I don’t believe in an afterlife or machines with emerging consciousness, wait and see how big and dark the universe is, the passionate and zealous, ocotillo or girl on a bicycle, hundred year storms or normal summer warming, the bottom of the ocean and the palm at the end of the mind, the dream-lover and –killer are you in disguise, yesterday’s walk and today’s work, organic farms and endangered species, just and unjust wars, laboring for the success and happiness of others, bringing order from chaos, there were always too many things in my life, theories and hypotheses, to the gods the individual won’t matter, a vase or heavy clay ashtray, mature stems and quality veneer, the algebra and the calculus, the geopolitical drama and existential dilemma, transit strike and supermarket bagger, one can remain anonymous and still avoid the deeper question, break dancers and ice skaters, boxers or jockeys, news photos of grizzled Ukes and dead Orcs, the emptiness at the core of your being and an impending tsunami, a buddy and a blonde, the enemy and their god, a big wet kiss posted on the internet and a hawk on a bough.

Sump Pump

When domestic life just gets better and better, laughing and crying washing machines and dryers, clean air and water, rainwater, tap water, distilled water, spring water, a molecule of water, on land and water, seedless watermelon, deep snow and shadows, water and bone, female sex drive water sport, water found by thirsty desert travelers, water from a wooden bowl, seltzer water, nothing happens, which is something, drouth, flood, magic.

Water goes where it wants to go and so does death. Water glasses winking and clinking, watercolor ornaments, waterproof boots. Dripping with water, chortling like water, dead in the water on the rocks out of circulation up shit’s creek all washed up down the drain liquidated. Evaporation of water collecting over huge expanses, wind and white water rivers. Drink your quota of water.
Sapiens

Reading Yuval Noah Harari’s brief history of humankind, entertaining though why care about the past, the dead don’t live to see it, or our systems of beliefs. WWII must have caused anxiety as do today’s assaults on democracy. So much noise, or quiet, too quiet, which? I can’t decide. Nevertheless we make our own decisions, or else. The doors close but we want out. Look at the books and read none of the dry words yet we may concede, observe, realize and accept we lack data, or skills or tools to interpret data. Contentment, community, family and our place in it, trees have a special winter beauty, not every seed becomes a flower, power must be challenged by power and perhaps the universe has reversed its decision on us. What am I learning, sitting, watching the seasons turning?

To act and react is itself a fever akin to the fittest’s survival. Insignificant and mighty happenings, selfsame imaginary i, finding humor in the cholera, two hours sitting on my arse moaning and yearning, daily low intensity warfare, correcting the decisions of earlier presidents, gods, ghosts, aliens, coaches. Who’s in authority, who’s in command? Who can say if all will be given or well? Really, it’s a perfect day, a new life begins, things are said, mistakes are made. A man weeps for himself going forward, keeping death before him without perjury. Big Red One, 442nd, SS Einsatzgruppen, Harlem Hellfighters, Royal Gurkha Rifles, Screaming Eagles, 82nd Airborne, 10th Mountain. We can’t know what we’re doing until it’s done.
Sacrifice or Blame

I cannot sit still longer than a cardinal crow or heron
plus I have opinions
free and fair elections
I’m an opponent whatever happens in the afterlife be more sentient care less about the cosmos return to lovers’ arms and plumbing this is what you come to love

Tomatoes and bananas tornadoes and volcanoes cashiers and clerks
water and bone
petrochemicals and vegetables
Roosevelt and Lincoln
Rick in Casablanca
Shakespeare so far agriculture, culture and war
the tropical January sun

Your final February enjoying the extra weekend of not knowing could change my life like an archaic torso of Apollo
a satellite blinking like an eye like flower arranging or pouring tea correctly

By describing that which is not yourself, breathe in our nation’s history, wars transportation via superconduction breathe out optimism possibilities, evolution an introduction to everything you’re not that never even happened

If I saw a cougar
I would not know what to do
the internet’s a door tea is reality crews are working to restore service where I’m going what kind of day was it for its consideration of unknowns

Father, mother
the tide goes out humor or ardor luck runs out
the end, limit, boundary a fossil of society letting community decide your place in it a billion circuits
running and at rest
the final resting place

Anything can happen
the ocean can take your children happiness permeates like CO2 + sunlight you can leave without being seen each of us has moved on many times
Quebec or Puerto Rico may secede peacefully That’s when the peace work proves relevant there are no ghosts
the accounting is relaxing we’re searching outer space twice, in vain therefore let the transfer of power proceed
the sorrow and the pity on Earth and Tethys

Do one thing well live every day as your last don’t sacrifice each and every day for another, more lives now for fewer later shall be sacrificed choose sacrifice or blame, no one’s blameless the gray sky brings winter no blame
Face Facts

Jagged bent faces, black wet rock
When it rains your face becomes a holy bowl

Peace has many faces
Face it, you’ll never know so stop asking questions

Flat perspective, faces of the victims among flames, in no particular agony
My face tells me nothing, not nothing but nothing useful

It is life we face and death we meet
I’ve seen my death face and it’s not pretty

Once you’re gone most of us forget your face and previous accomplishments
Old friends face certain dissolution with perplexity, comity and humor

Sacrifice or joy, but that expresses only the surface of our emotions
The face of joy: a job well done, a baby born, a marriage for better or worse, a negotiated end to the war

I go in front of the mirror and observe the changes to come in my face
Yellow ape teeth chimping in the glass death face

Although my face is a mask of hate and pain
With fire-blackened face I buy a popsicle after work

Face up in the emergency room, facing doom
Even in the face of individual heroics, the male and female face a blur

Bombs and poison, grief, chiseled tearless face
Eric and Lisa clean their baby’s face

Map-faced men, crow-like women, the faces in the funeral pews are impassive Few achieve their potential in the face of history, society and their personal flaws

Interface of rock and flesh, I have surely lost face often in my life
Will the holocaust wipe the smile off the face of our romantic comedy?
The Help

Help Ukraine torch the Kerch Bridge.
Help reclaim Cooper Hill Farm.
The climate is changing. Help!

The optimistic society expects its knowledge to grow and that if it does grow, that will help.
I am here to name it and know it and help it to grow.

Help is on the way, prayers were answered.
Nothing can be done, it couldn’t be helped.
Man needs help from every creature born.

I may live but does it matter if I help anyone else to live?
Stories can be helpful or boring, beautifully or indifferently written.
Reading other writers helps me know what I like but now I am tempted to articulate why I like what I like.

Homework helps you know where you want to go before going where you have to go.
Success is not necessarily happiness but it helps.

Troy’s mother threw him out but she helps out now and then.
Drive home, shop, help make dinner, eat, read paper, watch news hour, play trumpet, type poem, sleep.
The neighborhood safe, the nation a non-violent helpmate among nations.

I was confused past help so my teacher didn’t help.
Is there any hope for living without God’s help or even probability’s?
Anyone who wants to fight me all the time helps me live outside myself.

It’s living and helping others to live that counts.
Control eludes us. Hero accepting help.

A callow youth even as a man, he was afraid and therefore could not comfort or help.
Sorry, unable to help or change what happened.
I cannot help what I do or hope. One can’t help being here.
Doors. Dreams.

Zach awoke from a scary dream. He asked are all the doors locked?

The doors close but she decides she wants out. She bangs on the door as the train begins to move. Maybe her hand or foot was caught in the door.

Surrender to greater force, power, strength whatever it is called, the clog of heels upstairs to the door, turning of the key, indestructible garbage, bulldozed landscape, Anthropocene.

Next I water thirty thirsty plants, check the mailbox a neck a stretch a search for the mailman. My doing this opens the windows and unlocks the doors.
Cells, machinery of life, organs, organisms, communities
and ecosystems, planets, solar systems, galaxies
galactic clusters and their inverse black holes, the doors to other universes.

Man made the town and the machine from rocks mined
next door.
Invisible electrons move the machine to perform.
My simplicity is terminal.

At the 2nd St. jail
the sheriff’s dept.
provides guards,
a metal detector,
one man with a gun,
door buzzer (in out), sign in sheet,
alphabugs, antibiotics.

In a century when we fear nuclear war and the shock of fast change, motel doors sport three locks
though nothing dangerous could happen in a town like this.
Repairs take weeks or months. Septic, garage door, cracked windshield, mud road, rake leaves, cut wood, prune lilac, paint lawn chairs.

It was already dark when I left work and locked the doors. On First Ave. block residents hanging out front steps. I bought a beer at the deli on Third Ave. from the Arab owner.

There must be a crack, deep and unmendable, that the poet must try to mend, not just mildly disquieted but running for the River Styx, the doors of Hell pell mell.

First the window sills are covered then the door jambs, our lips are sealed, then our eyes shut. Sleep like this we’ve never known. Will Spring return?
Killing Time

I’m wasting time making lists of movies
Plenty of time, plenty of wine, plenty of information
It doesn’t really matter what I do with my time

Great buildings are built that nature destroys in time with a little wind, water, fire
The heavens are having a fine time belting it out

What is right fits the time perfectly, it is all out of my hands
We are nothing in powerful time’s grip
You can leave at any time, you can return without being seen

* * *

Across time the Terminator travels
We await our time or have had it or are having it
Life’s brevity compared to the time taken to carve the canyon

Pedestrians are infinite, times two shoes
I must not now slide off the road into time

Most men, most times, abide in peace
A small rift in time opens, drifting toward armageddon or solutions to the equations
Interpreting the known facts accumulated over time and generations

* * *

May you live in interesting times—wish or curse?
Each of us has moved on many times. Time, our moment, is the mercy of eternity.
Humanity followed time here. Then snow again in time.

It’s a waste of time to imagine being dead
Time the magic moments to come

What occupies the time beyond the furthest edge of space?
Community across time and graves
Leaving when one’s time and work is done
Do the much-admired writers of our time die more content than that? One peeper keeps peeping in time to a satellite blinking What percent of all time is that?

I revise some poems a hundred times, maybe more It is the only way it could be said by this person in this time and place

The ocean can take away your children any time Not guessing any better than they at the time what love meant Time’s irreversible, change is all that’s visible, the linear is circular

Cans in a pantry, books on a shelf, to the end of time Pass the heavy-hanging time playing pinochle and pool In times of prosperity we forgot to be austere. Maybe is a long, long time.

Promises are broken all the time, to others and the self Yet I find I am attracted at times to philosophies in short skirts, jewels and eyes lined with kohl

The best time to write is when you don’t have much to say Your soul is immortal, it exists outside of time. Just kidding. Every time you ask for guidance you receive it. Also just kidding.

All joy, all times. A quiet place and time to think simply and deeply. Unopened time slides by inexorably Suppose everything’s fine and you’ve wasted your time wearing sackcloth over your soul?

We’re taking on everyone, one at a time. Time now for rest. About the dark times will there be singing? Yes, there will be singing and some of the songs will be sidesplitting.

It’s just a matter of time before the public ignores the 24-hour news cycle
I would rather watch Lalaland ten times over than write this poem
The nurses are not particularly interested in how I spend my time

*         *         *

Where a man is at, at all times, no matter what Anyone can be president, that’s been proven time and time again
Whatif whatnot oldtimer. Part-time tutor, supermarket bagger.

So small time I have time and no enemies or friends
I’m gonna be huge when I’m dead John said last time we spoke

Then it will be the time for moths or fireflies, mud road, red-winged blackbird Bump bump bump down the igneous rocks of life, take the boulders two at a time down
I’m killing time before it kills me. Ha ha.
Acknowledgements

Robert Ronnow gratefully acknowledges the use of excerpts from the work of other writers in the following poems:

Aging as a Spiritual Practice
—Marvell, Andrew, "To His Coy Mistress".

All the Worlds There Are —Wikipedia, "Omega".

Antifragility

Anyone who wants to fight me all the time

Atman. Atman.

Birding by Ear

Brodmann Area 4

By the Seat of the Soul's Pants

City of Hope
—Dante Alighieri, The Divine Comedy, The Inferno Canto VIII, Italian,

Colonoscopy

Commonly Seen Bumper Stickers

The Compensatory Force of Nemesis

Contingency

Covid Cashier
Data Delivered to Your Inbox
— Almeter, Gary, “Ta-Nehisi Coates, Oprah Winfrey, a new novel and a Baltimore success story”, The Baltimore Sun, Oct 3, 2019. “Saul Bellow once asked, ‘Who is the Tolstoy of the Zulus?’ You know Tolstoy, the Russian author considered one of the greatest of all time. In response to this, a Sports Illustrated reporter named Ralph Wiley replied, ‘Tolstoy is the Tolstoy of the Zulus.’”

Derivatives With Limits
— Strayhorn, Billy, "Maybe", as sung by Lena Horn, We'll Be Together Again, 1994.

Either Way
— Emerson, Ralph Waldo, "The Poet".
— Stills, Stephen, "Love the One You're With".

The End of Faith

Enduring Spinning: Agriculture, Culture and War
— Wikipedia, "Benito Juarez".

Flying. Beeing.
— Cardenal, Ernesto, “Ecology”, trans. Marc Zimmerman, Flights of —Kasdan, Lawrence and Benedek, Barbara, The Big Chill (film), 1983.

The force that placed us here cannot be trusted
—Whitman, Walt, "Would you hear of an old-time sea fight?", Song of Myself, 35.

Fundamental Physics
—Alpert, David, "Explaining it All: How We Became the Center of the Universe", NY Times Book Review, August 12, 2011.

Get the Most Out of Life of Pi
—Martel, Yann, Life of Pi, Mariner Books, 2003, as visualized in the film by Ang Lee.
—Shakespeare, William, Hamlet, III, i, 55-87.

The Happy Tectonics

If Not One Way, Then Another

The Invention of Zero
—Wikipedia, "0 (Number)".
Jack's Commitments

Jump the Life to Come

Long As You’re Living

Make War, With Love

The Master Algorithm

More Birds! More Bees!
—Pavel, Barry, Engelke, Peter, and Cimmino, Jeffrey, “Four ways the war in Ukraine might end”, New Atlanticist, March 1, 2022.

Mortal Poets
—Heaney, Seamus, RTE Radio 1, September 1997.
—Taylor, James, "Shower the People", as performed on Live, 1993.

My Giant
—Emerson, Ralph Waldo, Essays, "Self-Reliance".

New Haven Terminal

Number and Verse

Occupied

Oh Pilot Me

Ohthere

On Suffering
—U.S. Declaration of Independence.

On the Avenue
—Donne, John, “At the round earth’s imagined corners”.

427
The Ordinary Care of Providence
—Madison, James, "Memorial and Remonstrance Against Religious Assessments".

Out of Emptiness
—Tennyson, Alfred, Lord, "Vastness".

Passion Is Its Own Predicament

The Pity of Things

Poets Just Wanna Have Fun

Popper v. Niebuhr

Problems

Purposes Incomprehensible and Wonderful as These Purposes
—Big Virge, "Troubled Times," All Poetry.
—Herbert, George, “Prayer”.

Quiet

Roar of Tinnitus
—Hopkins, Gerard Manley, “Carrion Comfort”.

Rules for Old Men Waiting

The Scariest Stanza in All of Poetry
—Moravia, Alberto, "Poetry and the Novel", Threepenny Review, 429

The Scientific Way To Do Mathematics

The Self
—Montaigne, Michel de, Essays, "Of Experience".

The snail will get to Easter just as soon

Soot
—Harburg, Yip and Rose, Billy, "It's Only a Paper Moon", as performed by Nat King Cole, The King Cole Trio Vol 1, 1943.

Stay together. Learn the flowers. Go light.

Stop & Shop Strike

2 Jobs, 2 Kids, 2 Houses, 2 Hobbies

Uncertainty

Watching Homer Struggle

Who’s Got Trouble?
Words/Day
—Kingston, Maxine Hong, "Idea!: Four-word poems!", To Be the Poet, Harvard University Press, 2002.

World Order

The World Without the Self
Robert Ronnow acknowledges and appreciates publication of the following poems in print and online journals and magazines:

Aaron’s Coconut
— Duane’s PoeTree, April 8, 2020.

Absolutely Smooth Mustard

Adnate to the Funicle
— Otoliths, Issue 59.

Aging as a Spiritual Practice

Alive
— Orbis, #184, Summer 2018.

All Soft Feathers and Flight Muscles

All the Worlds There Are

Almost Spring
— Verse-Virtual, March 2024.

America the seeing-eye dog

Anomie

Antifragility

Anyone who wants to fight me all the time

The Art of Appreciating Snow
— Calliope, Fall 2021, Issue 173.

At a Party

At Basketball

Atman. Atman.

Bad Movie
— Winamop, February 2024.

Belonging to the Loved Ones

Blackbrush

blueberries
Blue Grama Grass

Born Again

Brodmann Area 4

Brother Death

Building Fence

The Burning of the Jews

By the Seat of the Soul’s Pants
–Unlost, April 2016.

Cameron Diaz

The Canopy and Economy

Can poetry matter
–Westward Quarterly, Fall 2021.

Certain Days
–Winamop, February 2024.

Chainsaw Certified

Chinese Sonnets

Cities in Flight

City of Hope

Colonoscopy
–Euphemism, Spring 2022.

Come What May

Contingency

Cosmo’s Moon

Covid Cashier

Crows, bluejays and pigeons
–The Stray Branch, Fall/Winter 2021.

Dad’s Bark
–The Birds We Piled Loosely, April 2016.

The Dark Green Conifers
Defiance
—Pennsylvania Literary Journal, Fall 2020.

Dendrology
—Canary, Fall 2017.

Derivatives With Limits

Desafinado

A Designer of Systems
—The Voices Project, May 12, 2021.

Earth
—Spindrift, 2021.
—The Poet, January 2023.

Eastern Tent Caterpillars

East Harlem to the Grand Tetons

Ectopic Heart
—cc&d, October 2020.

Election Day
—Modern Literature, September 24, 2022.

The End of Faith

Enduring Spinning: Agriculture, Culture and War
—Unlikely Stories, February 2024.

Enemies
—cc&d, June 2017.

Engineers

Exponential Decay Function

Eye of the tropical January sun
—Unlikely Stories, February 2024.

Family of Weasels
—Albatross, #28.

For Spring No Hesitation Is Great

Geese in Winter

Get the Most Out of Life of Pi
—Soul-Lit, Summer 2017.

God is correction, feedback and bifurcation

Good at Marketing

A Good Day to Die

Got Sleep?
Grand Canyon

A Gun in Every Home
—Synchronized Chaos, March 2021.

Home Schooling
—Modern Literature, September 24, 2022.

Homework

How cool!
—Raven Chronicles, June 2017.

I can clean. I can drive.
—Softblow, December 2018.

Immigration
—Voices de la Luna, August 2019.

In a Day

Injury
—The Ghazal Page, August 2016.

Insignificance

In the Singularity

I prefer to sleep and dream
—TreeHouse Arts, August 2, 2017.

Jack’s Commitments

Jack’s Time Out
—Red Fez, Issue 141.

Jet, cracked paint, tea

A Job in the Garden of Eden

Jones’ Nose
—Spillwords, October 9, 2023.

Late Summer
—Survivor’s Review, Vol. XVI.

Lazy, Happy
—Poem of the Moment, December 2018.
—Ginosko, #28 Spring 2022.

Let’s Work the Problem
—Voices de la Luna, May 2021.

Life is not a curse

Life Out of Balance

The Listener
—Poetry East, Fall 1984.
—The Drabble, January 7, 2022.

Lonely Bagel

Long As You’re Living
—Beechwood Review, Fall 2017.
Long Story Short

Man’s Machines
– Mad Swirl, August 27, 2020

Man’s Mood

Marines Call to Say Hello

Material Life

Max Joy Marries Minnie Pain

Meditation

Middle School Math Teacher

Miniature Juniper

Mirrors

Mission STS-51-L
– Apocalypse Confidential, April 8, 2024.

Much Like Living

Negotiation
– Miller’s Pond, Fall 2020.

Netflix, Hulu

New Mind
– Winamop, February 2024.

Nicky’s Road Kill
– cc&d, April 2022.

Night

Night Drive Home

No cows to look at

Not enough heat

Not like a figwort

Numerous Blue Notes

Occupied
– The Lake, July 2020.

Of Judith and Inanna
– Taj Mahal Review, Vol. 21 No. 1, June 2021.

Okay Love

On Suffering
–Ink Pantry, August 20, 2022.

On the Avenue.
–Ink Pantry, August 20, 2022.

The Ordinary Care of Providence
–Unlikely Stories, February 2024.

Organization man

Passion Is Its Own Predicament

Peace Out

Peaches
–Academy of the Heart and Mind, June 27, 2021.

Penetrating the Unknown
–Academy of the Heart and Mind, June 27, 2021.

Perfect Rest

The Perfect Year
–Calliope, Fall 2020, Issue 169.

Peter has gotten a new job

Plate Tectonics Versus Gamma Ray Bursters

Polar Bear Mugs Wino

Problems

Providence

Purpose Incomprehensible and Wonderful as These Purposes
–Otoliths, Issue 68.
–Aphelion, April 2024.

Quiet
–Euphemism, Spring 2022.

Rain
–Academy of the Heart and Mind, June 27, 2021.

The Recent and Long Dead
–War, Literature & the Arts, 2021.

Rereading

Return from Desert
Reverse Gestation

Rhodora in Winter

Ricardo’s Lunch

Samsara
—San Antonio Review, November 1, 2023.

The Scariest Stanza in All of Poetry

Searching for Symbols in a Town Without a River
—The Bond Street Review, Summer 2017.

Seaweed
—cc&d, April 2022.

The Self
—Last Stanza, Issue #10.

Shade

The Shape of Jazz to Come
—The Seattle Star, August 26, 2023.

The Shootist
—Verse-Virtual, March 2016.
—Synchronized Chaos, March 2021.

Silence of Winter
—Winamop, February 2024.

The snail will get to Easter just as soon
—Brief Wilderness, November 22, 2021.

Snake Creek

Snow . . .

Something

Soot
—Red Fez, Issue 141.

South Bronx

Start Knowing Joy
—Mad Swirl, October 18, 2022.

Stop & Shop Strike

Sub-atomic particles
—Bewildering Stories, Issue 841.

The Summer Noosphere
Sunset
–Beakful/Becquee, October 23, 2017.

TED Talk
–Ex Ex Lit, June 27, 2020.

The Terminator

from That Was Random
–bear creek haiku, #175.

This looks like jump to me

This Summer, As Ever

To Fail Well
–The Stray Branch, Fall/Winter 2021.

To Go On
–Duane’s PoeTree, April 8, 2020.
–Winamop, February 2024.

To Have Loved Mary

Tweets

Two Hawks Aloft
–Commuter Lit, February 6, 2018.

Two White Wines

Ulzana’s Raid

Uncertainty

Under Mummy Mountain
–Canary, Summer 2019.

Under-sky sleeping, bone keeping

Until the fight is done
–The Transnational, Vol. 5.

Upside Down the Ancient Bole
–Orbis, #184 Summer 2018.

Watching Homer Struggle

Wetland Song

What Have I Seen?
–Spillwords, April 27, 2024.

When Peg Laughs Like Liz
–Ginosko, #28 Spring 2022.

White Waits

Who should I thank?
–Ancient Paths, December 7, 2019.
Wings of Desire

Words for Birds

Working to Abandon Immortality

The Writer Working Hard

Year Million
– Ginosko, #28 Spring 2022.

A Yellow Rose
– failed haiku, Issue 53.

Yogurt and Honey
Responses to New & Selected Poems

"An original voice." – W.S. Merwin

"Ronnow puts some meaning back into the term 'experimental'. . . a poet who is both idiosyncratic and based in the best elements of a literary tradition." – Lewis Turco

"Often experimental, political, sexual, emotional, but most of all surprising . . . a man and poet whose personal convictions and writing passion are not mutually exclusive." – Alice Osborn in Pedestal Magazine

"Ronnow’s work finds 'salvation in the details'. . . New & Selected Poems deepens and grows more interestingly rich as it progresses, and one is left with the feeling that Ronnow’s development as both a poet and a man is ongoing. May this be said of all of us." – Christy Corp-Minamiji for Blogcritics

"Very rich reading." – Naomi Shihab Nye

"Wild and restless." – Sandra Alcosser

"Alive and moving." – Lanie Shanzya Rebancos

"I have read its pages taking pleasure in their breadth of knowledge and their singing both." – Jane Hirshfield

"Has what Frank O'Hara called 'a dry eye' with all its attendant wit, speed and brain drive." – Roger Mitchell

"It sits at my place at table and I dip into it regularly." – Tom Disch

"I admire this book very much." – David Ray

"An impressive book . . . especially the long final section, which opens up in a lot of interesting ways." – Charles North

"There are so many poems here I 'recognize' and value for one virtue or another: honesty, simplicity of statement that coexists with complexity of intent, and a clear commitment to speak to the reader." – Rhina P. Espaillat

"I've been enjoying the insights, the lyricism, the wry humor. My kind of book." – Seido Ray Ronci

"I have read through the volume with enjoyment, admiration, and occasional bouts of envy." – Fred Chappell

"What an accomplishment. It's a life in poetry. How do people process their lives without art?" – Molly Peacock

"Refreshingly candid and readable. Amen." – Bruce Hunter